FOREWORD

While the war was in progress, work upon all public improvements throughout the country was to a greater or less degree suspended; but, with the cessation of hostilities, problems of reconstruction and of local development require consideration. The status of all public works throughout the land, and what should be done upon them, have now become matters of especial interest to the communities particularly affected, not only because of the inherent importance they may possess but because of the aid they furnish in absorbing labor in the industry of peace.

In the case of the public improvement which is the subject of this report there is a special reason why the project should hold particular interest at this time, because nearly all the land in the Bronx River Parkway Reservation has been acquired and largely paid for. The chief problem at hand is how rapidly the work of development should progress. To afford opportunity to those most interested to become more familiar with this important public work, the reasons for its creation, its cost and present benefit, and what remains to be done to bring it to the full enjoyment of the people, is the fundamental purpose of this report, divided into four parts as follows:

- I. The menace to the City of New York of the polluted Bronx River — The necessity for the Bronx River Parkway — Creation of the Bronx Parkway Commission.
- II. Acquisition of the land — Its cost and present benefit — Future plans.
- III. Curtailment occasioned by the war — Record of work for the year 1918.
- IV. Resumption of development work imperative — Conclusion.

I. THE MENACE TO THE CITY OF NEW YORK OF THE POLLUTED BRONX RIVER—THE NECESSITY FOR THE BRONX RIVER PARKWAY—CREATION OF THE BRONX PARKWAY COMMISSION

Twenty years and more ago, the rapid spread of the City of New York to the north, in what is now the Borough of The Bronx, and the increasing population of the Westchester communities of Mount Vernon, Bronxville, Tuckahoe, Crestwood, Scarsdale, Hartsdale, White Plains, North White Plains, and Valhalla, lying in the Bronx River valley, as well as the inevitable consequences of unchecked pollution to the Bronx River by these populous and politically independent centers along its banks, gradually transformed what was once a small river of pure water into a foul stream. Too polluted to sustain aquatic life, it became a menace to the health of the community, obstructed as it was at many places by ever-growing masses of debris and rubbish. Periodically floods backed the foul waters upon the adjacent lowlands; or, sometimes by their force swept the unwholesome obstructions down the stream and, subsiding, deposited them some distance from the normal river channel or floated the whole foul mass into the beautiful lakes which constitute one of the greatest charms of Bronx Park.

While this increasing menace to health was the immediate, pressing, and unavoidable occasion for legislative action to eliminate the nuisance and danger of the filth-choked stream, the City of New York had another vital need for such reclamation of the valley of the Bronx River as would provide a permanent outlet for its fast-growing motor traffic, from the cramped and growing metropolis to the open country to the north. This need was second in importance only to the necessity for the abatement of the river pollution. The city had not only established parks in the Borough of The Bronx, through which the Bronx River flows, but also owned, in the Counties of Westchester and Putnam, at a cost of many millions, an extensive watershed reservation comprising many thousands of acres of lakes, streams and beautiful, wooded lands. The great Kensico dam, some twelve miles north of the city limits, marks the southern boundary of this public domain, but there was no direct avenue for traffic between the city and this magnificent property, lying midway between the Hudson River and the Sound. It was apparent that an unobstructed avenue for motor traffic from the parks established in The Bronx, through to the open country to the north, would be of incalculable value to the metropolis.

As the population of the metropolitan area increased, additional factories and settlements sprang up in the Bronx River valley, adding unceasingly to the difficulties of the situation by increasing the river pollution year by year and making the reclamation more costly. Various so-called solutions were proposed, one of which was to build a huge aqueduct, through which the waters of the river might be conveyed, but this was dismissed as not the best remedy, for the expense to meet flood conditions would have been stupendous, and while the menace of the polluted river would have been removed, so far as Westchester County and that part of the City north of Bronx Park were concerned, the scheme would have afforded no benefit, other than that brought about by the abatement of the nuisance. On the other hand it would have required the abandonment of the lakes in Bronx Park, by the diversion of the River to Long Island Sound north of the Park, or would have left the problem unsolved so far as Bronx Park was concerned.

Finally, the best and the only real answer to the problem was brought forward, namely: That the river channel, and sufficient adjacent area to provide for a parkway, should be taken over for perpetual public use. There was one serious difficulty in the way: the Bronx River flows through the County of Westchester and the City of New York, and although the City was the chief sufferer by its pollution, and had the larger interest at stake, the County was also affected. After investigation in 1906 by a commission appointed by the Legislature for that purpose, Chapter 594 of the Laws of 1907 was enacted, providing that the land within a designated reservation be acquired; the pollution of the Bronx River stopped; a parkway created and the cost of the entire project borne — three-fourths by the City of New York and one-fourth by the County of Westchester.

The Act further provided that no obligations under its provisions should be incurred until the City, through its Board of Estimate and Apportionment, approved the acquisition of the lands described in the Act. This approval was given in 1912, but in such form that further legislation was necessary. Thereafter the City's final approval in 1913 marked the time when the Bronx Parkway Commission, the agency created to carry the improvement through, was able to proceed.

II. ACQUISITION OF THE LAND — ITS COST AND PRESENT BENEFIT — FUTURE PLANS

In 1913 the Commission commenced the work of actual acquisition of the lands. The first step was to receive title to substantial areas which a number of public-spirited citizens were willing to donate. Besides these donations, the Commission had secured a number of options to purchase, at favorable prices, and these options were then taken up.

Realizing the heavy expense inevitably and necessarily incident to condemnation proceedings, no effort was spared to purchase all the lands in the Reservation. Careful studies were made, and to determine fair prices, supplemented by the best expert appraisals which could be obtained. The land owners were sought out and every encouragement to open negotiations afforded. The owners' claims as to the value of their lands and improvements were closely examined, and wherever occasion demanded, one or more reappraisals were made.

Though the Commission possesses the power to name purchase prices, no contract of purchase was finally closed until both the City and County were given an opportunity to approve or disapprove.

The efforts to purchase rather than condemn were zealously pursued until, by the end of 1915, 700 separate parcels — nearly two-thirds of the entire area — were donated or purchased at a cost of about $4,000,000. The owners of the remainder, excepting lands owned by the New York Central Railroad Company and the few instances where exceptional circumstances, such as complication of title or other obstacles to purchase, existed, finally refused to sell except at prices which, after protracted negotiation, the Commission believed unwarranted.

At the close of 1915, the Commission instituted its first condemnation proceeding and, at the date of this report, has acquired title to substantially all of the area in the Reservation it is empowered, under the law, to take, excepting the above mentioned lands owned by the New York Central Railroad and affiliated companies and a few parcels where difficulties in title or other obstacles prevent immediate acquisition.

Full data respecting the condemnation proceedings, their number, duration and cost, will be found in the report of the Commission's counsel following. In this report full detail of the cost of each proceeding is fully outlined, which gives in tabulated form the territory covered in each proceeding, the number of parcels included, the names of the different persons appointed by the Supreme Court as commissioners of appraisal, also the number of hours each commissioner of appraisal took in meetings to view the property, to take testimony and for deliberation to reach conclusions. The tables also give the amount of compensation allowed by the court, at the uniform rate of $5 per hour, for each commissioner of appraisal.

The awards made by the commissioners of appraisal, confirmed by the court, were in most instances higher than the prices paid by the Commission for areas corresponding, but have not upon the whole been excessive. To this, however, there are exceptions, but as, upon some of the parcels, appeals are pending in the courts, specific reference to them cannot freely be made.

The expenses of the condemnation proceedings are very large indeed when they are contrasted with the expenses of acquisition at private sale, but this is inevitable under the general condemnation law. In this connection the Commission gladly takes occasion to call attention to the very unusual record made by the Hon. Cyrus C. Miller and Richard W. Lawrence, of The Bronx, and the Hon. Lee Parsons Davis, of Westchester County, and by the Hon. Frederick P. Close, of White Plains, who was appointed in some of the proceedings in the Bronx section in the stead of Mr. Davis. These gentlemen constituted the condemnation commission for the Bronx section of the Reservation, but, notwithstanding the fact that in no other section of the Parkway were more complex and difficult questions presented, they proceeded with their duties with such skill, expedition and dispatch that, while giving well-balanced and perfectly fair awards, they not only kept their own fees to a minimum but also saved, for the public, large sums of money which would otherwise have been expended upon expert witnesses, stenographic records and interest upon the awards.

The total cost of the project to date has been $5,917,248.13, of which $5,054,856.36 represents the cost of acquisition of land, and $862,391.77 the amount thus far expended for administration, improvement, operation, and preliminary development. In general it may be stated that the cost would have been far less if the work had been authorized some years earlier and before factories and other structures had been erected on the Reservation.

And what benefit, it may be asked, is the public at present deriving from this expenditure in view of the fact that the Parkway Drive, which will be a vital asset, has not yet been built, except for a short stretch above Bronx Park. The answer is this: The menace of the polluted river has gone for all time; not only have many tons of debris been removed from the river bed, the channel cleared, shacks and other buildings swept from the river banks, and provision against floods made, but the continued pollution of the River has been practically stopped, and with proper supervision, will not be renewed. There were, in all, some 160 separate cases of pollution, or more than ten to the mile. Practically the last notable source of defilement, namely, the "sanitary" sewer discharging into the River at East 235th Street, was last year diverted, through an inverted siphon, under the River and connecting with an existing sewer in Bullard Avenue.

To realize the full value of what has been accomplished in the elimination of contamination from the Bronx River, it is only necessary to compare its present condition with that of other streams, such as the Passaic River, which has recently engaged the attention of the United States Supreme Court, through a suit brought by the State of New York to restrain the Passaic Valley Sewerage Commission from carrying out plans for diverting raw sewage from the river and discharging it through a sewer into New York Harbor. The proceedings adduced abundant testimony to show that pollution of the Passaic River by waste from breweries, tanneries, and other factories, as well as by organic filth from various sewers, had destroyed real estate values along the river valley.

In a report of the proceeding in the Bulletin of the Merchants' Association of New York for Monday, October 14, 1918, is this significant passage:

"Commissioner Childs, of the Passaic Valley Sewerage Commission, testified that the Passaic River was an open sewer; that the stench arising from the river destroyed property values and made real estate almost unsaleable; that conditions were so offensive during the summer months that many factory employees had to abandon the locality and that others were made seriously ill; that the waters of the Passaic River were black with pollution."

Exactly similar conditions had developed in the Bronx River Valley on a smaller scale a few years ago and prior to the inception of the Bronx River Parkway project, but the problem has been successfully and happily met by the creation of the Parkway Reservation.

Only constant vigilance and the most careful inspection can prevent the recurrence of the old conditions of pollution along the River. Several sources from which it was thought the possibility of defilement had been finally safeguarded caused trouble during the last year. Now that bathing and other water sports are enjoyed by many thousands of people during each season, it is more than ever important that this work should be continued. The River was cleaned of debris between Bronx Park and White Plains, and many cartloads of refuse which had found its way into the River, in spite of the posted warnings and constant policing of the Reservation, were transported away from the river banks and buried under clean filling material.

Thus the sanitary purpose of the project has been achieved and the intolerable condition existing before the acquisition of the Reservation is more and more becoming a thing of the past and a matter of memory.

The next generation will not realize what the old conditions were, and happily will not know the loss and misery which would have been caused by their continuance, and will not have to pay a gigantic cost which would have been the price of necessary relief had these conditions been allowed to continue.

The title to nearly all the land the Commission is empowered to take, has been acquired. All the land bought at private sale has been paid for. The awards upon the large majority of parcels taken in condemnation have been determined and the money has been appropriated for their payment. Out of a total of 1,315 parcels of land in the Reservation (excluding street parcels), there are 19 scattered parcels, other than land belonging to the New York Central Railroad Company, as to which condemnation proceedings have not as yet been taken because of some unusual condition applying to each one of them, such for example as title complication or other obstacles. These parcels number, however, less than two per cent of the total, and it is expected that the difficulties which have served to retard their acquisition can be overcome within the coming year — certainly as to most of them and possibly as to all.

The parcels of land lying within the Reservation owned by the New York Central Railroad Company, and affiliated companies, 101 in number, and embracing about 80 acres in area, have occasioned protracted study and negotiation which, at this time, promise successful termination.

With title to the Reservation practically complete and the end of river pollution assured for all time, the first steps toward the final accomplishment of the project, namely, that the lands should be made — to use the words of the statute — “available for use as a public park,” have already been taken.

The work upon the Reservation thus far has been largely reclamation and the restoration of natural conditions. The river obstructions have been removed and the marginal lands cleared of refuse and debris, so that, were it not for a photographic record, the old conditions could not well be recalled or described even by those familiar with them, and could be but vaguely understood by those who had never seen them. Some of the photographs printed in this report tell far better than words, how scenes of blight and desolation have been transformed into wholesome places where the wonderful growth of nature will operate to reproduce in a few years the beauty of woodland and meadow, guarding a clear running stream.

It should be borne in mind that the natural beauty of the Bronx River valley was not destroyed throughout the entire length of the Reservation. There were many stretches in Westchester County where the land or river channel, winding through old erosion bottoms, had not been spoiled by factories and settlements. In these stretches, the natural plant and tree life have been preserved by scientific forestation at trifling cost.

The natural charm of the finished Parkway will, of course, always be its chief asset from an aesthetic point of view, but this very asset can only be put to its full benefit and purpose with the completion of the Parkway Drive, which will not only make all the Parkway accessible, but also perform its intended function of furnishing the needed outlet for motor traffic from the crowded city into the open country to the north.

General development plans covering the whole of the Reservation have been prepared and are shown on the five maps published with this report. On these maps may be traced the location of the Parkway Drive from Bronx Park to Valhalla, the various intersecting footpaths, the river with its lakes and pools, and the woodland areas. The River is shown in its new and improved channel, which involves changes and diversions, a number of which have already been completed. The five sheets of development plans give, in fact, a comprehensive idea of what the Reservation will look like when completed. The realization of these plans, which have already been partly carried out, will put New York City and Westchester County in possession of one of the finest parkways in the world.

The Parkway follows the Bronx River Valley, and the governing principle in planning the landscape development has been to restore the natural beauties of the valley, which course is at once more desirable and economical than any attempt at formal treatment. The primary feature of the whole project is the Bronx River, which has now been restored to its natural condition. While contributing to landscape effect, the lakes and pools are also designed for the recreational benefits afforded by bathing and water sports.

III. CURTAILMENT OCCASIONED BY THE WAR — RECORD OF WORK FOR THE YEAR 1918

During the year 1918, the Commission's policy in construction and development work was governed by war conditions, and clerical, engineering and laboring forces were reduced to a skeleton organization. The labor force was reduced from 270 in May, 1917, to 40 in October, 1918, and the engineering, landscape construction, and office force from 37 to 16. Many of the Commission's employees entered either the civilian or military branches of the federal government. While the Commission was able to suspend its work upon practically all new construction or development, it was obliged, nevertheless, to conserve the vast property held in trust for the public and complete certain work then under way, in order to prevent deterioration and loss. Notwithstanding the serious disruption of its engineering and field forces, the Commission is glad to report that it was able to maintain its program of conservation at minimum expenditure.

The war made suspension of condemnation proceedings neither necessary nor advisable, because delaying the proceedings would not have conserved resources, but, on the contrary, would have greatly increased interest and expense charges against the City and County.

These things were recognized by the Capital Issues Committee appointed by the President, under act of Congress, to "conserve and use the financial resources, material and labor of the country for the prosecution of the war," which committee passed favorably upon appropriations made during the year for Commission purposes by the City of New York or the County of Westchester.

PAVED DRIVEWAY, PATH AND DRIVE

Details of the work of improvement and operation will be found in subsequent pages in the report of the Commission's engineer.

IMPROVEMENT OF THE PARKWAY RESERVATION

The general policy for improvement work inaugurated two years ago has been adhered to in the limited amount of construction work undertaken in 1918. This policy embraces the use of both the contract and force-account methods. The adoption of this composite method was decided upon only after the most thorough investigation and inquiry among the principal park executives in all parts of the United States. These inquiries confirmed the Commission in its opinion that the basic work of river regulation, grading, top soiling, planting and landscape improvement can be more efficiently and satisfactorily accomplished by labor forces operating under the direction of its engineers and landscape experts. On the other hand, construction work such as bridges, sewers, pavements and buildings, which require expensive equipment and specialized skilled labor can best be done by contract.

The experience in construction work during 1917 and 1918 have amply justified the adoption of this policy.

BRONX PARK TO GUN HILL ROAD

Improvement work in this section had been practically completed prior to the end of 1917, except for a small area adjacent to Gun Hill Road where the proposed improvements in Bronx Boulevard and the work of improving Gun Hill Road, now under way, made completion of the work inadvisable. The improvement work previously accomplished has taken on the more settled appearance that only time can give landscape development work.

During the year, a substantial guard rail of appropriate design was built on the westerly side of the paved driveway adjacent to the River. Two stretches of pathway for which Telford foundations had previously been laid were completed. Materials for bituminous surfacing as originally contemplated were not available on account of war conditions, and broken stone and screenings were therefore used. These paths lead from Bronx Boulevard and Duncomb Street to the new foot-bridge south of Gun Hill Road, constructed during the summer.

Planting work was completed for nearly the whole area, and the present condition of this section of the Reservation may be taken as an example of what can be accomplished in the way of improvement in other sections when the necessary funds are provided.

GUN HILL ROAD TO WOODLAWN

On December 21, 1917, the Board of Estimate and Apportionment approved a plan prepared by the Commission, after extended negotiations with the authorities of the Borough of The Bronx, under which the westerly portion of Bronx Boulevard will be utilized for the Parkway Drive. Under this plan the City will only bear the expense of improving the easterly 43 feet, instead of the full 100-foot width of the Boulevard.

Construction and improvement work in this section of the Reservation is dependent upon the grading of the easterly portion of the Boulevard, as the proposed Parkway Drive will be on a generally lower level and adjacent to the slope formed by grading the easterly portion of the Boulevard. Under contract let by the Bronx Borough authorities their part of the work was nearly completed at the end of 1918.

The Commission is desirous of immediately completing work in this section of the Reservation, where practically no construction work has yet been accomplished, and it is hoped that the work of improving the river channel and grading the drive and other areas can be undertaken in the near future. The immediate improvement of this section is deemed to be especially important in view of the fact that it had been practically denuded of trees, and no new planting can be done until the grading is completed. The region adjacent to this section is susceptible of high-class building development, and such development would be greatly accelerated by the improvement of the Parkway Reservation.

WOODLAWN TO WAKEFIELD STATION

Considerable work in grading, and deepening and widening the Bronx River had been done by the Commission in this section prior to 1918. Work of leveling spoil banks and distributing material in low areas and in grading slopes was resumed as soon as the weather permitted in the spring and continued during the season, principally by means of the Commission's dragline excavator and a small gang of laborers and teams. This work was necessary to prevent erosion and conserve the river improvement work accomplished by last year's operations. Practically all river dredging and grading work has now been completed from East 233d Street to the Wakefield car barns. What was formerly a swampy, mosquito-infested area has been transformed by combined river dredging and filling operations, grading and planting, into an attractive parkway, and is now in condition for public use and recreation. Advantage was taken of the fall planting season, and screen planting between the River and the railroad embankment was practically completed, as well as the planting of areas west of the River. The whole section of the Reservation has undergone a parklike transformation at a very moderate cost.

IMPROVED RIVER CHANNEL, GRADING AND PLANTING New York City

A small pool has been provided south of the car barns, which was utilized for bathing during the past summer. The Commission's development plans call for a lake of considerable area in this section, the material from which will be used to the north, where a large quantity of filling material is needed.

WAKEFIELD STATION TO WHITE PLAINS

In the section of Reservation between Wakefield and White Plains no new construction was undertaken, but a small force carried out some river channel improvement work at Tuckahoe and in Garth Woods at Scarsdale, and graded the Parkway Drive adjacent to the two small Fox Meadow bridges located between Scarsdale and Hartsdale, completed during the year.

Some large trees at Tuckahoe were endangered by erosion of the River banks along a serpentine bend in the River. For their protection, the banks were lined by conveniently found boulders, achieving a pleasing landscape effect that adds to the attractiveness of the River in that locality. Similar work was done to protect some of the splendid hemlocks in Garth Woods south of Scarsdale.

The driveway grading makes a passable roadway over the new Fox Meadow bridges, which are described elsewhere in this report. With the bridging of the Fox Meadow brooks, the preliminary grading of a splendid stretch of Parkway Drive from Crane Road, in Scarsdale, to the southerly line of White Plains, a distance of about $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles, is completed and ready for surfacing or pavement. Only a limited amount of further development work will be required in this section, as the trees and other natural features had been preserved before acquisition of the lands by the Commission, and are admirably suited for parkway purposes in their present state. The areas along the Parkway Drive north of Scarsdale were planted with young trees from the Commission's nurseries, where such planting had not previously been done.

WHITE PLAINS TO VALHALLA

In the area previously improved immediately south of Main Street, in White Plains, some additional planting was done. The relocation, widening and deepening of the river channel north of Main Street, was completed in August, and the excavated material between Main Street and Hamilton Avenue bridge was graded off between the River and the easterly side of Central Avenue. Some grading has also been done immediately north of Main Street on the easterly side of the River.

The lowering of the River underneath Main Street bridge required the construction of a concrete retaining wall along the easterly abutment of the bridge to prevent possible erosion of material under the abutment. This work was done on open market order by the contractor for the river diversion.

At Valhalla the contract for Telford foundation in the new road between Kensico and Columbus Avenues was completed early in the year, and surfaced with a temporary pavement of gravel. It had been the intention to provide a tarvia macadam surface during 1918, but governmental restrictions on the use of materials prevented this. It is expected that this surfacing can be done during 1919.

A guard rail along a portion of the southeasterly side of the new road was constructed and some necessary changes made in the drainage inlets of the new road.

Foot-bridge South of Gun Hill Road

An artistic masonry foot-bridge spanning the Bronx River about 300 feet south of Gun Hill Road was completed during the construction season of 1918, and opened to traffic.

Foot-paths east of the river and leading to the bridge have been completed and the shorter route thus afforded between the Williams-bridge railroad station and the district east of the Bronx River and south of Gun Hill Road is already popular with the residents of that section.

This foot-bridge, of reinforced-concrete construction with stone facing, is of very substantial design and conforms admirably to its surroundings. Although some restrictions in design were imposed by the fact that it carries a sewer, satisfactory architectural treatment, suggested by Carrere & Hastings, architects, was secured.

The sewer provides a connection between sanitary sewers in Webster Avenue and in Duncomb Street. It formerly crossed the Bronx River at Gun Hill Road on a trestle a few feet above the river level. As this would have formed an unsightly obstruction across the new masonry arched bridge of the Gun Hill Road improvement, an agreement was entered into with the Bronx Borough authorities in 1917 which provided for the construction of a new 12-inch pipe sewer southward from Gun Hill Road in Bronx Boulevard and across the Reservation to connect with the sewer in Duncomb Street. The portion of the new sewer in Bronx Boulevard to a point about 310 feet south of Gun Hill Road was built by the Bronx Borough authorities. From this point eastward across the Reservation the sewer was built by the Commission as a part of the foot-bridge contract.

Gun Hill Road

Work was started early in the spring on the Gun Hill Road improvement, under the supervision of the Bronx Borough authorities. This improvement, carrying Gun Hill Road across the Parkway Reservation at a high level to avoid interference with the traffic along the Parkway Drive, is being carried out in accordance with architectural plans furnished by this Commission and prepared by Stoughton & Stoughton, architects.

The southerly portion of the roadway, involving a rugged, granite-faced, arched bridge over the Bronx River and high approach walls, has been practically completed. Construction is now advanced sufficiently to reveal the adaptation of the architectural treatment to its surroundings and the imposing structures which have been secured, amply justify the pains taken by the Commission and its architects.

East 238th Street and 241st Street Viaducts

Hearings on the proposed viaduct to eliminate a grade crossing, by carrying East 241st Street across the New York Central, and New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad tracks, which involves also the crossing of the Bronx River and Parkway Reservation, developed considerable opposition as to location on the part of taxpayers and residents of the sections to be served by this improvement, who insisted that the proper location for a crossing is at East 238th Street.

The Public Service Commission for the First District, however, issued an order for the construction of a viaduct at East 241st Street and at a later date issued an order requiring the construction of a viaduct at East 238th Street. The latter order has been the subject of litigation and has been sustained by the Court of Appeals, but no further progress has been made toward the actual building of either viaduct.

A steel structure of a type that would mar the beauty of the Parkway was originally proposed for East 241st Street, but to harmonize with Parkway development an arched type of viaduct should be adopted. The Commission has prepared tentative plans for a reinforced concrete structure at East 241st Street, illustrative of the type of viaduct for which it would be willing to grant an easement across the Parkway Reservation. It is hoped that when a bridge is built at either location, the Commission will have the co-operation of the Railroad Companies, the local authorities, and the Public Service Commission in the adoption of plans for an architecturally suitable structure.

Broad Street Viaduct

The Broad Street viaduct, as originally planned, consisted of a steel structure of objectionable design from a parkway standpoint, which was finally abandoned after extended negotiations, through the efforts of the Commission to secure a structure which would harmonize with its surroundings. The design adopted is of reinforced concrete arches with the piers suitably spaced to accommodate the Parkway Drive and the relocation of the Bronx River. The design was furnished by Guy Vroman, consulting engineer, and final architectural treatment was suggested by Hoppin & Koen, architects.

The viaduct is being built under an agreement, the parties to which are the cities of Mount Vernon and Yonkers, the New York Central Railroad Company, and the Bronx Parkway Commission. The State of New York also pays a portion of the cost under the grade-crossing elimination provisions of the Railroad Law.

The contract for the construction of the viaduct was awarded to the lowest bidder, the Crownbar Construction Co., Inc., early in 1917. The contractor took up the work of construction vigorously during the season of 1917 and to May 31, 1918, when the bridge was about 75 per cent completed. On the latter date he refused to proceed further, alleging a default on the part of the other parties to the contract, and no work has been done since that date. It is hoped that the bridge will be completed during 1919.

Fox Meadow Bridges

To carry the Parkway Drive over the two brooks flowing out of Fox Meadow to the Bronx River, two small bridges were necessary. These brooks flow through the Butler Woods, Scarsdale, one of the most picturesque sections of the Reservation.

Considerable study was given to determine a suitable type of structure, and the firm of Carrere & Hastings was engaged to provide designs for architectural treatment. Similar designs were adopted for both bridges and involve a thin-crowned arch surmounted by natural-finished, wooden guard-rails. Quarry-faced native stone is used for facing the arches and wing walls, giving a rugged appearance that fits the rough surroundings of woodland and rocky cliffs.

A contract for the construction of the bridges was let in 1917 and they were practically completed at the end of 1918.

Woodland Place Viaduct

Under an agreement made in June, 1917, Woodland Place viaduct will be constructed by the New York Central Railroad Company, the City of White Plains, and the Bronx Parkway Commission. The State of New York will also share in its cost under the grade-crossing elimination provisions of the Railroad Law. This agreement has been confirmed by the Public Service Commission for the Second District in an order requiring the construction of the viaduct in accordance with plans prepared by the Commission.

The original plans called for the construction of a steel structure at Tibbetts Avenue grade crossing, which would have been entirely out of harmony with the Parkway development. As it will be necessary for the Commission to carry its driveway across the valley on a viaduct in the vicinity, in any case, it was proposed to build only one viaduct instead of two, and that the Commission should bear a portion of the expense if its design for the structure were adopted. The design proposed by the Commission was submitted by Guy Vroman, consulting engineer, associated with Palmer & Hornbostel, architects. The design consists of one 145-foot arch of reinforced-concrete.

During the year 1918 the necessary lands for the easterly approach outside the Parkway Reservation were acquired by the city of White Plains, and it is expected that the construction of the viaduct can be undertaken in the near future.

BRONX PIPE LINE

Negotiations for the utilization by the Commission, of the Bronx River pipe line where it lies adjacent to the Reservation were continued, and maps and descriptions of the portions to be acquired were prepared. This matter has nearly reached a point where action can be taken by the proper authorities. The purpose of these negotiations is to consolidate the pipe line embankment with adjacent parkway lands for development in conjunction with the Reservation. A more economical location for the Parkway Drive can thus be secured in some localities and other improvements effected in areas owned by the City which might otherwise prove to be a positive detriment to the proper development of the Reservation.

RECREATIONAL ACTIVITIES

The policy of cleaning up lands as soon as they were acquired, in order to make them available for public use, was followed during the past year. Athletic fields, tennis courts, children's playgrounds, bathing pools and other recreational activities previously established, were continued, and some new ones established. Bathing in the River continued to be the most popular of these activities. New pools were established at Wakefield, Bronxville, Harney Road, and Scarsdale. Portable bathhouses of temporary construction were provided and assistant parkkeepers continued to supervise the bathing pools and keep order there. During 1918, about 69,000 bathers and 58,000 visitors enjoyed the use of these pools. The Commission plans to establish additional pools in 1919.

Skating was enjoyed in many localities along the River, notably on the large ponds located at Bronxville and Scarsdale, as well as on slack water stretches of river in other localities.

BIRD AND ANIMAL LIFE

There is a strongly growing movement all over the country toward the conservation of wild life. State and national forests and game preserves are now large factors in preventing the extinction of native birds and animals, the value of which, for economic as well as sentimental reasons, is becoming more fully recognized.

A more recent, but steadily growing movement is the establishment of bird refuges — wooded areas in which birds are allowed to thrive unmolested. The Bronx River Parkway Reservation will in time become an ideal bird refuge. In the middle and upper portions the birds are increasing in varieties and numbers; even in city sections south of Mount Vernon, where tree growth is now sparse, more birds are appearing. The value of birds to the farmer and market gardeners and for the preservation of city shade trees is well understood. Aside from such material considerations, small native animals and birds are elements of our national individuality, a part of an inheritance which we are bound to preserve for the generations to come.

Interest in bird life was stimulated in public schools along the Reservation by a bird-house building competition participated in by the pupils, for cash prizes donated by a friend of the Commission. Over 400 boys and girls built bird houses, which were placed in trees on the Reservation. The prizes were awarded to pupils in 25 schools located in the Borough of The Bronx and intervening towns to Valhalla.

Intimately related to wild life conservation is the Boy Scout movement, to which the Commission has also given support. A small frame building on the Reservation, near Crestwood, and a log cabin at White Plains have been made available for scouts' use.

IV. RESUMPTION OF DEVELOPMENT WORK IMPERATIVE — CONCLUSION

With the war over, and practically all the lands in the Reservation acquired and partially improved, it is evident that the development and construction work upon the Parkway should at once proceed with as much speed as is consistent with the financial conditions of the City of New York and the County of Westchester. To postpone the completion of the Parkway means a direct loss to the City and County because the controlling item of expense is attached to the acquisition of land. The amount required for improvement purposes is relatively small. Delay in final improvements means withholding from the public the full benefit of the project. And furthermore, would mean a loss by deterioration of much of the work already accomplished.

The Commission has carefully considered plans for Parkway improvement which, it is hoped, can be pushed to completion with all reasonable speed, and while the immediate development of the entire Reservation is by no means necessary, a program insuring its completion in not less than six years, nor more than ten years, is advocated, as the construction cost distributed over either of these periods would be light in any one year.

A foremost thought kept constantly in mind by the Commission has been the necessity for the continuous exercise of a wide economy in all the operations which the undertaking involves, so that demands upon the taxpayers would never rise above a real minimum.

The Commission has endeavored to work in harmony with the City and County authorities in all its operations and to carry out the provisions of the statute creating it with due regard to the demands of other projects upon the resources of the City of New York and the County of Westchester.

The results accomplished in this undertaking could not have been brought about had the Commission and its members been satisfied to exercise a mere supervisory administration over the project. It was not content to do this, but at frequent office and field meetings has passed upon the facts and details of all matters involving either policy or expenditure. In addition to this, the individual Commissioners, in matters of administration, have given freely of their time, technical knowledge, and experience to the complex problems which have constantly arisen.

This maintenance of economy has required thought and vigilance and, although the countless ways in which the Commission has avoided unnecessary expenditures cannot be detailed, allusion may properly be made to some of the more important economies where the methods employed have effected a large saving.

In acquiring lands, the Commission has kept in close touch with the progress made and questions arising in all the condemnation proceedings. The payment of large sums to special counsel for condemnation work of this character, has been avoided. Fees of expert appraisers and expert witnesses have been kept down by arranging with each in advance of the performance of the service, the rate of compensation. Excessive awards have been opposed and, in extreme cases, appeals have been taken. The Commission has endeavored to inspire condemnation commissioners with the sentiment that they owed a duty to the public as well as to the property owner, and that their awards should be fair and reasonable; the Commission feels justified in saying that not one dollar has been wastefully spent or wilfully mis-spent.

The same careful supervision exercised by the Commission upon the cost of acquiring the land has also been given to work of improvement and operation. No work has been undertaken that was not absolutely essential. Fancy landscape gardening has been avoided and the planting limited to that helpful in restoring natural conditions. Most careful direction of the field force has been constantly maintained, and by this means and by keeping comparative tables, the Commission has been able to see that full return was made by its labor force in service for all money paid.

It is indeed gratifying to be able to record that the Commission has been fortunate in securing unusually competent subordinate officers, engineers, and clerical employees, who have proved devoted to their work and the public interest. The salaries paid have been low, and no one has been employed or permitted to remain upon the payroll unless there was full need of his or her services. Special mention should here be made of the loyal and efficient services rendered by those in the Commission's employ during the past year, because the reduction of forces, occasioned by the war, entailed in many instances extra work and arduous duties which have been performed efficiently and cheerfully under difficult circumstances.

CONCLUSION

In closing, the Commission desires to record its appreciation of the support it has received from the authorities of the City of New York and the County of Westchester, as well as from the public and the press.

Respectfully submitted,

WINTER SCENE ON BRONX RIVER

Westchester County

REPORT OF ACTING ENGINEER

December 31, 1918.

BRONX PARKWAY COMMISSION;
280 Madison Avenue,
New York City.

GENTLEMEN.— In accordance with your instructions, and in addition to the information contained in the foregoing pages, I report in greater detail on engineering and construction work of the Commission, including a statement of progress on contracts under way, and work done by the Commission's labor forces during the year ending December 31, 1918.

The comprehensive construction program prepared in 1917 was very much modified and reduced on account of war conditions, and practically all work looking to the further development of the Reservation, such as completing the proposed driveway, the widening and deepening of the Bronx River and the draining and grading of adjacent lands was suspended for the duration of the war. The Commission's dragline excavator was kept in operation between Woodlawn and Mount Vernon, together with a labor force consisting of one foreman, six to eight laborers, and two teams, principally for the grading of material excavated during 1917, much of which would have been washed back into the river if not disposed of.

During the year 1918, the dragline excavated or rehandled 44,657 cubic yards of material at an average cost of 17.1 cents per cubic yard, including allowance for depreciation on machine. The small Bucyrus dredge, used in widening and deepening the river in wooded sections, was not operated during the year 1918, and the machine was laid up near Palmer Avenue, in the Village of Bronxville.

The remainder of the Commission's labor force, which was reduced from 270 in 1917 to 40 during the latter part of 1918, was used on miscellaneous improvement work throughout the Reservation, and also in caring for the Commission's plant, equipment, and buildings. The improvement work consisted mainly of the preservation of the thousands of beautiful trees in the Reservation; the clearing of areas to be used by the public; the policing of the ten bathing pools maintained by the Commission along the Bronx River; eliminating sources of pollution; protecting the river banks where the River was under-cutting in such a manner as to endanger trees, and on many other miscellaneous items of improvement work which constantly require such a force.

The engineering staff of the Commission was reduced from nineteen at the end of 1917 to six actually on duty during the latter part of 1918. This reduction was brought about principally by enlistment or draft for military or naval service, and by the entrance of various employees into government employ on war work in civilian capacities. The force which remained on duty was scarcely large enough to care for the many details of work to be done, and this great reduction naturally increased the amount of work and responsibility apportioned to the various employees on duty. A most commendable spirit in assuming the extra work was evidenced by the force which remained.

Two new contracts, to which the Commission was committed prior to the entry of the United States into the war, were let during the year: Contract No. 18, sewer connections and masonry foot-bridge south of Gun Hill Road; and Contract No. 28, for the excavation of about 12,000 cubic yards of material to be removed from Bronx Boulevard south of Gun Hill Road. A canvass of bids received on Contract 18 will be found in the tables accompanying this report.

There were five other contracts under way at the beginning of the year, and a statement of the progress made on the new contracts and contracts under way at the beginning of the year follows:

CONTRACT No. 18: Sewer connections and masonry foot-bridge south of Gun Hill Road. Garafano & Benedetto, Inc., Mount Vernon, N. Y., contractors.

These sewer connections and the foot-bridge were made necessary on account of the Gun Hill Road improvement, and in order to eliminate a very unsightly condition which would have resulted had the sewer been carried through the arch of the Gun Hill Road bridge over the Bronx River, as was originally intended. In accordance with your instructions, the sewer was carried across the Reservation from a point in Bronx Boulevard, about 310 feet south of Gun Hill Road, and built into a foot-bridge spanning the river. The foot-bridge would have been necessary, and had been planned for this locality in any case. The contract was advertised on April 9, 1918; bids were opened on April 29, 1918, and the contract was awarded to Garafano & Benedetto, Inc., of Mount Vernon, the lowest bidder. Work was begun about May 15, 1918, and completed about October 15, 1918.

CONTRACT No. 28: Excavation in Bronx Boulevard south of Gun Hill Road. Oscar Daniels Company, Woolworth Building, New York City, contractors.

The plans jointly adopted by the Commission and the Bronx Borough authorities, which provide for carrying Bronx Boulevard and the Parkway Drive underneath Gun Hill Road, instead of crossing it at grade, as had been formerly planned, necessitated the excavation of about 12,000 cubic yards of material from Bronx Boulevard, south of Gun Hill Road. In its agreement with the City of New York the Commission assumed the obligation of excavating this filling material, and as the Bronx Borough's contractor for the Gun Hill Road improvement needed the material for grading in Gun Hill Road, and offered to excavate it at the very low price of 15 cents per cubic yard, the contract was awarded to him. At the end of the year this contract was about 90 per cent complete.

CONTRACT No. 14: Construction of Broad Street viaduct, of six reinforced-concrete arched spans, across the Reservation between Mount Vernon and Yonkers. Crownbar Construction Company, Inc., 120 Broadway, New York City, contractors.

The cost of this viaduct is borne by the Cities of Mount Vernon and Yonkers the New York Central Railroad Company, the State of New York, and the Bronx Parkway Commission. At the beginning of the year the viaduct was, about 60 per cent completed. At the opening of the construction season the contractor resumed work and continued till May 31, 1918, when the viaduct was about 75 per cent completed. On that date construction work was discontinued for the alleged reason that the parties of the first part to the contract had defaulted in not making payments in accordance with the contract requirements. It seems probable that the matter will be the subject of litigation before the viaduct can be completed.

CONTRACT No. 23-A: Sewer connections in the City of White Plains. Union Paving Company, 120 Broadway, New York City, contractors.

The work included in this contract required a 10-inch connection, about 218 feet long, between an 8-inch line located in Main Street and the Bronx Valley sewer; also a 24-inch connection, about 37 feet long, between a 24-inch outlet sewer crossing the Reservation south of Chatterton Avenue, and the Bronx Valley sewer, together with the necessary manholes and appurtenances. These changes were necessary in order that the Bronx River could be lowered sufficiently to drain the swamp lands to the north of Main Street. The City of White Plains agreed to bear the expense of lowering about 380 feet of 24-inch cast iron pipe sewer if the Commission would bear the expense of making the connections. This contract was nearly completed at the end of 1917 and was entirely completed on April 5, 1918.

CONTRACT No. 23-B: River diversion in the city of White Plains. Fleming, O'Brien & McEntegart, Inc., 160 Broad Street, New York City, contractors.

In order to drain the swamp area north of Main Street, White Plains, it was necessary for the Commission to deepen and widen the Bronx River; and as the Commission had not sufficient excavating machinery to undertake this work with its own forces, a contract for the excavation of about 12,000 cubic yards of material was let. This work was about 80 per cent completed at the beginning of the year, and the contract was completed on August 31, 1918. The total quantity excavated was 11,947 cubic yards of earth and 605 cubic yards of rock. The deepening of the river underneath Main Street bridge disclosed the fact that the proposed bottom of the river channel would be at an elevation below the top of the piling under the easterly abutment. In order to prevent a possible flow of material from underneath the abutment, it was decided to build a concrete protective wall. This work was done by the contractors for the river diversion on an open market order, at a cost of $958.65.

CONTRACT No. 24: Construction of two stone-faced, reinforced-concrete, arched bridges carrying the Parkway Drive over the Fox Meadow Brooks, between Scarsdale and Hartsdale. Russell R. Ames, Inc., Rochester, N. Y., contractor.

Work on these bridges was started rather late in 1917, and severe winter weather arrived when abutment excavations had been partially completed. Work was resumed at the opening of the construction season in 1918, but the original contractor met with financial difficulties and assigned the contract to W. F. Martens, of Rochester, N. Y., who carried the work to practical completion before the end of 1918. Approach grading to these bridges was done by the Commission's forces before the end of the year, and a passable driveway is now available between Crane Road, in Scarsdale, and Woodland Place, in the City of White Plains, a distance of about $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles.

BEFORE — LOOKING SOUTH FROM WHITE PLAINS RAILROAD STATION — 1915

AFTER — LOOKING SOUTH FROM WHITE PLAINS RAILROAD STATION, 1917

This work was nearly completed at the end of 1917, and as soon as weather conditions permitted the contractors resumed work and completed the contract on May 15, 1918. It was originally intended to surface this road with tarvia macadam, but on account of war conditions, it was found impossible to obtain tarvia, and the work of placing surfacing has been postponed until 1919. A temporary gravel surface was placed on the road, which answers present purposes very well.

Engineering Work for the Year 1918

The design, preparation of contracts, specifications and contract drawings, the supervision and inspection of construction work on the foregoing contracts and the engineering work and supervision in connection with construction work under way by the Commission's dragline excavator and labor forces comprised the principal items of engineering work for the period covered by this report.

Condemnation proceedings were in active progress throughout the year, and engineering information and data for use of the law department in these proceedings were prepared. Members of the engineering force also testified on engineering matters in connection with a number of parcels under condemnation. The topographical surveys for the entire Reservation were completed and only a small area remains to be mapped.

Title to nearly all the lands in the Bronx River Parkway Reservation, which the Commission has authority to acquire, had vested in the Commission prior to the beginning of the period covered by this report.

The Commission had already given much consideration to a general plan of development and had adopted landscape plans based upon the topographical survey made by the Commission's engineers, except for the area north of White Plains, for which the topographical maps were not yet complete. During the year 1918 landscape plans for this area have also been adopted, and copies of development plans covering the entire Reservation are published with this report.

The consulting landscape architect and forester, Mr. Hermann W. Merkel, has continued to render valuable services in the work of landscape design and forestry. Mr. Merkel has made frequent visits to the points where landscape work was in progress, and portions of the labor force have been placed under his direction from time to time in connection with forestry and planting work.

Resumption of Construction Work

For the period of nearly a year construction work in connection with the development of the Reservation has been practically suspended. Now that the war is ended and the country seems to be facing a period of unemployment, due to the release of soldiers, sailors, and others employed on government work in a civilian capacity, the resumption of development work on the Reservation appears to me to be clearly indicated. Members of the Commission's engineering and construction forces, who have been absent on military or naval service or in government employ in other capacities, are gradually returning to the Commission, and unless construction work is actively resumed, it will not be possible to keep the entire force on the Commission's payroll, for the reason that there will be no work for them to do.

I would very strongly recommend that a construction program for the next few years be adopted by the Commission, so that the work of preparing designs, contracts and other construction data can proceed in an orderly manner, and that funds for carrying out this program be obtained from the City and County authorities. Employment could be given to a considerable number of laborers and teams throughout the reconstruction period, with a resulting decrease in unemployment in the vicinity of the Reservation. I would, therefore, recommend that a program be laid out which will provide for the completion of development work in not less than six years nor more than ten. Appropriations for development work distributed over either of these comparatively long periods would not bear heavily on the City and County in any given year, and with the general development plan covering the whole of the Reservation, which you have adopted, as a basis the details of construction could be gradually worked out and construction work carried to completion.

The financial and accounting operations of the Commission were principally related to engineering, contracts, and the operations of the Commission's labor forces on improvement work. Under the reorganization of the Commission's forces made in July, 1918, such accounting and the preparation of estimates of funds required from the City and County were supervised by the engineering department.

The financial operations of the Commission are shown by the schedules appended to this report. There is also submitted a roster of the Commission's employees.

Respectfully submitted,

L. G. HOLLERAN,
Acting Engineer.

WOODLAND VISTA ON BRONX RIVER

Westchester County

REPORT OF CONSULTING LANDSCAPE ARCHITECT AND FORESTER

December 31, 1918.

BRONX PARKWAY COMMISSION,
280 Madison Avenue,
New York City.

GENTLEMEN.— On account of the unusual conditions arising out of the war and the general policy of restricting all public work unessential to the pursuit of the war, the progress of planning and construction during 1918 was slowed up to a very great extent, and even such necessary work as the care of forest trees, pruning, etc., almost ceased on account of shortage of men.

General Plan

The general plan for the entire Reservation is now finished, and a resumé of the principles of design that have been taken as guides may not be out of place.

Since one of the principal tasks of your Commission is the protection and restoration of the Bronx River and the valley through which it runs, as far as it is contained in the Reservation, to its former natural beauty as far as possible, and to provide a parked driveway to connect New York City with the city-owned watershed and water-storage lands in Westchester County, it follows:

1. That the leading motive must be the Bronx River, and any treatment losing sight of this motive must be objectionable.
2. That any but a naturalistic form of design and planting would be inadvisable.
3. That all objects foreign to or distracting from this naturalness of the valley must be hidden by natural objects where possible.
4. That the roadway should be planned so as conveniently to accommodate the large amount of traffic expected, and to display to the traveler the principal interesting features of the valley without spoiling it.

All of these principles are interlocking to a certain extent, and to violate one of them unnecessarily would really violate the very purpose of your Commission, and for this reason they have been adhered to closely.

The River

The River in its present location shows that it has been diverted from its original course in a great many places. Some of these diversions are due to the silting up of old channels and the cutting through of new ones during high water; and these may be called natural diversions, though sometimes due to unnatural causes. These natural diversions are for the most part old enough to have grown a fringe of trees along their border, and having followed natural depressions of the ground, are sufficiently attractive to be allowed to remain unchanged.

In other and by far the greater number of places the diversions were caused by grading operations, primarily those connected with the building of the New York and Harlem Railroad. Where this is the case we usually find the river bed greatly narrowed and running in a straight line directly adjacent to the railroad bank and often within the right-of-way, presenting an unpleasant canal-like appearance, too obviously man-made and impossible of proper setting and treatment.

In these places it has been necessary to alter the course of the river bed to a location that is sufficiently within the boundaries of the Reservation to allow a softening of the railroad bank and the shore lines, and a screen planting, partially at least, to hide the rail line, poles, towers, billboards, and other unpleasant objects from within the Reservation.

In making these diversions, it has often been advisable to widen the River into pools, ponds, or even lakes of some size, to emphasize the water motive, to provide recreational features (bathing, boating, and skating), as well as for the more practical reasons of flood control and to provide needed earth from the excavations.

Additional channel space has often been provided as a help in caring for the flood water, as undoubtedly this will increase with the grading and paving of additional streets within the watershed, the run-off of which is, of course, much faster than that from more or less absorbent natural surfaces.

Planting

A study of the growth now found in Bronx River valley and the vicinity discloses a flora rich with most of the North American trees, shrubs, and herbaceous plants, as indeed might be expected in lands where all situations, from swamp and rich bottom lands to dry rocky slopes are found. Of trees, we find at this time mostly hardwoods, such as oak, elm, maple, linden, sycamore, tulip, ash, etc. There can be no question that this condition is brought about by lumbering operations carried on up to about 50 years ago.

Previous to that time the hemlock, and, to a lesser degree, the white pine were the most prominent trees in the valley, the former in the lowlands and the latter on the dry slopes. Hemlock is still present on the Reservation wherever it has had a degree of protection, as, for instance, in Fox Meadow between Scarsdale and Hartsdale, and in the Garth Woods south of Scarsdale. Here also we find many of the plants that are usually its natural associates, such as mountain laurel, azaleas, viburnums, partridge vine, wintergreen, goodyear, etc.

To restore former conditions would, however, be hardly practical nor desirable, any more than to reforest the open meadows and swales probably created originally for agricultural purposes. Neither would it be desirable to try to recreate a wilderness such as may have existed before the advent of the white man, beautiful though it might be, for it would not be useful as a public park, any more than would the planting of poison ivy, because it was present before your employees removed it, and is indigenous to the region.

In planning the planting, therefore, as in the rest of the design, a humanized naturalness has been aimed at, sufficiently diversified to create woodland groups and vistas of all of the types that belong; broad enough that he who runs (or rides) may see; with intimate bits for those who wish to pause; with material prevailing indigenous, but always suitable to the situation and its requirements.

BEFORE — SOUTH OF MAIN STREET, WHITE PLAINS, 1916

At White Plains, for instance, the steep rocky bluff bounding the Reservation on the west has been planted to red cedars, dogwood, black haw, and thorns; but on the southern edge of the plot, in the smooth ground along Battle Avenue, I have not refrained from planting a border of some of the more graceful flowering shrubs, nor, at this point, hesitated from guarding the drive from the walk by Japanese barberry, as these particular plants are most useful here, in keeping with the surroundings, and, being in the border and not in the body of the plot, they will not endanger the integrity of the whole.

Of other material, I have used American arborvitae, for instance, to hide an ugly coal trestle, where there was not room for the broader and more exacting hemlock, even though the arborvitae may never have been growing in Bronx valley.

The Driveway

The driveway was described at length in my last report, as far as it had then been planned in detail. Since then the design for the last portion, that from White Plains north to Valhalla, has been finished, but with the exception of a further long division of single road into two drives for northward and southward traffic, respectively, no changes from the preliminary study were made.

Its width of 40 feet was maintained to the end of the Reservation, and no excessive grades were necessary. Dangerously sharp curves have been avoided, and within the restrictions placed upon it at certain points by the narrow boundaries of the Reservation, it will be a convenient and very attractive outlet from the City toward the north and a splendid connection for the city-owned lands beginning at its terminus.

Walks and Paths

The walks and paths follow the winding course of the river on one side or the other for the entire length of the Reservation; reach every point of interest and outlook; give easy means of access to numerous entrances, railroad stations, etc., and as planned should take care of all traffic that may be expected for many years to come.

Recreational Features

Recreational features other than those already mentioned in connection with the River have been provided in playgrounds and fields, tennis courts, and baseball diamonds, though those requiring apparatus have been located in places where they will not interfere with the general view.

Care of Existing Forest

Early in the year hemlock trees in the Garth Woods, not then under control of your Commission, were found to be infested with the hemlock borer. This very dangerous insect, the larvae of which infest the living tissue of the hemlocks and kill them by girdling the trees with their galleries, needed prompt attention. I therefore communicated with the State Department of Agriculture, and Dr. George G. Atwood, in charge, immediately sent Dr. H. C. Sands, forest pathologist of the department, to examine the trees and to serve notice on the owners, under provisions of the tree pest law. All the infested trees that could be discovered were then removed and the menace eliminated through this prompt and energetic action of the Department.

DEDICATION OF BOY SCOUT CABIN LOCATED ON RESERVATION AT WHITE PLAINS

The further treatment of these woods was the subject of a detailed report by me to your Commission, and with your approval this work is now being carried out under the direction of your forester, Mr. Albert N. Robson, who also directed the large planting operation carried out on sheets 1, 4, and 5, on sheet 18, and some temporary planting in other places.

Advice and instructions were given by me in this and the tree protection work, and the grading and other operations received attention when needed.

Resumption of Construction Work

There can be no need to disguise the fact that the many handicaps to public undertakings of this kind caused by the war have hindered the progress of both the protective and creative work of your Commission greatly, but with the removal of these handicaps and the need of employment of labor, there should be now a resumption of the entire program on a larger scale than ever before. In view of this it appears especially desirable that the improvement of the section between Gun Hill Road and 233d Street be now commenced. According to present progress, the improvement on Gun Hill Road, including the bridges across the River and Bronx Boulevard, will be finished early next year, as will also the grading of Bronx Boulevard as far as New York City's portion of this work is concerned.

As you know, this entire section has been in an unsettled and unsatisfactory state for many years, and this condition cannot be relieved by planting or other improvements until the river diversions and the grading work has been completed.

The needed fill for the Commission's portion of the Bronx Boulevard and its slopes should be available during the coming season, as all signs point to a resumption of building operations in this section.

Conclusion

Before closing, I wish to take the opportunity to thank the President and members of the Bronx Parkway Commission, who have at all times given close study and helpful directions and advice, and frankly discussed every problem of design, for the opportunity they have given me to help in this, the most important park development work in or near New York City at this time.

Respectfully submitted,
HERMANN W. MERKEL,
Consulting Landscape Architect and Forester.

REPORT OF THE COUNSEL

280 Madison Avenue, New York,

December 31, 1918.

To the President and Members of the Bronx Parkway Commission of the State of New York:

DEAR SIRS.— I have the honor to transmit to you the following as the report of the Law Department of your Commission for the year ending December 31, 1918.

The work of this department may be divided into two general classes, namely: that involved in obtaining title to the lands of the Bronx River Parkway Reservation by purchase or by condemnation, and the law work of a general nature incident to the establishment of this public improvement.

Most of your acquisitions by purchase, amounting now to about two-thirds of the Reservation, were made in 1913-1915, and my preceding reports have shown the detail of the law work of securing title by this method.

There are 1,315 parcels of land within the Reservation, excluding street lands. The present extent of acquisition of parkway lands is shown graphically by a chart which constitutes Table A of this report. This chart represents, for each of the thirty sheets of the reservation map, the proportion in area of land purchased or donated, land upon which condemnation proceedings are pending, land owned by the New York Central Railroad Company and affiliated lines under negotiation for purchase, and the proportion of unacquired land remaining, amounting to 1.3 per cent in acreage of the total.

The 1,315 separate parcels may be grouped as follows: 704 parcels have been bought by direct purchase and paid for; 17 have been donated; 111, owned by the New York Central Railroad Company and affiliated lines, are the subject of negotiation for purchase; 436 parcels have so far been the subject of condemnation (see Table B), and 28 parcels are owned by the City of New York, the County of Westchester and Westchester municipalities, and may not have to be condemned. The balance of 19 parcels remains to be acquired, and these 19 parcels are identified in Table C.

Relatively few parcels were purchased after 1915, and but one parcel was purchased last year. At this date the 704 parcels bought and paid for represent a cost of $4,194,658.17, including the expenses incident to their purchase—that is, title examination, title insurance, recording fees, rent, salary charges, and all incidentals, amounting in all to $65,589.96, or 1.588 per cent of the purchase price.

The contrast between the relative cost of acquisition by purchase and acquisition by condemnation is shown in Table D, and further comment on this contrast will later be made.

Progress Made in Condemnation Proceedings

To give a clear account of the progress made in 1918 in the condemnation proceedings, which either were pending a year ago, or which have since been instituted, it is helpful to briefly review the situation as it stood in 1915, when your efforts to purchase at private sale were exhausted as to many of the parcels, and when, therefore, arrangements to condemn were considered. There were some 455 parcels as the subject of condemnation — 68 in Bronx County and 387 in Westchester County, and located on the map by sections as follows:

In Section 1 (the Borough of Bronx).....	68 parcels
In Section 2 (Wakefield to South Bronxville).....	65 parcels
In Section 3 (Bronxville north to Crestwood).....	60 parcels
In Section 4 (Crestwood to Scarsdale).....	66 parcels
In Section 5 (Scarsdale to and including White Plains).....	89 parcels
In Section 6 (North White Plains to Valhalla).....	106 parcels
Adjoining Section 6 at Valhalla.....	1 parcel
Total.....	455 parcels

An attempt to include all these parcels in two proceedings — one for Bronx County and one for Westchester County — would have ended in disaster, because of the onerous provisions of the General Condemnation Law.

Let me here explain that there are three general methods of condemnation in use in the State: (1) By petition under the General Condemnation Law, followed by a trial before commissioners of appraisal upon the value of the parcel; (2) By the publication of a notice, followed by trial on value before commissioners of appraisal; (3) By the publication of a notice followed by trial on value before the court. The statute creating your Commission (chapter 594 of the Laws of 1907) limits your proceedings to the first method, i. e., the method prescribed by the General Condemnation Law which, of the three, entails process the most cumbersome, tedious, and expensive where more than a few parcels are involved. The second method is simpler, particularly where there are a large number of parcels, but the third method, by far the fairest, the most expeditious and the least expensive of all — where commissioners of appraisal are not appointed, but where the trial on value is taken before the court direct — is as yet confined to proceedings taken by the City of New York under its charter; but, as I have explained, neither this nor the second method, under the statute creating your Commission, may be used for your work.

The General Condemnation Law, under which your proceedings must be instituted, is an antiquated statute requiring a petition containing the names and addresses of each individual owner, lienor, or person having an interest of record upon each parcel to be included, to be prepared, verified, and personally served before a given date upon each owner, lienor, etc., and, in the case of non-residents, requiring a cumbersome and tedious process of service by advertisement. These requirements made necessary not only a complete preliminary examination of the title to each parcel before it could be included in the petition, but also re-examination at the time of filing the petition, to ascertain if any changes in the title had taken place.

If the attempt had been made to condemn all the Westchester parcels in one proceeding, many months would have been needed to serve the petition upon all the persons who, at any one time, were found to have an interest in any one of the parcels, and, before this could be done, deaths and other circumstances causing changes in title would have occurred to bring the proceeding to no avail as to many of the parcels, and a separate proceeding would have had to have been instituted anew. Furthermore, even had it been possible to bring a single proceeding for each county, without fatal irregularity, another objection to such plan would have then developed because two single condemnation commissions, each consisting of three commissioners of appraisal, appointed by the court, would have taken many years to have heard the testimony and reached their conclusions, and increased very greatly the interest cost. The other extreme would have been to have brought a separate proceeding upon each separate parcel of land, which would have been as bad on account of the ensuing multiplication of steps to be taken.

A course midway between these two extremes was the one you wisely directed be adopted, which was to divide the Parkway into sections, each containing substantially the same number of parcels, the number being limited to the maximum to insure expedition and certainty. It was then practicable to institute a main, separate proceeding for each of the six sections of the Reservation, and to include in each of these main proceedings all parcels in the section affected where the persons having an interest in such parcels were known and could be served with process without undue delay, and then to follow each main proceeding with further separate proceedings upon the parcels remaining uncondemned as fast as circumstances permitted. This plan, while not eliminating the archaic procedure mandatory under the General Condemnation Law, at least enabled the quickest progress to be made at lowest cost.

At the close of 1915, Proceeding No. 1, the main proceeding for Section 1 (Bronx), was instituted, covering 54 parcels and leaving 14 for later condemnation. In January, 1916, Proceeding No. 2 was instituted for Section 5 (White Plains), covering 60 of the 89 parcels in that section. In March, 1916, the third main proceeding, Proceeding No. 3, was instituted on 54 of the 60 parcels in Section 3 (Bronxville). In April, 1916, Proceeding No. 4 was instituted on 54 of the 66 parcels in Section 4 (Crestwood and Scarsdale). In July, 1916, the fifth main proceeding, Proceeding No. 5, was instituted on 44 of the 65 parcels in Section 2 (Mount Vernon). The main proceeding for Section 6 (North White Plains to Valhalla) was not instituted until the following year because conditions in this part of the Parkway did not require that it should take precedence over the rest, and the institution and vigorous prosecution of the main proceedings for the other five sections, in which trials before the condemnation commissioners in all of them were simultaneously progressing by the autumn of 1916, taxed this department to its utmost capacity.

As the main proceeding upon a given section progressed, subsequent proceedings were instituted, as rapidly as the necessary data could be obtained, upon uncondemned parcels in the same section, and, in these subsequent proceedings, the courts appointed, in practically every instance, the same persons as commissioners of appraisal who had been appointed in the main proceeding brought upon that section. The advantage of this was that each set of commissioners could not only become familiar in the main proceeding with the lay of the land generally in the section, but were able to take up for trial, without loss of time, cases in any of the proceedings pending in that section where the claimants' attorneys and witnesses were ready.

At this date 23 separate condemnation proceedings have been instituted; 6 main proceedings—one for each section—and 17 subsequent proceedings.

These 23 proceedings cover 436 parcels of the 455 parcels which probably will have to be condemned. Title has been taken to all the parcels included, excepting to the 14 parcels covered by the last proceeding, which was commenced on December 23, 1918. This proceeding (No. 8) differs from any of its predecessors in that it covers parcels in more than one section for the reason that, inasmuch as the condemnation commissions upon some have now finished their work, it would have been unnecessarily expensive to have apportioned these few parcels, which lie in four different sections, into as many proceedings with a different set of commissioners of appraisal appointed for each.

In Table E of this report will be found a complete enumeration of each of the 23 proceedings instituted, identifying by their numbers on the map the particular parcels covered; giving the names of the members of the condemnation commission appointed for each and also giving the respective dates upon which title to the parcels vested in your Commission.

A year ago but one report had been filed by commissioners of appraisal. This was in the main proceeding for Section 4, and was not confirmed by the court until March 11, 1918. In the year 1918 awards in the five main proceedings for Sections 1 to 5, inclusive, have been made and confirmed by the courts, and, in addition, awards have been confirmed in Proceedings Nos. 1-A, 1-K, 1-U, 5-A, and 7. The awards upon Proceedings Nos. 2 and 4 have been paid. There are two proceedings pending, namely: 2-B and 2-C, covering 5 parcels, where reports of the commissioners of appraisal have not yet been confirmed. There are 11 proceedings pending, namely: 1-L, 2 as to one small parcel (Sheet 24, Parcel 56); 2-A, 2-D, 2-K, 3-K, 4-K, 5-K, 5-U, 6, 6-K, and 8, where the commissioners of appraisal have not as yet made their reports.

The total cost of all the proceedings in which awards have been made and confirmed by the courts, including all expenses, and including an estimate for interest from the time title vested in the Commission to the time of the payment of the awards, is $2,365,012.93.* The detail of the figures making up this sum are all shown upon Table F of this report, of which a summary showing the distribution of cost is the following:

	Amount	Percentage
Awards.....	$1,842,693 79	77.9
Interest on awards.....	292,194 41	12.4
Amounts of expense fixed by court:
Costs and disbursements.....	14,941 47	00.6
Allowances.....	61,776 50	2.6
Fees of commissioners of appraisal.....	28,012 70	1.2
All other expenses, including title examination, appraisals, expert testimony, professional and clerical salaries, office rent, printing, stationery, telephone, carfare, and all incidental expenses....	125,394 06	5.3
	<hr/> $2,365,012 93	<hr/> 100.0

The amount of $14,941.47 for costs to property owners was made up of items fixed by statute, and these costs were automatically taxed by the clerks of the courts. There is this to be said as to the sum of $61,776.50 for allowances:

* Of this sum of $2,365,012.93, the sum of $860,198.19 is shown by the schedules of your fiscal records to have been disbursed to date.

AFTER — LOOKING NORTH FROM WHITE PLAINS RAILROAD STATION, 1918

Under the General Condemnation Law, applying to your proceedings, the courts had discretionary power to grant, in almost every instance, an allowance to the former property owners of not more than 5 per cent of their awards. Applications for these allowances were opposed by the attorneys representing you, but the courts, as to all proceedings except those in Section 1 (Bronx County), uniformly granted the full 5 per cent in every case where the right to do so was discretionary. The fees of the commissioners of appraisal, aggregating $28,012.70, were fixed by the courts at the maximum statutory rate of $5 for each full hour of attendance at meetings, and analysis of these meetings of the condemnation commissioners will be found in Table G.

Referring again to Table F, which gives the total cost, including awards in each proceeding in which the awards have been confirmed, I should mention that, as to Proceeding No. 3 (shown on Table F), I have, pursuant to your direction, taken an appeal to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court from some of the awards made in that proceeding in order to present to the higher courts the claim that these awards are excessive, are not founded upon proper evidence, and are inconsistent with the other awards made in the same proceeding. As this appeal is now pending, the precise amount which ultimately will be payable for the proceeding cannot be determined until the appeal has been decided.

The expense of acquisition by condemnation could not last year be contrasted with the expense of acquisition by direct purchase because no single proceeding had then been finished. Now, however, that awards have been made in five of the six main proceedings, it is possible to contrast the relative expenses incurred in the two methods of acquisition. This I have done in tabulated form (Table D), which shows that 704 parcels, averaging .678 of an acre per parcel, were purchased direct at total cost of $4,194,658.17, including all expenses of purchase, and that 280 parcels, averaging .334 of an acre per parcel, were acquired by condemnation for the sum of $2,365,012.93, including as expenses of condemnation the sum of $104,730.67, fixed by the court for costs and allowances to the former owners of the property and fees of the commissioners of appraisal for their service, and the sum of $125,394.06 for all other expenses — that is to say: the expense, including title examination and insurance, legal expenses, including salaries and all incidentals, of the purchase by your Commission direct from the owners of 704 parcels, averaged $93.17 per parcel, and the expense of the condemnation of 280 parcels, averaged $821.87 per parcel.

The comparison between the relatively small expense of direct purchase and the relatively large expense of condemnation is a fair one. I should, however, direct your attention to the fact that the expenses of your condemnation proceedings have to no small extent been governed by the different condemnation commissions, appointed by the courts, who have had the power to retard or to expedite the trials by refusing to grant adjournments for trivial reasons, by forcing attorneys to reasonable dispatch in presenting evidence, by excluding from the record profitless argument, repetition or vague theories built entirely upon the imagination of an expert witness. This can be better appreciated when it is understood that, without taking added overhead expenses into consideration, each unnecessary hour of a trial session means a needless expense of $15 for commissioners' fees, an average increase of $7 for stenographer's minutes, and very often an extra $25 to an expert witness for his attendance to finish his testimony at an adjourned session.

The record shows that when trials have been set down for hearing, this department has been ready to proceed in due course, and that your attorneys have been alert to object — unfortunately, not always with success — to the introduction in evidence of matter they considered incompetent and a needless increment of expense.

In Table F of this report the difference in the cost of the five main proceedings is shown, and in Table G, the sessions of commissioners of appraisal on these five main proceedings have been analyzed. In this connection the record made by the commissioners of appraisal for the parcels of land condemned in Proceeding No. 1 (Bronx section), is noteworthy.

There are, of course, items of cost under the control of this department and upon which, therefore, it has been possible to exercise economy. I refer particularly to the cost of expert testimony, printing, and payroll expense. As to the charges of expert witnesses for attendance to testify upon the trials — each expert employed receives $25 for each day's attendance. Carelessness in arranging in advance for the appearance of these experts would mean an added cost of many thousands of dollars in the course of a year. I am satisfied that the attorneys representing you have, thoroughly appreciating the importance of this, been careful to limit the attendance of experts to the occasions where their presence was necessary. The printing has, as you directed, been done by contract after competitive bidding and at rates distinctly favorable. As to the payroll expense of the department — not only has the salary scale been moderate, but the number of persons employed for the work has been kept to such a minimum that it has been possible to meet the demands of the work only by frequent service after the usual hours. I know of no employee who has not responded cheerfully when these many calls came.

There have been delays in the prosecution of some of the proceedings which were unavoidable. During the continuation of hostilities some of the opposing counsel, and even some of the commissioners of appraisal, were engaged in war work, which, of course, took precedence over everything else. Adjournments in trials had to be occasionally granted because of the engagement of the claimants' counsel for the property owners in the trial of other cases which took precedence. Upon the whole, however, considering the claims advanced by many of the property owners, often double or triple, and sometimes five or six times the amount which evidence offered in your behalf would tend to establish — the progress thus far made has been rapid.

I should have been glad to have been able to make a fair comparison between the cost of your condemnation proceedings and the cost of condemnation proceedings for other projects. Such a comparison to be worth anything must be based upon analysis of all of the facts of both proceedings to be compared, including the testimony taken in both; but the pressure of other work has not permitted the time which such a very extensive investigation would require. Without specific comparison, however, I do not hesitate to assert that the figure of expense of $821.87 per parcel, shown in Table D, will compare most favorably with the cost of condemnation under the General Condemnation Law for other projects in the metropolitan district.

The trial work before the commissioners of appraisal was conducted in your behalf, as to some of the larger parcels in Sections 3 and 4, and a few of the parcels in Section 5, by Mr. Henry R. Barrett, of White Plains, as special counsel; as to all parcels in Sections 1 and 2 and some of the parcels in Section 3, by Mr. William O. Gantz, deputy counsel; as to most of the parcels in Section 5, by Mr. John A. Kemp, deputy counsel. The parcels in Section 4 not tried by Mr. Barrett, were tried by Mr. Moses Ely before he resigned, December 31, 1917. A few parcels in Section 6 have been tried by Mr. Robert C. Durland, assistant counsel, and other parcels there are being tried by Mr. Barrett.

Before leaving the subject of condemnation, it is appropriate to note that substantial assistance has been afforded your attorneys upon many of the technical questions, arising in the course of the proceedings, by members of your engineering staff. Without this aid, more frequent resort to special employment of expert engineers would have been unavoidable and the expense would have been greater.

During the last year there has been comparatively little law work of a general nature. This is attributable to war conditions. As there was practically no work of new construction, there were, as a consequence, no contracts upon new construction work to be referred to this department for examination, and but one purchase at private sale was made. Litigation, outside of the condemnation proceedings, was almost non-existent. The one action tried was Jackman vs. Bronx Parkway Commission, which was a contractor's claim for extras under a construction contract made some years previously. The jury rendered a compromise verdict. There were, of course, documents—such as easements and the like—to be passed upon as to form, and opinions were from time to time called for and rendered upon miscellaneous subjects; but as these special matters have already appeared in my 48 reports (Reports 109 to 156, inclusive), submitted to your regular meetings and now on file, no purpose will be served by enumerating them here in detail.

In 1917 there were two positions of assistant counsel. One of these positions was eliminated at the commencement of the year, and before the close of the year one of four positions of stenographer has been eliminated. Mr. John A. Kemp resigned as deputy counsel on August 1, 1918, after having served the Commission for more than two years in that capacity, and Mr. Charles H. Peck, for many years a specialist in real estate law, was appointed.

Appended hereto are the seven tables designated by letters A to G, inclusive, to which reference has already been made in the context of this report.

Respectfully submitted,

THEODOSIUS STEVENS,

Counsel to the Commission.

PREFACE

THE CONSTITUTIONAL AND STATUTORY DUTIES AND FUNCTIONS

OF THE

STATE BOARD OF CHARITIES

The State Board of Charities was established in 1867, and became a constitutional body January 1, 1895, under the provisions of article VIII of the Constitution of the State of New York, which was adopted in 1894. This article of the Constitution provides that the State Board of Charities shall visit and inspect all institutions, whether State, county, municipal, incorporated or unincorporated, which are of a charitable, eleemosynary, correctional or reformatory character, including institutions for epileptics and idiots, and all reformatories (save those in which adult males convicted of felony shall be confined), and excepting institutions for the care and treatment of the insane.

The Constitution also provides that the members of the Board shall be appointed by the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate; that all the existing laws relating to the institutions above mentioned, and to their supervision and inspection, in so far as such laws are not inconsistent with the provisions of the Constitution, shall remain in force, and that the Legislature may confer upon the Board any additional powers. It further provides that while payments by counties, cities, towns and villages to charitable, eleemosynary, correctional or reformatory institutions, wholly or partly under private control, for care, support and maintenance, may be authorized, they shall not be required by the Legislature, nor shall such payments be made for any such inmate of such institutions who is not received and retained therein pursuant to rules established by the State Board of Charities.

The Commissioners comprising the Board are twelve in number, and are appointed for the term of eight years, one from each of the nine judicial districts of the State, and three additional members from the city of New York. They are required to reside in the districts or city from which they are respectively appointed, and no Commissioner can act as such while a trustee, director or other administrative officer of any institution subject to the visitation and inspection of the State Board of Charities.

Each Commissioner is paid actual expenses necessarily incurred while engaged in the performance of the duties of his office, and receives, as compensation, $10 for each day's attendance at meetings of the Board, or of any of its committees, not exceeding in any one year the sum of $500.

The Board is required to report to the Legislature annually. Its seal is the arms of the State surrounded by the inscription, "State of New York — the State Board of Charities," and its chief officers are a president and vice-president, elected annually from its members.

The State Charities Law, constituting chapter 55 of the Consolidated Laws, provides in part that:

"The state board of charities shall visit, inspect and maintain a general supervision of all institutions, societies or associations which are of a charitable, eleemosynary, correctional or reformatory character, whether state or municipal, incorporated or not incorporated, which are made subject to its supervision by the constitution or by law; and shall,

"1. Aid in securing the just, humane and economic administration of all institutions subject to its supervision.

"2. Advise the officers of such institutions in the performance of their official duties.

"11. Collect statistical information in respect to the property, receipts and expenditures of all institutions, societies and associations subject to its supervision, and the number and condition of the inmates thereof, and of the poor receiving public relief."

In addition to the foregoing the Board is invested with power to transfer inmates from one State charitable institution to another; to approve or disapprove proposed certificates of incorporation of charitable institutions or organizations, and has the supervision of the placing out of dependent children. It is empowered to issue licenses to dispensaries, homes for the care of aged, decrepit and feeble-minded persons who are not proper subjects for care and treatment in a hospital for the insane, and for cause may revoke such licenses. Besides discharging these duties it exercises such other functions as are devolved upon it by law.

REPORT

To the Honorable, the Legislature of the State of New York:

In conformity with the requirements of chapters 55 and 42 of the Consolidated Laws, known as the State Charities Law and the Poor Law, respectively, the State Board of Charities herewith submits its fifty-second annual report to your honorable body.

During the year the following changes have taken place in the membership of the Board:

Dr. Stephen Smith resigned as one of the Commissioners of the Board on February 6, 1918, after a continuous service of twenty-five years. On February 11, 1918, Governor Whitman appointed Dr. Lee K. Frankel, of New York city, to fill the unexpired term of Dr. Smith, ending May 28, 1921.

After a service on the Board of only five months Mr. Mortimer R. Miller, of Rochester, owing to duties of the position of United States Fuel Administrator, of Rochester, and other pressing business, resigned as Commissioner of the Board from the Seventh Judicial District on March 11, 1918. This vacancy was filled by the appointment by Governor Whitman on April 11, 1918, of Mrs. Lillie Boller Werner, of Rochester, for the unexpired term ending March 23, 1924.

Both of these appointments were confirmed by the Senate.

Mr. Benjamin Walworth Arnold, Commissioner from the Third Judicial District, and Mrs. Eleanor W. Higley, of Hudson Falls, Commissioner of the Board from the Fourth Judicial District, who were appointed during the recess of the Senate in the latter part of 1917, were reappointed by Governor Whitman and confirmed by the Senate early in 1918. Commissioner Arnold's term expires March 23, 1919, and that of Commissioner Higley on March 23, 1926.

At a special meeting of the Board held in New York city February 27, 1918, President Stewart addressed the Board briefly with relation to the resignation of Dr. Stephen Smith as a member of the Board and of his services to the State for upwards of one-third of a century. He presented the following letters for incorporation in the minutes and stated that at the next meeting of the Board he would present a minute and ask that it be made a part of the records of the Board:

NEW YORK, February 6, 1918.

To His Excellency, Hon. CHARLES S. WHITMAN, Governor:

DEAR SIR.—Herewith I resign the office of Commissioner of the State Board of Charities.

It may interest your Excellency to learn that I was first appointed to this position by Governor Cornell in 1881; and that one year later, 1882, he appointed me to the office of State Commissioner in Lunacy, a position which I held six years; that I was again appointed a Commissioner of the State Board of Charities by Governor Flower, and subsequently by Governors Black, Higgins and Sulzer. As the office of State Commissioner in Lunacy was created by the State Board of Charities, I maintained close and continued relations with that Board during the term of my incumbency of the former office.

Thus my connection with the State Board of Charities, official and semi-official, has extended over more than a third of a century. During that period there was initiated and developed by the State Board of Charities a State system of organized and supervised public charities and reformatories, which, for efficiency and economy of management, and the scientific employment of remedial measures adapted to the welfare of the dependent classes, commends that Board to the confidence and support of the people.

I esteem it a remarkable privilege that I have been permitted to associate for so long a time with the distinguished members of that Board and to take an active part in the creation and development of the great public charities and reformatories of the State. I recall with especial satisfaction that while Commissioner in Lunacy I secured the following reforms in the asylums for the insane:

1. Training schools for attendants.
2. The passage of the "State Care Act," removing the insane from the poorhouses to the asylums.
3. The passage of an act creating "The Commission in Lunacy."

Though still deeply interested in the work of the Board, I feel that at ninety-five I have reached the age limit of a Commissioner of the State Board of Charities.

Respectfully submitted,

(Signed) STEPHEN SMITH.

STATE OF NEW YORK—EXECUTIVE CHAMBER,

ALBANY, February 16, 1918.

DR. STEPHEN SMITH, Commissioner, State Board of Charities,
1000 Park Avenue, New York:

DEAR SIR.—I have your letter of resignation as a Commissioner of the State Board of Charities.

The State has received the benefits of your knowledge and experience since June 17, 1881, and it is to be regretted that it will no longer continue to do so. Though you have enumerated in your letter the activities in which you have been interested, I am well aware of the work which you have performed for the State.

I desire to extend my sincere thanks for said services, which I know are fully appreciated, not only by the many commissioners who have been associated with you in the work of the Commission, but by the people of the State, who have been brought in touch with you through the activities of the Commission.

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) CHARLES S. WHITMAN.

President Stewart, at the stated meeting of the Board held in New York city on April 10, 1918, offered the following minute, which was seconded by Commissioner Lewis, in a few well-chosen remarks, and unanimously adopted:

MINUTE

“The members of the State Board of Charities have learned with great regret of the resignation of Dr. Stephen Smith, commissioner of this Board from New York city, which was tendered to Governor Whitman on February 6th last. The long continued and valuable public services of Dr. Smith to the people of the State of New York seem not only to justify but to demand extended and unusual mention in the records of this Board, with which he has been associated for a longer period than with any other of the public bodies of which he has been a member.

“Stephen Smith was born on a farm near Skaneateles, Onondaga county, New York, February 19, 1823. He came of English descent, both his father's and his mother's ancestors having come from Oxfordshire, England, to New England in the seventeenth century. Later they removed to Onondaga county, New York. Stephen Smith's early years were spent on the farm and his education was that common to country boys of that time. He attended a rural village school and later on a high school at Homer in Cortland county.

“Having determined to adopt medicine as his profession, he began his studies while at the high school and in 1848 attended lectures at the Geneva medical college. In 1849 and 1850 he was a resident medical student in the Hospital of the Sisters of Charity, Buffalo, but he came to New York in 1850 and entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons, attaining on graduation in 1851 his degree of doctor of medicine. At this time there were only two hospitals in the city of New York, Bellevue and the New York Hospital, the latter then located at Duane street and Broadway. Dr. Smith obtained in 1851 the appointment as interne at Bellevue Hospital in a competitive examination over ten other candidates and remained for two years in that great laboratory of human diseases. He became surgical and clinical teacher there in 1854 and so continued until 1891. He was also professor of anatomy at Bellevue Hospital medical college.

"In the early '70's the governing board of Bellevue Hospital desiring to improve the nursing there, referred to a committee of three physicians, of whom Dr. Smith was one, a highly favorable report upon the training school for nurses recently established in St. Thomas Hospital, London, by Florence Nightingale. This committee, under Dr. Smith's leadership, recommended the opening of a training school for women nurses and Miss Nightingale was requested to send out an instructor. She selected for that purpose Sister Helen of a Protestant Episcopal order, who opened a school and graduated nurses so efficient that they soon succeeded those untrained. From this experiment has developed the whole system of trained nursing in the United States and from that time the nursing of the sick has steadily become of a higher order.

"The first medical paper from Dr. Smith's pen was published in 1851 in the 'New York Medical Journal,' in May of that year, on a surgical subject and immediately established his reputation as a sound thinker and clear writer which he has retained to this day. This paper was translated into several foreign languages and led to the author's election as a member of the surgical society of Paris. In 1856 he became visiting surgeon at Bellevue Hospital and in 1858 editor of the 'New Journal of Medicine and Collateral Sciences.' From 1860 to 1864 he was editor of the 'American Medical Times' and during all the years 1878-1906 he was the New York correspondent of the London 'Lancet,' regularly sending to that leading surgical paper American medical and surgical news.

"Early in the civil war Dr. Smith published, in 1862, a 'Hand Book on Surgical Operations,' which proved an invaluable guide to the operating surgeon during the war, 15,000 copies of it being sold. This book was followed in 1887 by another useful book, 'The Principles and Practice of Operating Surgery.' His important work, the 'Civil Obligations of the Surgeon' came from the press in 1908. The medical profession has always recognized in him a wise teacher with charming methods of instruction, a brilliant and original surgical operator and a great physician and untiring worker.

"In February, 1864, a committee on sanitary inquiry of the citizens' association of New York city as its first act appointed a 'Council of Hygiene' comprising 29 medical practitioners, among whom was Dr. Smith. Its investigations of the sanitary condition of the city of New York were organized and supervised by Dr. Smith, and its report published in 1865 so impressed the public by its revelations and suggestions as to bring about the enactment by the legislature on April 21, 1866, of the statute creating the metropolitan board of health, with almost autocratic powers. Governor Fenton appointed Dr. Smith a commissioner of the new board of health in 1867, in which office he continued his efforts for sanitary reform; under reappointments by Mayors Hall and Havemeyer, his full term as commissioner of health of the city of New York covered the years 1868-1875. During this period Dr. Smith advocated improved tenements, public baths, a supply of river water for cleansing purposes, cheap railroad transit and the planting and cultivation of shade trees, all of which progressive policies have since been brought about. He is now in 1918 president of the tree planting association of New York, and actively carrying on a propaganda in its behalf. Shortly after his reappointment by Mayor Havemeyer in 1872, Doctor Smith led in the organization of the American public health association, of which he was president for the first three years. He also secured the passage of a law creating a bureau of vaccination in the metropolitan board of health, which relieved New York of epidemics of smallpox, which until then had been prevalent. As the result of the operations of the law creating the metropolitan board of health, New York has become one of the most healthful cities of the world, its mortality having since been reduced from 34 to 12 per thousand.

"While still a member of the metropolitan board of health, Doctor Smith drafted a bill for a national board of health, and upon its passage in 1878 he was appointed a member of the board by President Hayes, and served upon it four years, 1879-1883. The bill creating a New York State board of health was also drafted by him, and almost single-handed he secured its passage by the legislature in 1880. The long and valuable services of Doctor Smith to the cause of public health were later recognized by President Cleveland, who selected him as one of three delegates from the United States to the Ninth International Sanitary Conference, which convened at Paris in 1894. A complete review of his work for competent supervision of the public health was given by Doctor Smith in his book 'The City That Was,' published in 1911. In this he described the shockingly insanitary conditions which prevailed in the city of New York before the creation of the metropolitan board of health.

"When in June, 1881, Governor Cornell appointed Dr. Stephen Smith commissioner of the State Board of Charities for the first judicial district, he brought again into the public service of the State a philanthropic scientist supremely well equipped by nature and training for the adequate discharge of the duties of the office. In May, 1882, however, upon the request of the governor, Doctor Smith resigned his seat on the Board to accept the important appointment of State commissioner in lunacy, which office was created at the instance of the State Board of Charities in 1873. The commissioner was a quasi ex-officio member of the State Board of Charities, and made full report of all his official acts and visitations to the said Board from time to time. During the six years of his incumbency as State Commissioner in Lunacy, which expired May 9, 1888, Doctor Smith attended the meetings of this Board and maintained close and coöperative relations with it.

"Doctor Smith began his new work with the wisdom and energy which have always distinguished him. The first training school for nurses in a State hospital for the insane was established, and on his recommendation, at the Buffalo State Hospital for the insane in 1884. He aided in the organization, and in 1886 delivered an address to the first graduating class. Such schools are now established in every State hospital for the insane. He was an early advocate of State care for the dependent insane, and in 1884, six years before the passage of the State care act, drafted a bill providing for the removal of the insane from the county poorhouses and county asylums to the State asylums, but for lack of official indorsement failed to secure its enactment. Subsequently, in 1886, he drafted a new bill of similar purport and submitted it to the State Charities Aid Association, which declined to act on it until the following year, when it was taken up in modified form by the association, and with the aid of the recently created State Commission in Lunacy, it became law in 1890, and is now known as 'The State Care Act.' Doctor Smith also drafted the original bill creating the commission referred to, which was enacted in 1889. In a little volume which came from the press in 1916, entitled 'Who Is Insane?' Doctor Smith gave a commentary of his work as State Commissioner in Lunacy, so written as to make its subject interesting to the general reader.

"Doctor Smith again took his seat as a member of the State Board of Charities for New York county on March 30, 1893, by appointment of Governor Flower. He was reappointed by Governor Black March 23, 1898; by Governor Higgins May 5, 1905; and by Governor Sulzer March 24, 1913, for a term expiring May 28, 1921. His resignation bears date February 6, 1918. The State Board elected Doctor Smith vice-president May 27, 1903, and he filled this office by successive annual reelections unanimously tendered him until April 9, 1913, when he declined to accept another term. In his attendance at Board meetings and committee meetings he was most faithful. The records show that of the last hundred meetings of the board, all of which were held since he passed the age of four-score years, he was present at ninety-six. While serving as vice-president Doctor Smith was elected president of the thirteenth New York State conference of charities and correction, which convened at Syracuse, and presided over its sessions, November 19-21, 1912.

"Under the provisions of the State constitution of 1894, the State Board of Charities became a constitutional body with greatly increased duties and powers, and was required to visit and inspect not only the public charitable institutions, but those under private management as well. This obligation necessitated the organization of a corps of inspectors to cover the enlarged field of work. In the selection of the inspectors from the civil service lists and in their training Doctor Smith was most active and useful, devoting his vast experience freely to this service. The high standards thus established, both for the inspectors personally and for the character of their work, have now become traditional on the Board's staff.

"Although other commissioners of the Board who served with Doctor Smith have been physicians of high standing, he has long and wisely guided its policies in medical matters. The provision of competent public supervision for dispensaries operating within the State so as to conserve this form of relief for the deserving poor, and at the same time to protect them from exploitation at the hand of unscrupulous practitioners, long advocated by the State medical society, took definite form in 1897. Doctor Smith aided in preparing a bill and securing its enactment into law, in 1899, placing in the hands of the State Board of Charities authority for licensing and supervising dispensaries, which has since been so exercised as to improve greatly our system of charitable medical relief for the sick poor.

"As chairman of the Board's committees on inspection, on hospitals, on dispensaries, and on construction of buildings, he presided at many meetings where important action was taken, and in connection with their work visited charitable institutions in every part of the State. His knowledge of hospital planning and construction, painstakingly applied to the consideration of plans presented for the Board's approval, has resulted in the general erection of better hospitals. One of his most recent papers presents a plan for an organized hospital system for the city of New York. The records of the board show that Doctor Smith also rendered important public service upon thirty special committees appointed from time to time for the investigation of alleged abuses or for some other purpose not covered by the standing committees. The published reports of many of these committees came from his pen.

"No one was more welcome than Doctor Smith as an official visitor to the charitable institutions. His inspections, based on a wide and general knowledge of the highest standards, were most searching, but the kindness of his manner disarmed all resentment at criticism. It was well said of him that 'His medical science was a golden key at his girdle which opened doors to all hearts in every circle of society.' All over the State of New York standards of institutional construction are higher, and the staffs of employees within them are better trained and more humane because of the quiet persevering work carried on to this end for more than two generations by Doctor Smith.

"Erect, broad-shouldered and of unimpaired intelligence at ninety-five, Doctor Smith retires from our councils to complete literary work upon which he is now engaged. We have rejoiced in his friendship and the intimate association with him in the public service, and take pride in his long and fruitful career. We venerate his dignified and mellow old age, and hope that peace and happiness may abide with him for the remainder of his days.

"Resolved, That the foregoing minute relating to the long, faithful and valuable public services to the people of the State of New York of Dr. Stephen Smith, lately resigned as a member of the State Board of Charities, be entered on the records of the Board, transmitted to the legislature with the fifty-second annual report of the Board, and that a copy be sent to Doctor Smith.

"Resolved, That in further and exceptional recognition of his services, the secretary of this Board is directed to invite Doctor Smith to attend all meetings of the Board and of the committees of which at the time of his resignation he was a member."

IN MEMORIAM

The State Board of Charities realizes the great loss to the nation in the death of Theodore Roosevelt, January 6, 1919, and has adopted the following:

MINUTETHEODORE ROOSEVELT

Thirty-fourth Governor of the State of New York and Twenty-fifth President of the United States.

The State Board of Charities in common with the whole people of the United States deplures the loss to public and private life occasioned by the death of Theodore Roosevelt, formerly President of the United States and Governor of the State of New York. The records of the Board show its appreciation of the character and services of many distinguished citizens who honored themselves by their fidelity to duty and loyal devotion to the welfare of the nation. Among them were public officials, scholars, orators, social leaders, philanthropists, and other citizens who in various fields deserved well the honors bestowed upon them by the State and their associates, but, in the minutes of appreciation of those who have passed within the veil, adopted by the State Board of Charities, not one is devoted to an individual of whom it can be said, as of Theodore Roosevelt, that he combined in one personality all the great qualities severally represented by them all.

He was soldier and statesman, orator and social leader, nature lover and philanthropist, a great citizen and courageous public official, a man sincerely religious, and a profound student of world politics, whose life was devoted to the advocacy of the ideals of American democracy.

Theodore Roosevelt in cooperation with other leaders of modern progress wholeheartedly labored to establish those fundamental principles and ideals of social justice essential to the real advancement of the world now more clearly recognized than ever before by the leaders of modern progress. He may well be called the greatest citizen of his time, an exponent of true patriotism, a leader of tireless energy and indomitable courage, with all his heart devoted to the welfare of our country.

He worked vigorously to shape the present popular conception of national responsibility for the protection of civilization and his splendid example of civic virtue and constant thought for social betterment and the upbuilding of the nation have left a permanent impression upon those who look forward to a future when the world shall be at peace and our country crowned with honor. Forceful, magnetic, with a genius for leadership, he gave to the Commonwealth and to the Nation when called to public service a concentration, energy and resourcefulness in administration which quickly won and retained the admiration and loyalty of his associates and other fellow citizens.

In truth an American "without fear and without reproach," a champion of righteousness in all things, with an "utter scorn for words that are not made good by deeds," he was a dominating personality, standing for the unselfish patriotism which is essential to true Americanism. His stirring appeal for such devotion made at Carnegie Hall on March 20, 1912, more than two years before the Great War, thrills our souls today with its patriotic fervor and high ideal of service:

"The leader for the time being, whoever he may be, is but an instrument, to be used until broken and then to be cast aside; * * * In the long fight for righteousness the watchword for all of us is, 'spend and be spent.' It is a little matter whether any one man fails or succeeds; but the cause shall not fail, for it is the cause of mankind. We, here in America, hold in our hands the hope of the world, the fate of the coming years; and shame and disgrace will be ours if in our eyes the light of high resolve is dimmed, if we trail in the dust the golden hopes of men."

Like that appeal his last message sent to the great Conference on National Defense and read in the same hall the evening before his death, urged loyalty to American ideals as the hope of the world, and upholds patriotism as necessary for social righteousness. The words of his "God speed" are a challenge to press forward with singleness of purpose:

"There can be no divided allegiance. We have room for but one flag. * * * There must be no standing back in the fight for Americanism."

Until its last beat his great heart held strongly to these conceptions of duty to his country and its relation to a suffering world, and this constancy made him a great leader who aroused the national conscience, because he had enthusiasm and a clear vision of the future glory of our country when citizenship shall mean more than kingly rank.

He was the political idol of millions, not only in America but in other lands and there is universal regret for his death. Looking back upon the years during which he was prominent in public affairs he is seen to have been tireless in the good fight of the ideal citizen and fiercely resentful of either direct or indirect assaults upon the public welfare, gladly spending himself to maintain civic standards based upon social justice and individual righteousness.

Theodore Roosevelt may be said to have been a product of good heredity and happy environment; for in him the cumulative forces of generations identified with philanthropic work were intensified into dynamic compulsion and his horizon comprehended man wherever struggling toward the light and power of a sane and happy civilization. Hence his sturdy independence in thought and action, like his prophetic vision and soldierly spirit, was an inherited characteristic which early won the confidence and loyalty of patriotic Americans of all political parties.

His father was the seventeenth member of the State Board of Charities, having been appointed by Governor Cornell in 1875 to serve as the third representative of the First Judicial District. He continued a member until his death in 1878 at which time his great son was a sophomore in Harvard University. The knowledge of his father's charitable and correctional activities directed the attention of the young man to the work of this Board, so that when in 1881 one year after graduation he was elected to the Legislature, he began a study of the administration of public affairs in cities of the State including the management of charitable institutions which so deepened and confirmed his interest in social service that when in 1898 he was elected Governor he made special visitations to institutions subject to public supervision. He aided in the reorganization of three of the State charitable institutions and by his nomination of good managers in all others as vacancies occurred and reappointment of members of this Board greatly strengthened its work and influence. This interest in charitable service did not flag after he became President for then, deeply concerned in child welfare, he urged among other things reform in the methods of care of dependent children which led to a more general adoption of the home-care plan.

His home life, with its affection, piety and simplicity made an irresistible appeal to the hearts of the American people who saw in it a lasting foundation for confidence, and therefore recognized in Theodore Roosevelt not only a statesman, teacher, scholar and typical American, but as well a dauntless moral force, actuated by an abiding trust in God, continuously at work for the welfare of humanity.

Resolved, That this Minute be spread upon the records of the the State Board of Charities and be incorporated in its Annual Report to the Legislature. Be it further Resolved: That a copy of this Minute signed by the members of the State Board of Charities and attested by the secretary with its seal be transmitted to Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt.

JOHN M. BOWERS

The State Board of Charities has on many occasions in the past been benefited by the advice and legal experience of Hon. John M. Bowers who was ever ready to devote himself to its work and it is deemed only a just recognition of his service to present here the formal Minute adopted by the Board upon the occasion of his recent death.

As the stated meeting of the Board held in New York City on April 11, 1918, President Stewart offered the following minute and resolution with relation to the death of Mr. John M. Bowers, which was seconded by Commissioner Gillespie, and unanimously adopted:

MINUTE.

The members of the State Board of Charities record with much regret the death in his sixty-ninth year, at Lakewood, New Jersey, on Thursday, March 7, 1918, of John M. Bowers of the city of New York, lately their counsel during the investigation under the provisions of the Moreland Act of the affairs and management of the Board on charges brought in 1915 by the Commissioner of Public Charities of the City of New York then in office.

Admitted to the Bar in 1868, Mr. Bowers, by his ability, industry and integrity soon gained a leading position in his profession and became the legal adviser of many important interests. On several previous occasions his advice had proved helpful to the State Board of Charities in the Legislature and in the courts, so that when the investigation was ordered in 1915, both his high standing at the Bar and his exceptional knowledge of the duties and powers of the Board led to his selection as counsel for the members of the Board.

Mr. Bowers promptly laid aside his personal interests and accepted the appointment from a strong sense of public duty. He devoted most of his time and strength for several months during the years 1915-16 to the investigation, and untiringly conducted the vigorous and prolonged defense of the Board and of the private charities of New York City, against the management of which sweeping charges had been made and proved conclusively that the charges against both the Board and the institutions were without substantial foundation.

The members of the State Board of Charities recognize that to Mr. Bowers' legal ability and masterly defense they owe a debt of gratitude for the retention, unimpaired, of the constitutional and statutory powers devolved upon the Board, and for the continued confidence of the people of the State; therefore Resolved, That the foregoing minute, as an expression of the deep regret of the members of the Board at the death of John M. Bowers, be spread upon the records of the State Board of Charities, and be included in its next annual report to the Legislature, and that a copy be presented to his family.

It is fitting that recognition should be made of the passing of men and women who have devoted much of their lives and means to the betterment of humanity. Among those who have laid down their work in the field of philanthropy and unselfish service are

MOTHER TERESA VINCENT

At the special meeting of the Board held in New York City May 29, 1917, Commissioner Gillespie made the following statement to the Board:

"In the year 1869, three gentlewomen, with the approval of their Superiors, inaugurated in this city a work of charity that in a very special way has commended itself to the people of our community. The work was modest indeed in its beginnings but it has progressed steadily until to-day, as The New York Foundling Hospital, it stands the largest and most efficient institution of its kind in this country. The deserted and abandoned babe (some 66,000 in number) has been taken in and cared for at this wonderful institution. Thousands of them have been placed in selected homes where they have grown to useful manhood and womanhood. Handicap of birth brought death to many but this detracts nothing from the worth and purpose of the work. Laws and regulations have been passed to curb and control other institutions, but the peculiar needs and conditions which the New York Foundling Hospital was designed to meet and the special confidence our public officials and our citizens have always had because of the way it actually met these conditions — has left it singularly free in working out one of the most acute charitable problems of our great city. The New York Foundling Hospital is to-day one of the greatest charitable institutions of our country and one of which our city and our State may be justly proud.

"Had the founders of that institution been of the world, their names would be household ones in every charitable gathering. Their presence would have been sought after at social functions. Our appreciative people would have tried to show by act and by word how they admired and esteemed such magnificent work. But such was not possible here. These three were religious, Sisters of Charity, consecrated to God and seeing in this labor their life work. Of the three, Sister Irene, the first Superioress, whose memory should never die in this city, and Sister Ann Aloysia died many years ago. Last Tuesday night, May 23, 1917, the last of them, Mother Teresa Vincent, after fifty-seven years of service as a Sister of Charity, forty-eight years connected with the foundling asylum and twenty-one years as its Superioress passed away.

"The State Board of Charities has been in close touch always with the foundling hospital and with the work of Mother Teresa Vincent. We have observed her power, her ability, her inspiring zeal and her undying devotion and love for her work. Because thereof I think on this occasion we should make record of our appreciation and our sympathy.

"I therefore move the adoption of the following:

Resolved, That the members of the State Board of Charities of the State of New York have learned with deep sorrow of the death of Mother Teresa Vincent, a Sister of Charity, Superioress of The New York Foundling Hospital whose lifelong devotion to the care of the abandoned babe and the unfortunate mother has merited for her a high place among those who have labored in the field of charity in the State of New York and extend to the Community of the Sisters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul and to the Board of Managers of The New York Foundling Hospital their sincerest sympathy in their great loss, and be it further Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be transmitted to the Superioress of the Sisters of Charity and to the President of the Board of Managers of The New York Foundling Hospital.

The resolution was seconded by Commissioner Smith, who said:

"In seconding the resolution of Commissioner Gillespie, I am reminded of the events which led to the great work in which Sister Teresa Vincent was engaged in the last years of her life as the Superintendent of The New York Foundling Hospital.

"The New York Infant Asylum, of which I was one of the trustees, was incorporated in 1865. It was especially intended for the shelter and protection of unmarried mothers and their babies. These unfortunate girls, who had generally been victims of seduction, at that time had no other resort than the public hospitals from which they were often taken by designing persons to houses of prostitution. It was very successful in its work and is now, under the name of the New York Nursery and Child's Hospital with which it was consolidated in 1910, one of the great charities in the city.

"In 1868 Sister Irene, who was interested in the care of Catholic children was led by the success of the Protestant institution to call upon me and said that she saw I was a trustee of that institution and remarked, 'You have now a Protestant foundling asylum, why should there not be a Catholic foundling asylum?' I assented to her proposition and she inquired if I would aid her if she attempted to get a charter. To this request I assented.

"She then invited me to visit a house in Washington Square on the next day which I did. There I found Sister Irene, six babies and a nurse. That was the origin of the largest and most successful foundling institution in this country. It was incorporated on October 9, 1869, under the name of 'The Foundling Asylum of the Sisters of Charity in the City of New York.' On July 6, 1891, its corporate name was changed by an order secured from the Supreme Court, to The New York Foundling Hospital, by which title it has since been known. It now has as its record the care of upwards of 60,000 homeless, outcast infants, over 30,000 of whom it has placed in private families.

"Sister Teresa Vincent who had been long associated with Sister Irene was her natural successor as the Sister Superior in the management of that great charity, and very ably has she fulfilled the duties of that position. For many years I was a member of the medical staff and can testify to her rare executive abilities. In her death The New York Foundling Hospital has met with a loss only second to that of her great predecessor, Sister Irene."

President Stewart spoke of his visits to the institution at different times and of his high regard for the character of Sister Teresa Vincent. He was glad to bear testimony to the great value of her life work and suggested that the resolution of Commissioner Gillespie be adopted by a rising vote.

Whereupon the resolution was unanimously adopted by a rising vote.

ABRAM J. KATZ

Mr. Katz was a leading citizen of Rochester. In addition to extensive business activities he found time to devote himself to works of charity. He was president of the Jewish Orphan Asylum Association of Western New York; member of the executive board of the United Jewish Charities and of the Associated Charities of Rochester and served as president of the Fifteenth New York State Conference of Charities and Correction which was held in Utica in November, 1916. ZENAS FREEMAN WESTERVELT, LL.D.

Professor Westervelt has been engaged in the instruction of the deaf for forty-five years, forty-two of which were with the Western New York Institution for Deaf Mutes at Rochester. During his long service as superintendent he was especially happy in the relations established with his staff and the pupils; for he had their affectionate regard and was honored by them in every way. His ability as a teacher, earnestness as a man, and his unswerving devotion to the welfare of the deaf wards of the state were generally recognized.

In June, 1906, Dr. Munson, after a competitive examination, was appointed resident pathologist at the Craig Colony for Epileptics, Sonyea, N. Y. His inclinations were consistently progressive.

Upon the entrance of this country into the war in 1917, Dr. Munson decided he was called to enter military service. He was duly commissioned captain in the M. R. C., U. S. Army, entering active service in March, 1918. After a few weeks of intensive neurological training in New York City and a brief period at Camp Lee, Petersburg, Va., he was assigned to Plattsburgh Barracks, Plattsburgh, N. Y., where, in the prime of his life, while in his country's service, he succumbed to influenza on Friday, October 25, 1918. With military honors, his remains were interred October 28, 1918, in Oak Hill Cemetery, Pontiac, Michigan.

He was a member of the Medical Society of the County of Livingston, of which he was president in 1914, a member of the American Medical Association and American Medico Psychological Association. For a number of years he took a very active interest in the National Association for the Study of Epilepsy, being secretary-treasurer and editor of its transactions from 1908 to 1914, and vice-president at the time of his death. The following applications for approval of incorporations were denied for cause after thorough inquiry and investigation and a public hearing at which incorporators were afforded an opportunity to present all facts bearing upon the merits of the applications:

1. Arcadia General Hospital Society, Newark, N. Y. Application disapproved July 11, 1917, for the reason that while there appeared to be need of a hospital in the Village of Newark and the proposed incorporators were persons of high standing in the community the proposed hospital was without funds or pledges of financial support sufficient to construct and equip it and its sources of future revenue were uncertain.

* Amendments in italics.

2. The Children's Recreation Home of Nyack, Inc. Disapproved July 11, 1917 for the reason that there was no need for the proposed institution.

3. King Solomon Hospital, Inc., borough of Manhattan, New York city. Disapproved October 10, 1917 for the reason that there did not appear to be any public need for the proposed hospital.

4. The Ray of Sunshine Club, borough of Manhattan, New York city. Disapproved February 27, 1918 for the reason that the resources of the club which was primarily a social organization are not sufficient to carry on the work of a placing-out agency.

5. American Convalescent Home Association, Inc., borough of Manhattan, New York city. Disapproved February 27, 1918, for the reason that it was not shown that any public need required the incorporation of the association and that the public interest did not demand it.

6. Mechanical Treatment Clinic, Inc., borough of Manhattan, New York. Disapproved April 10, 1918, for the reason that chiropractic is not now authorized in the State of New York and that it is contrary to public policy for the State Board of Charities to recognize it in the manner proposed prior to recognition by the Legislature.

7. American Women's Hospitals, borough of Manhattan, New York city. Disapproved April 10, 1918 for the reasons that the financial resources of the proposed corporation were small in proportion to the large work proposed to be undertaken and that there did not appear to be a need for a corporation authorized by the Board to do hospital and dispensary work independent of the United States War Department or of the American Red Cross.

8. Saint Queen's Non-Sectarian Rescue Home, borough of Manhattan, New York city. Disapproved June 5, 1918 for the reason that no public need for the incorporation had been shown.

9. New York Association of White Cross Workers, Inc., Borough of Manhattan, New York City. Disapproved June 5, 1918 for the reason that no public need for the incorporation of the association had been shown.

In addition the following applications have been considered and have either been withdrawn by the proponents or have lapsed through the failure of the proposed incorporators to comply with the requirements of the Board.

PLANS FOR BUILDINGS

During the past fiscal year owing to war conditions there was comparatively little construction of buildings for charitable institutions. The following is a list of the plans passed upon by this Board.

1. Home of the City and Town of Newburgh; extension to hospital wing; plans approved as filed, July 11, 1917.

2. Albany Orphan Asylum, Albany; reception quarantine cottage to be erected as one of the group of buildings of the institution; plans approved July 11, 1917.

3. Maternity Hospital Society of Brownsville and East New York; erection of new building to be used for hospital purposes; plans approved July 11, 1917, upon condition of revision to meet recommendations of Committee.

4. Five Points House of Industry, Pomona; additional cottage for ten girls; plans approved July 11, 1917, upon condition of revision to meet recommendations of the Committee.

5. Bikur Cholim Kosher Hospital (formerly the Hebrew Ladies' Dispensary of Williamsburgh) remodeling building at southeast corner of Lafayette and Sumner avenues, Brooklyn, for hospital purposes; this building is the same as one on which report was presented on February 14, 1917, and approval of plans for extensions and alterations granted by the Board; under the new plans submitted it is proposed without any extension to alter the building and use it for hospital purposes; plans disapproved for the reason that in the opinion of the Committee the building proposed to be used for hospital purposes is unsuitable for the work as it lacks an elevator, quarters for employees, general nurses' work and utility rooms, diet kitchens on the first and second floors, and linen closets on the first floor; the effort to utilize such a large proportion of the space for wards for patients is not in accordance with modern needs of hospital work. Plans disapproved July 11, 1917.

6. Nathan Littauer Hospital Association, Gloversville; two-story addition to the Nurses' Home; plans approved as filed, August 15, 1917.

7. Putnam County Almshouse, Carmel; fire escapes to be erected at front and rear of main almshouse building; approved as filed, October 10, 1917.

8. Putnam County Almshouse, Carmel; one-story infirmary; plans approved October 10, 1917, upon condition of revision to meet recommendations of Committee.

9. Jewish Maternity Hospital; remodeling building at 259 Division street, Manhattan, New York city, for use as laundry and for employees' sleeping rooms, and for the erection of a fireproof section connecting same with hospital; approved October 10, 1917, upon condition of revision to meet recommendations of Committee.

10. St. Christopher's Home, Dobbs Ferry; alterations and additions to frame cottage occupied by boys; plans approved as filed, December 12, 1917.

11. Mercy Hospital, Buffalo; new hospital building; plans approved December 12, 1917, on condition of revision to meet recommendations of Committee.

13. St. Joseph's Hospital, Elmira; fire escapes; plans approved as filed, December 12, 1917.

14. Norwich Hospital Association; remodeling of a building for hospital use; approved January 9, 1918, on condition of revision to meet recommendations of Committee.

16. Beth Moses Hospital, Brooklyn; hospital building, southwest corner of Stuyvesant avenue and Hart street, Brooklyn; approved February 27, 1918, on condition of revision to meet recommendations of Committee.

17. Goshen Emergency Hospital, Goshen; addition to present hospital building, to be known as the Morris Memorial Hospital; February 27, 1918, Board took following action: "In consideration of the fact that the management of the hospital has proceeded with the construction to such an extent as to practically fix the plan of the building, the Board take no action at the present time with regard to the plans as submitted."

18. The Salvation Army Rescue and Industrial Home, 316-318 East 15th street, New York city; remodeling of building at 314 East 15th street to be used in connection with the other two buildings occupied for the hospital work connected with the institution; plans approved February 27, 1918, on condition of revision to meet recommendations of Committee.

23. White Plains Hospital Association, White Plains; one-story brick addition to provide ward for children; plans approved as filed, June 5, 1918.

24. St. Mark's Hospital, New York city; remodeling building at 177 Second avenue, New York city; approved June 5, 1918, when revised in accordance with recommendations of Committee.

An appropriation of ten thousand dollars is made for securing an option on a site for the new hospital referred to in subdivision eleven of section two of such chapter, as added by this act, and for the making of necessary tests, borings, surveys and investigations to determine the question of adequate water supply and practicability of sewage disposal for such new hospital. THE BOARD'S STAFF

In the report submitted last year exhaustive mention was made of the reorganization of the Board's staff. This plan has been carried out during the past year and the results have been satisfactory and have fully justified the hopes entertained regarding it. The new divisions have all been active and the four Division Committees have met regularly previous to the Board's meetings and carefully considered the reports of inspection of institutions and the problems allied to the work of the various divisions. In September, two of the Committees had meetings even though no meeting of the Board was scheduled for that month. While this new method was a radical departure from the former Eastern and Western District Committees it has been a decided advantage as the deliberations of each of the Committees have been focused on a similar group of institutions. The Division Superintendents have confined their activities to the work of their respective divisions and it has thereby been possible to follow up reports and also to give more attention to the problems peculiar to each group of institutions. However, the progress made under this regrouping of the Board's work has been less than may be expected, owing to the disadvantages under which the Board has labored due to the depletion of its forces by calls for war service. The following members of the staff have been engaged during the whole or a part of the year in war or allied activities:

Evelyn H. Ellis, January 9, 1918, enlisted as Head Nurse, Red Cross Service, Boston City Hospital. Under the provisions of Chapter 435, Laws of 1917, she obtained the Governor's consent to enter such service; Governor's No. 862. Was transferred to Base Hospital Unit No. 7, and is now at Joué-les-Tours, France.

John J. Skelly, enlisted in the United States Naval Reserve May 28, 1918; Governor granted leave of absence under provisions of Chapter 435, Laws of 1917; Governor's No. 1398.

Clara M. Paquet, joined Women's Oversea Hospitals Unit August 1, 1918 as Secretary; sailed for France August 24, 1918. Is now with the Hospital which is in service of the French Government.

James H. Foster, Commissioned as Captain in the Sanitary Corps of the United States Army August 1, 1918. Governor granted leave of absence under the provisions of Chapter 435 of the Laws of 1917; Governor's No. 1944.

Mary A. Steer, entered War Camp Community Service September 1, 1918. Is at Camp Devens, Ayer, Mass.

Harry M. Hirsch, inspector, United States Ordnance Department, beginning September 1, 1918.

Edith M. Dudley, inspector of Factories, Woman's Division,

United States Ordnance Department, beginning September 16, 1918.

Chester L. Carlisle, M. D., commissioned as captain in the Medical Reserve Corps of the United States Army, November 1, 1918. Governor granted leave of absence under Chapter 435 of the Laws of 1917; Governor's number 2217. Now at United States General Hospital No. 30, Plattsburgh Barracks, Plattsburgh, N. Y.

THE BOARD AND THE INSTITUTIONS

Every institution under the supervision of the Board has been visited at least once since the submission of the last report to the Legislature and all State institutions by the President of the Board. In some cases, where it has been deemed necessary, several visits have been made and in others meetings have been arranged with the Boards of Managers for the purpose of conferring about conditions found to exist in their institutions. Such conferences have been attended by committees or the individual members of the Board, or by the secretary or one of its other officers. In practically every case such a conference has served to dissipate misunderstanding as to the purpose of the Board's recommendations and have led to a better understanding and effective efforts to remedy unsatisfactory conditions.

In its endeavors to improve conditions under which public charges are being cared for, the Board has had to take into consideration the special difficulties confronting charitable organizations which have arisen from the abnormal industrial and economic conditions created by the war. Some of them are:

1 Food. The high cost of all food supplies has continued to cause institution managers much concern. This has been less true of the State institutions as the appropriation made by the preceding legislature has at least assured them of a definite and to a large degree satisfactory income. But for the private institutions receiving public moneys, and this group is by far the largest of those coming under the Board's supervision, the problem has been a very complicated one.

2 Construction. The Board finds quite often that there are structural conditions existing in institutions which materially reduce their efficiency. In all cases such conditions are called to the attention of the responsible parties. During the past year, however, the Board has been compelled to exercise much leniency in this respect. There has been no letting up in recommendations but there has had to be a recognition of the insuperable difficulties attending construction work. The high cost of building material, of wages, the difficulty of getting funds, and if all else were arranged, the impossibility of securing permission to build, has made it advisable for the Board to insist only on such changes as were absolutely necessary to the welfare of the inmates.

3 Employees. In this respect the private institutions, and also the State and other public institutions, have been at a great disadvantage. The high rate of wages offered by industrial corporations has been very tempting to institution employees. It has not been possible for the institutions to meet the scale of wage provided by munition and other war work factories and consequently they have lost many of their people. Added to this predicament, there has been the call to war service of many of the medical and other attendants, and the operations of the selective draft. The combination of all these conditions has made institution management a very difficult and trying task. However, it is possible to report at this time that there have been no hardships encountered by the institutional inmates and the reports indicate that they have all been fed, housed and otherwise cared for in a satisfactory manner. The worry and anxiety incident to the troublous conditions described above have been carried by the institution officials.

4 Illness. Generally the health of inmates of institutions, except those for the care of the sick, is exceptionally good. In the children's institutions, with the exception of the infant asylums, the disease and mortality rate is usually lower than for the same number of children on the outside. The regular hours, and regulated life and feeding, usually result in a low death rate in these institutions. Recently, however, the death rate has been greatly raised owing to the prevalence of influenza. The following figures indicate the extent to which the institutions have been visited by the scourge:

	Cases	Deaths
Almshouses and Homes for Aged.....	314	73
Children's Homes	8,323	253
Hospitals	15,225	3,487
Industrial Schools	55	5
Institutions for Juvenile Delinquents...	341	33
State Institutions	3,490	245
Tuberculosis Sanatoria	168	22
<hr/>
Total	27,916	4,118

Involving 280 institutions.

152 institutions reporting no cases.

Total number of institutions reporting, 432.

To assist the institutions the Board has made special effort to maintain close relations with them and to keep fully informed of their difficulties. As in many cases the amount paid by the local communities for the care of its wards was insufficient to meet the cost, the Board has sought to obtain a higher rate of payment. Institution people have been called together to counsel regarding their needs in this particular, Boards of Supervisors and Boards of Estimate and Apportionment have been written to and personally appealed to, that the facts might be clearly understood and that the wards should not suffer because of lack of adequate funds. This procedure on the part of the State Board has been felt to be justifiable because it is quite within reason that with the very much increased cost of all supplies the institutions cannot properly care for their charges at the old rates which were inadequate even in less expensive times. The results of the Board's activities in this field have been very gratifying. Most of the counties and cities of the State have increased their rates to children's institutions. In the case of hospitals there has not been an equally uniform increase but several communities have seen the justice of the demand and have given additional funds for the care of the sick poor.

To assist the institutions further the Board has continued the practice inaugurated last year of meeting with the superintendents of children's institutions semi-annually. At the conference held in the spring of 1918, the subject for discussion was food and food conservation. A dietitian was present at each of the round table meetings, which were held in the larger cities of the State, and information was given regarding food substitutes, conservation, dehydration and food values. The many expressions of appreciation which these meetings have brought forth indicate that the State may in this manner render a distinct service to this splendid group of its citizens engaged in caring for the dependent child or our unfortunate fellow-men. To bring additional information and assistance to the institutions, the Board has sent out thousands of pages of printed matter regarding food substitutes, war-time recipes and similar data which might otherwise be inaccessible to the institution worker.

THE EPIDEMIC AND DEPENDENCY

Although the epidemic occurred since June 30, it may be in place to call attention to the influence this scourge will have on the problem of dependency. The Board attempted a survey of the State about two months after the outbreak and when there seemed to be such a decrease in the cases reported as to indicate a decline of the wave of the disease. From the statements sent to the Board in response to its inquiries it was estimated then that 804 children had already been committed to institutions as public charges, 596 were about to be committed and 127 families, involving about 400 children, had been given assistance in their homes by poor-law officials. These figures have since then been materially increased and do not take into account the large number of mothers, widowed by the epidemic, who have applied to the Boards of Child Welfare for relief, and the still greater number of families who are being assisted by the private relief-giving associations. The cost to the community in money will amount to millions of dollars and the cost in decreased physical efficiency and lessened economic value of individuals and homes is beyond computation. Many hundreds of fathers and mothers who have temporarily recovered from the disease will by reason of physical weakness be the prey of other diseases which finding lessened resistance will carry off their victims. During their illness dependency will come to the family and as a result of the death of parent many children will become institutional charges. For years to come, even though there should be no further outbreak of the epidemic, the economic results of the influenza scourge of 1918 will be felt by the communities of this as well as other states. Obtainable records indicate that none of the cholera, smallpox, typhoid or yellow fever epidemics which were accustomed to visit our New York cities in the middle of the last century, ever left such a harvest of death, weakness and dependency. A Commission has been appointed by the Governor to study this scourge and ascertain its cause and efficient methods of prevention. The subject is one which is of great interest to this Board not so much by reason of its medical and general health aspects but because of its importance as a factor in the increase of dependency.

THE INSTITUTIONS AND WAR WORK

It was hoped that in this report there might be an elaboration on that section of last year's report which treated of the work the institutions were doing to aid the government in its war activities. With this in mind the Board asked the institutions for detailed information as to the extent and nature of their activities. The mass of information which resulted from this request made it evident that to state satisfactorily all that the institutions were doing in this particular field would require so large an amount of space that it would be out of proportion to the other necessary portions of this report. It would astonish the citizens of this State could they know the volume of work which the inmates, both young and old, strong and decrepit, have contributed to the general cause of "Winning the War." Thousands of bandages, hundreds of sweaters and other knitted articles, thousands of dollars worth of war saving stamps and liberty bonds have come from the limited funds, the small earnings, the extra hours of the children of orphan asylums, the aged of the almshouses, the mentally incompetent in the institutions for the feeble-minded, the youths in the training schools at Hudson and Industry and the women in the reformatories. It would be a marvelous story, if all the facts could be assembled, and would reveal that even though unable to enter the stream of human efforts as these were related to the war, yet these wards of society made contributions of great value to these activities. But of still greater importance was the contribution of human material made by boys who had formerly been in the public and private institutions of this State. Efforts to get accurate figures of graduates of the children's institutions who have been in the naval or military service of the government have failed; so many are lost to the sight of their institutional friends after they have been absent for a few years. But every institution for boys and girls (especially the former) has displayed with pride its service flag. In many of these flags some of the stars of blue have turned to gold, testifying that the boys on whom the community had spent its money and into whom the institution had sought to inject the spirit of loyalty to the principles of our government had fully repaid the efforts bestowed upon them. From the many reports that have come to the Board it may not be out of place to give as a sample of devotion to duty the following excerpts from the letter of the Captain of the 23rd U. S. Infantry written to the Sisters in charge of the House of Providence in Syracuse. It refers to Charles Kane, an orphan boy who for several years made his home in the above-mentioned institution:

"It gives me great pleasure as his commanding officer and friend to write to you, also his friend and guardian, and to tell you something about his work and splendid service as a soldier in the American army. He joined my company a short time before we left Syracuse for Hoboken, N. J., and thence for France.

"I learned to know the boy very well and to feel a deep affection for him. At the front and in battle where death is a daily companion, one is quickly stripped of all pretence and false pride and a man is shown up for what his real value is and in his real nature.

"Private Kane made his impression early, and from then till the time of his death on July 1, his record was equal to that of the best in the company. At the time we went into the St. Mihiel sector, which was the first sector we occupied, Private Kane was acting in the capacity of a platoon runner, and it was his duty to carry messages from his platoon leader to me, work which required great courage and endurance.

"A short time after we entered this sector, he was sent, during an intense bombardment, with an important message to company headquarters. On the way he was knocked down four times by the concussion of high explosive shells hursting around him. However, he did not stop and get into a dugout to seek protection as another might have done, but went straight to his destination and delivered his message, showing right in the beginning that he had the right stuff in him.

"There were other incidents too numerous to mention where he showed remarkable courage, and he was soon recognized as being one of the coolest men under fire in the entire company. It became necessary for me to go from the rear end of the town where my headquarters were situated to make an inspection along the front in order to determine if possible what was up and whether an attack was in progress, so that the necessary orders could be given to meet it.

"I started out with Kane following closely behind and as we crept through the deserted streets, running from a pile of rocks here to the remnants of a building there, and never knowing what instant might be our last, I must confess I had my misgivings when, at the worst point, Patsy crept up close behind me and shouted in my ear, 'Captain, we ought to get some of those darn squareheads (meaning Germans) tonight, don't you think?' and actually laughed like he was having a good time. Nothing in the world could have had a more stabilizing effect on my nerves than that speech.

"A couple of weeks after that the attack on Vaux came off and it was in that attack, as you know, that Private Kane was killed in an attempt to get me to a place of safety after I had been seriously wounded. The instant I fell he ran to my assistance through a hail of bullets and was in the act of bandaging my wound when he was killed by machine gun fire. Cheerful under the most trying conditions, devoted to duty and absolutely fearless, those are the requisites of a good soldier, and he possessed them all. I regret his death and will remember him always and extend to you, his best friend, my sincerest sympathy."

This story could be duplicated many times and is recorded as a tribute not only to this particular boy but to the type he represents — the institution boy. Fully cognizant of the defects of institutional life and realizing perfectly that no institution can take the place of a good home, yet justice demands that recognition should be made of the splendid results the institutions have been able to contribute to society. The voice of those who insist that all children's institutions are schools of crime and hot beds for the propagation of evil habits and inefficiency should not be left unanswered. From the institutions as from all other social organizations dealing with human material there will come failures that will give to their "alma mater" a sad prominence, but these should not be allowed to obscure the many others, much greater in number, who by orderly lives in time of peace, and by heroism and supreme devotion in time of war, have put into concrete form the teaching of the patient, godly men and women who have cared for them in their childhood. The presence of these boys in the service has been an inspiration to those remaining in the institutions and at regular intervals there have gone boxes of good things and clothing from the children to their institution's representatives "over there."

THE FINANCIAL COST OF CHARITY

The State institutions under the supervision of the State Board of Charities expended for maintenance for the year ending June 30, 1918, $2,942,454.66. The maintenance expenses for the county, city and town almshouses were $2,364,102.83, while those of the other public and private charitable institutions reporting to the Board will aggregate more than $35,000,000 — a total of over $40,000,000 for maintenance alone.

This sum does not represent the entire amount given by the people of the State to maintain charitable and correctional efforts. There are in every city several private charitable organizations expending large sums annually for the relief of dependent families and individuals and there are also throughout the State many private charitable and correctional institutions, supported in whole or in part by donations from a generous public, which are under no supervision and of whose maintenance expenses no estimate can be made.

The expenditure of a sum of money so tremendous and affecting so many persons should be subject to the closest scrutiny. Institutions and organizations receiving public funds are visited by the State Board of Charities and their reports are submitted annually to the State. Institutions and organizations not receiving such funds are not obliged to make any report except such as their own respective managements may wish to make. It must ever be to the credit of the men and women in charge of these organizations that, in proportion to the large number of them and the great number of individual lives involved, so few are the instances of financial mismanagement or mistreatment of wards as to be almost a negligible quantity. But nevertheless even though official reports and inspection would not guarantee an entire safeguard against either of the above unfortunate conditions, there would seem to be a desirability that all such organizations handling what are virtually trust funds and affecting human life should at least annually spread before the State an account of their stewardship. The fear so often expressed that State inspection would embarrass, annoy or in any way lessen efficiency is absolutely groundless. The State would be justified in setting standards and requiring that all organizations, whether receiving public money or not, dealing with the unfortunate members of the human family, should seek to approximate those standards. The origin of the funds, whether directly or indirectly from the taxpayer would hardly be a reasonable or justifiable line of demarcation between supervision and nonsupervision.

The vastness of the sums expended for charitable and correctional purposes brings with it another question of great importance to the State. While the sum is larger than ever before there is at present no likelihood that it has reached the maximum. On the contrary it is very reasonable to expect that next year's expenditures will be larger and that annually there will be an increase in the total amount. No one can forecast what the coming years may require for the proper care of dependents, defectives and delinquents. While this Board is primarily concerned with the proper care of the public wards in institutions, it cannot be oblivious to the constantly increasing expenditures these institutions involve and the heavy burden on the taxpayer and benevolent individual. The Board wishes to call attention to the fact that institutional construction and management will not solve the social problems satisfactorily. The community must attempt the solution before the institution door is reached. In addition to a consistently increasing efficiency of organization and institution method, there is needed a likewise constantly increasing efficient preventive program. This is a civic and State obligation. The State Board of Charities is convinced that the time has come for the cities of this State to take into serious consideration the necessity of a community program to minimize crime, pauperism, poverty and sickness. In accordance with its belief the Board has during the past year given careful attention to possible crime and delinquency increase due to war conditions. Inquiries every six months have revealed no alarming increase of either, but in order that there might be on the part of various communities increasing watchfulness it sent to the chief executive of every city the following letter:

"DEAR SIR.—The State Board of Charities desires to bring to your attention the present danger from the possible increase in juvenile delinquency, indirectly attributable to the world war.

As you are probably aware, there were during the second year of the war startling increases in crime and juvenile delinquency in England and Germany. Some of the reasons for this increase were probably that fathers, older brothers and various groups of social workers with boys and girls had entered the army, the streets were dark at night, child labor and education laws were made less exacting, and the atmosphere was surcharged with a spirit of warfare.

In our State so far there has been no large increase in juvenile crime. At the present time, however, there are indications that social restraints may be seriously weakened as a consequence of the draft. Such a possibility must be considered by the various communities, and preparations made to prevent or counteract it. Communities which are alive to the situation and arrange their social, educational and religious forces to meet the new conditions are the communities which will suffer least.

This letter is sent to you with the hope that, as the chief executive of your city, you may call the attention of your people to the necessity of constant watchfulness in order that a wave of juvenile delinquency shall not overwhelm the community. Many persons in your city are greatly interested in this problem and will gladly render assistance, if called upon, to devise ways and means whereby the community can be protected effectively and its youth restrained from lawlessness.

While yours may be one of several cities in the State which have taken important forward steps to meet this problem, we suggest that publicly or otherwise you call this matter to the attention of your citizens and that the churches, Sunday schools, public and parochial schools, boys' clubs, settlements and all other similar agencies be urged to coöperate in the inauguration and continuance of preventive activities which shall so occupy the minds and time of young people that they may thereby be saved from vice, delinquency and their disastrous consequences.

The most important social agency of any community is the home. More than ever is it necessary now to bring to the attention of parents the responsibility which rests upon them. In the opinion of those best qualified to speak, lack of home care and parental restraint are the most prolific causes of juvenile waywardness. It would therefore seem advisable that parents in cities be requested to utilize to the full their opportunity to guide, restrain and inspire their children, upon whom the future welfare of our nation depends, to habits of order and reverence for law and civic authority."

The program of prevention should be one about which all persons, irrespective of creed or political belief, may unite. The prevention of social evils must become just as prominent a subject for the municipality as the prevention of physical ills. Modern sanitation has accomplished wonders in the prevention of disease by the use of preventive methods. With the enormous expenditure of money necessitated by human misfortune and misconduct in mind as well as the sufferings entailed thereby, the Board advocates legislation and united community effort to the end that the stream of individuals requiring the care of private or public relief agencies may be materially diminished. The details of such a preventive program can safely be left to the enlightened minds and conscience of the respective communities. This Board, however, ventures to suggest that the plan should include provision for a more liberal educational program, more conscientious attention to housing problems, instruction in and enforcement of rules for conservation of child life, health instruction and community hygiene, opportunities for wholesome and harmless recreation and instruction in morals.

SOCIAL BYPRODUCTS OF THE WAR

In this connection the Board desires to call particular attention to the development of movements looking toward social betterment during the continuance of the war. Many of these movements have been under national direction and in some cases have been inaugurated and continued by order of the national government. The value of many of these efforts has been demonstrated by the beneficial results as seen in increased physical efficiency in the individuals. The Board is not interested in nor an advocate of any system of paternalism or socialism, but it is very much interested in all movements which make for better community conditions and which consequently result in less dependency. It is a matter which concerns not only the financial burdens of the taxpayers but also the happiness of individuals. Helplessness, destitution, delinquency, inefficiency are not only expensive to the State and community but are causes of individual misery and unhappiness. Therefore, it is in the interest of a better State both financially and otherwise that efforts should be made by communities not only to preserve the interest in social conditions awakened by the war but also to advance such interest. The war crisis has revealed the necessity of attention to and application of higher standards to examination of mentality, to industrial efficiency, to prevention of vice and generally to the creation of clean environment. Such standards are extremely desirable in the days of peace as well as in the time of war. The insistence by the communities on such standards would do much to decrease the sum of human unhappiness and the financial burdens now resting with such weight upon the State. The State Board of Charities is of the opinion that it would be remiss in the discharge of its responsibilities to the citizens of the State did it not call attention to these facts. The present time is opportune for such consideration of social conditions as it has been the hope of many persons that the close of the war meant the ushering in of a new day for mankind.

THE NEW DAY

This phrase, "The New Day," is a favorite one with writers and speakers who wish to describe the social changes that have come about as the result of the storm and stress period through which the nations, and more particularly our own nation, have passed. It expresses a hope that as a result of these experiences there shall be such a change for the better in industrial, social and national conditions and habits of minds that the future years shall stand in bright contrast to the past. The State Board of Charities is interested particularly in this phrase as it reflects possible changes in conditions which either make for dependency or relate to the care of those who are the wards of the State in its charitable institutions. Presumably this new era will be one of greater opportunity, much industrial expansion and scientific research. Parallel with such developments it is to be desired that the new days should also witness—

1. Increasing interest in the welfare of the child. What the institutional burden of this State is to be a generation hence depends much on what is being done for and with the children of today. The future almshouse and reformatory inmates and the mentally defective are among the children of today. To save wreckage and waste of human life communities should adopt definite programs for the conservation of child life, and the new day will be bright not so much by reason of its greater industrial commercial or scientific discoveries but by its continuous attention to the State's most important asset—the child. This year has been designated as Children's Year by the Children's Bureau of Washington and the State Board of Charities wishes to call attention to and record its approval not only of this fact, but also of the additional fact that every year should be considered as an opportunity to enforce a children's year program. In many instances in the past the presence of the child has been considered very much in the light of an annoyance in the community, in others it has been tolerated and what has been done for it has been under protest. In the future it is to be hoped that the child will be considered as an asset to be carefully protected and that the crowning glory of a community shall be the assurance that it is a safe and desirable place in which children may

a. The community should seek to make possible a healthy childhood. Without being irreverent one may say today that health or sickness can no longer be considered wholly as divine blessing or punishment. The slogan of the New York State Department of Health is that "health is purchasable" and this would seem to be borne out by the relation of the infant mortality curve to health precautions, and by the fact that the children of the poor are those who have had the most slender hold on life. Three hundred thousand children under school age die annually in the United States. It has been estimated that less than two men of every hundred were killed in warfare, but in the United States twelve babies of every hundred under one year of age die every year. It has been put in this graphic way, "it is six times safer to be a soldier in the trenches of Europe than it is to be a baby in the cradle of the United States." These figures indicate a terrific wastage of human life and also a lack of care and development in those who survive. Dr. Baker has proposed the following program for the State of New York: (1) That every prospective mother shall be able to receive the instruction which shall enable her to give birth to a healthy child; (2) that every mother in New York State may have at the time of her confinement the kind of care which will make her confinement entirely safe and normal; (3) that every baby shall be able to have the advantage of the sort of supervision and instruction of the mother which will keep it well during the first year of life; (4) that every child of pre-school age shall have proper health supervision, physical examination and be considered of just as great importance as the school child. Such a program would seem to be reasonable and necessary. To this end we must carefully consider our housing methods, our street conditions, and our need of universal physical training, the development of clinics for dental and other physical defects (only 20 per cent of the men in the army had ever had dental care), instruction in hygiene and every other detail that makes for physical efficiency.

b. The program should also plan for a happy childhood. It is not necessary to emphasize the justice of the child's demand for opportunity to play. It has a right to play and the community should provide ample opportunities for such exercise. This community function should neither be neglected nor left to some private organization to provide. It is distinctly a community matter and the provision of play space and play direction is a legitimate part of the public or municipal activity. But it is not only from the standpoint of the right of the child to play that such opportunity should be afforded. Play has a very decided physical and psychological benefit which makes for a better type of manhood. No city can any longer properly fulfill its duties without playgrounds and play directors. By so doing there will be given the joy of a happy childhood, the bodily development, the knowledge of fair play, the spirit of overcoming obstacles and the legitimate outlet of physical energies.

c. There is needed also a protected childhood. Child labor has been abundantly proved to be detrimental both for the child and for its later life. Educational laws requiring certain educational standards and requirements cannot be tampered with in safety to the community. There are immoral forces which seek the child's life and every protection should be thrown about this future citizen that it may enter upon life's larger day with a clean mind as well as a clean body. Girls are being sought to take the places of the scarlet women who are constantly passing off the stage of their vicious activity, boys are being sought as the customers for the dealers in this hideous commerce. The most effective way of combating prostitution is to cut off the supply. If for no other reason the plea that our children and youth must be protected should be the effective one in making our cities as clean as were the camp communities by the governmental activity. And then there is the further need of protection of the child who is about to enter on the path of delinquency. That child makes a special call on our consideration. By the kind ministrations of the children's court, the helpful advice and guidance of the probation officer, the sympathetic management of the children's institution, this child should be guarded and protected from the consequences of inexperience and ignorant waywardness. The child, most helpless of all creatures endowed with greater potency for good or evil than any other creature, has a right to demand that society shall sympathetically and efficiently guard it from its enemies.

2. Increasing interest in the problem of the feeble-minded. The State Board of Charities has annually called attention to this very important problem. During the past year progress has been made in its consideration by the appointment of the State Commission for the Care of the Feeble-Minded. Upon this commission the State Board of Charities is represented by its secretary. Few questions present more numerous and difficult angles than the questions that pertain to the determination, treatment and social relationship of the feeble-minded. Increased institutional provisions, development of clinics, colonies, census and registration, all of which are outlined in the report of this Board last year, have been included in the law which created the State commission. The law is given in its entirety in another place in this report. The commission has entered upon its difficult task with energy and its report and recommendations will be the result of painstaking investigations of conditions in this State. The creation of this commission is the result of the deliberations of the Hospital Development Commission which gave to the whole subject of mental defectiveness the most careful consideration. With the new commission as a beginning it is to be hoped that the State will, during the coming years, permit no backward step in the treatment of this large group of its population. The degree of intelligence with which this social problem is handled will determine to a very considerable degree the extent of the social burdens the future generations will have to meet. Feeble-mindedness as a cause of inefficiency, poverty, alcoholism, crime and pauperism is in the first rank of importance. The "New Day" therefore should be signalized by thoughtful and active attention to the reduction of the efficiency of this factor.

3. Increasing institutional efficiency. It is hardly conceivable that the need for institutions will disappear. While there must be constant effort to reduce the number of those who will need institutional care it is more than likely that for some years to come institutions especially for the defective will be required. Even at the present day the inmates of institutions other than those that care for children and the sick may to a large extent be placed in that category. As long as institutions are a necessity the State must, through its constituted agencies, insist that they shall be the very best of their kind. Only too often are protests made at the present time when reasonable requirements are insisted upon and officials and managers act upon the theory that requests for improvements are based upon a desire to harass or annoy the institutions in their work.

a. Institution managers should be selected because of their interest in the work their institution is supposed to do and they should be expected to know the standards for such work. This information can easily be obtained by a careful consideration of what others are doing in the same field and a little study given to the subject. Managers who are serving their wards in a merely perfunctory manner by attendance on a board meeting sometimes held at a distance from their institution are incapable of passing judgment on the work of their institution. Service on institution boards offers for public spirited citizens an opportunity to do real constructive work and should be so considered. The ignorance on the part of managers respecting the actual condition of the institution for which they are legally responsible is sometimes appalling. To those members of the boards of managers who are faithful to their trust the community owes a great debt of appreciation. Time, thought and often money are given with the only return being the consciousness of serving their fellow men. May the "New Day" be brightened by the increase of intelligent, progressive and conscientious managers of institutions.

Associated with this discussion of institutional efficiency, especially as it relates to children's institutions, is the subject of

Children's Clearance Bureaus

It is a matter of regret that all children cannot have the comforts, safeguards and advantages of satisfactory home training and the kindly association in the formative period of life of relatives and friends whose interest in their welfare is increased by the blood tie. Unfortunately the ideal in home life and training is not often attained and in a large number of families circumstances prevent even a distant approach to it; for in the present organization of society many factors influence disastrously the environments of child life. Some of these are controllable while others are adventitious in character so that although careful and constant attention in the effort for the parental protection of the children of the family may be given, disaster renders such efforts unavailing. Disease may carry off parents and relatives, leaving the children dependent upon the public; accidents may cripple and deform them; poverty may so affect the home that proper child development is impossible; the habits and morals of parents may be vicious, and besides these things enforced association with evil companions may result in tendencies to delinquency which seriously imperil the children's future.

Because children are the future citizens of the State, the public is called upon not only to protect and train the unfortunate ones who from any cause are left dependent, but it must protect itself against tendencies in others which left unchecked would result in the increase of crime or the breakdown of society. To accomplish the functions of protection, training and restraint satisfactorily, private agencies, municipalities or the State itself must provide suitable care for destitute children and establish institutions for the training of delinquents; so that orphans, the blind, the deaf, the mentally defective, the crippled and those otherwise handicapped shall have some provision made by societies or the public to meet their needs. The program of public care is intended eventually to cover all the various requirements of society and especially is that program comprehensive in its relation to child welfare.

Granting the necessity of institutional care for many of the children who become wards of the State there can be no doubt that they should be placed in such institutions as are best adapted to their special needs and that at the same time such children should be delivered to the institutions in a condition which will assure the best results from the care and training they are to receive. To be most efficient, the sound mind requires a sound body, and although children committed to institutions are expected to be given all proper advantages it frequently is a fact that their condition at the time of reception makes either satisfactory or rapid development impossible. The starved or diseased body, mental defect or retardation, vicious habits, or warped ideals combine to prevent some of the children committed to institutions to be cared for and trained at public expense, from making the reasonable physical and mental progress which the interest of the State and the children themselves require. This failure in most instances cannot be charged properly either to the institutions in which the children are placed or to the children themselves; it is due to the selection of wrong institutions by committing officers, with consequent maladjustment to environment and defeat of the public intention. If dependent, defective, neglected and delinquent child wards could be placed under right influences none of them would fail to respond favorably to training, and few would prove altogether failures in life, but when many different types of children are subjected to the same unyielding discipline and to a single method of training it must be expected that satisfactory results will be the exception rather than the rule. We cannot too strongly insist that each child presents a special problem which must be treated as such. The complexities which make character require study and sympathetic treatment based upon understanding and such treatment can best be given when the child ward committed for institutional care is placed where the environment, the discipline and methods are arranged with reference to the peculiarities and tendencies of the child.

Although the choice of an institution when commitment is to be for a short period of time in ordinary cases may be made by committing officers, it will be better to refer the selection to a clearance bureau when the cause of commitment is other than destitution or the children presented for commitment have had experiences likely to be injurious to body, mind or morals. In such cases the committing officers are seldom qualified to choose institutions best suited to the requirements of the abnormal child; they are not in a position to study carefully the character and be fully informed as to the condition of such wards of the public. It requires time to make the study of personality essential if mistakes are to be avoided in the selection of institutions to which child wards are to be committed and in the case of magistrates the daily press of work prevents such officials from taking the necessary time, even if they are fully prepared by education and experience for the analysis of the mental and physical conditions which so largely affect character.

As illustrative of the necessity for Clearance Bureaus in connection with commitment to institutions the difficulty of classifying children is apparent from the fact that parents who are well to do in a financial sense send to the public schools for education not only normal children but

1. Children of retarded or arrested development.
2. Children with speech defects.
3. Blind children.
4. Deaf mutes.
5. Functional derangement cases.
6. Crippled and deformed children.
7. Sufferers from after effects of disease.
8. Children with distorted vision.
9. Children with adenoid and tonsillar growths.
10. Hysterical and nervous children.
11. Dementia cases.
12. Epileptics.
13. Feeble-minded children.
14. Children with tendencies to delinquency.
15. Sluggish and sullen types.
16. Children of genius.
17. Children needing pre-vocational training.
18. Children requiring an outdoor life.

It is apparent these various types cannot be taught together successfully nor is it wise to associate them so closely that in habit they will imitate or affect one another. Were all placed together the effectiveness of the school work would be greatly lessened and if this is true of the children sent from average homes how much more true must it be of the dependent, neglected and delinquent children whose whole environment has tended to prevent proper development and who therefore need carefully selected institutional care and training.

It follows, therefore, that in place of the hurried determinations of committing officials with consequent mistakes which may affect development disastrously, the choice of institutions for the child wards of the public should be made by specially qualified officials and commitments should be to Clearance Houses established for the temporary care of children so that under proper conditions they may be studied and the most suitable environment be selected for their training.

The Clearance Bureau has other functions besides that of distribution, one of which is the preparation of public charges for placement in the selected institutions to which they are to be committed. Many of the children sent to a Clearance Bureau for examination may be in such physical condition that for a committing officer to send them directly to the children's home, asylum, or school best fitted to give them proper training would be an imposition upon such institution, and require them to do work preliminary to the real object for which the children would be sent to them, and to do it without compensation as the cost of clothing, special medical attention, and similar attentions required would be far in excess of the weekly per capita allowance granted to institutions for the maintenance of committed children.

Especially would this be true in the case of neglected children who are frequently brought into court in such condition of raggedness and filth that considerable time is required to get them into clean bodily condition before educational training can begin. To send children in rags to a children's home devolves upon it the duty of providing a complete outfit of clothing which is unfair. No child should be placed in an institution under private management as a public charge without being sent to it fully clothed and ready to begin the school work, which is an important part of the daily routine. Disease is frequently introduced into homes and asylums by new arrivals and although quarantine is required under the laws of the State it is not always possible even by rigid quarantine to prevent the introduction of disease, especially the skin troubles which are so common among neglected children, yet this preparation should be preliminary to the developmental training of a children's home and be done in the Clearance Bureau, so that when the children are distributed from it to the special institutions selected for them they will be fully prepared to begin their training and thus make more rapid progress.

The establishment of Clearance Bureaus would be followed by the maintenance of a standard of physical condition for wards of the public which the institutions would be required thereafter to follow. If children are delivered to asylums in clean condition it may reasonably be expected that thereafter they will be maintained in such condition. If they are well clothed when placed in a home, the public is justified in requiring that they continue well clothed during the time they remain under the care of the institution. A standard thus established could not be departed from without condemnation and unhygienic conditions which sometimes follow the introduction of ragged and dirty children into asylums would seldom be found if the public wards were taken under care clean, free from disease and well clothed.

From this it is apparent that the Clearance Bureau should be not only a distributing agency of the public but also a preparatory home in which the first steps in readjustment are to be taken. It will be not only an examination bureau where a full record can be made of the physical and mental conditions, the past environment, the development and propensities of the proposed public wards, but also a reception home in which public officials may prepare children adequately for commitment to selected institutions, clean in body, free from disease, well clothed and ready for education and training where the best development can be forwarded. If the examinations through which the children pass show clearly that a child is feeble-minded, or so far retarded that he would prove a drag upon his associates should he be placed in a class with bright, pushing, normal children, the selective function of the Bureau will prevent the serious results which would follow were he placed in a wrong environment. The State would thus avoid the mistakes which are now frequent and which result in feeble-minded or delinquent boys and girls being placed with innocent normal children to their detriment, and for this reason, if no other, the Clearance Bureau is necessary as a part of the machinery which the State must employ for the conservation of its future citizens who during childhood need special oversight.

4. Increasing emphasis on social and preventive activities. As already referred to in this report, the inauguration and persistent continuation of efforts to forestall dependency must be undertaken by the community.

a. Health insurance. A study of the causes of dependency reveals the fact that much of it is due to sickness. It has been estimated that the sickness of working men, with the consequent expense of medical treatment and loss of pay, is responsible for more than six times the amount of dependency caused by industrial accidents. The health of working men and their families is as a general thing poorly looked after. The sick one is apt to keep about his work after he has become ill and even when compelled to stop will often delay calling a physician. Likewise he will return to work sometimes before he is able to do so. A large amount of the funds contributed by private charities for the care of families in their homes is made necessary because of illness. Studies of charitable work have made the proportion more than 50 per cent. In a study of 31,481 charity cases by the United States Immigration Commission in 1909, sickness was a factor in 12,082, or 38.3 per cent of the total number. At least half of this expenditure would be met in whole or in part by a system of health insurance. About 60-80 per cent of the expenditures of the New York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor is for relief made necessary by sickness. Of the 75,000 persons whom the Boston District Nursing Association touch every year, nearly 50 per cent are unable to pay for nursing care. The Buffalo Charity Organization Society reports for 1915-16 that more than 78 per cent of the poverty was due to sickness.

This Board is not interested in any particular bill or method of health insurance but from its observation of sickness as a cause of economic loss and as a contributing factor to poverty, it recognizes health insurance as very probably a powerful factor in the prevention of dependency. The United States Public Health Service estimates that workers spend annually $180,000,000 for medical care on account of sickness and annually lose $500,000,000 more in wages. The indirect results of a system of health insurance would also be the betterment of environment and the contentment which would come to the mind of the working man.

b. Industrial rehabilitation. The war has shown the possibility of the rehabilitation of the man handicapped by reason of wounds received in battle. Thousands of men are annually handicapped by wounds received in industry. They receive at the present time compensation for industrial accidents and are thus relieved from the old-time bargaining with employers, the result of which was usually that the counsel received fifty per cent. of the amount agreed upon. The mere payment, however, of the compensation is not a sufficient measure to bring the handicapped individual back to a condition of comparative usefulness. Quite commonly the injured man lives a life of idleness while the compensation lasts and when the income is no longer available he has become accustomed to inactivity and has not been adapting himself to such work as he could perform. Consequently his family becomes dependent after the compensation has been used up and the man finds himself unable to fit into the industrial organization of his community. The additional step which would seem necessary to be taken is the opportunity for vocational education of the handicapped man during the period in which he is receiving compensation. This would result in his being continuously active and also in preparing him for such work as may render him a useful unit of society.

c. Industrial education. The need of men and women who had been trained to skillfulness was accentuated during the period of the war. The lack of such training was so great that it was necessary for the government to organize vocational schools to train men for mechanical and technical service. Observation of inmates of prisons, reformatories and almshouses had made it clear that very few persons possessing the knowledge of a trade become inmates of such institutions. It is the individual without training and belonging to the group of unskilled labor who is first thrown out of employment. His work at all times is harder, less remunerative and more uncertain than that of the skilled workman. Consequently there is more opportunity and greater temptation for him to follow the path of crime and to become a pauper or other social burden upon the community. While it is true that every individual cannot, perhaps, be taught to become a skilled craftsman, the opportunity should exist and the use of it be encouraged. The form in which this opportunity should exist in the community may safely be left to the school men, but the wisdom of making it possible for them to expand the educational system to include such training is made plain by the necessity of attempting to eliminate ignorance of a trade as a cause of dependency and delinquency.

WAR CHARITIES

In our last report to the Legislature attention was called to the fact that charitable and relief organizations associated with the results of the war were increasing very rapidly in number. It was also indicated that there were possibilities of much dishonesty in connection with the rapid increase of such organizations and the lack of supervision maintained over them. That this has happened is now well known to all those who are interested in this form of community effort. The district attorney of New York county has paid special attention to the subject and reports that two billions of dollars have been contributed in New York for war charities and that at the present time fifteen hundred organizations are at work. Twenty-six indictments have been found by the grand jury, many persons have been sent to prison and others have fled.

The need of more efficient supervision and regulation of these charities is evident. It is necessary not only for the elimination of those that are fraudulent but also for the protection of those that are essential and worthy.

THE MANAGERS OF STATE CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS

Section 50 of chapter 57 of the Laws of 1909, constituting chapter 55 of the Consolidated Laws, requires that "the board of managers or trustees of each of the state charitable institutions, reporting to the fiscal supervisor, in addition to their duties now required by law, shall, by a majority of its members, visit and inspect the institution for which it is appointed at least monthly, and shall make a written report to the governor, the state board of charities and the fiscal supervisor within ten days after each visitation, to be signed by each member making such visitation."

From reports filed in the office of the State Board of Charities under this section of the State Charities Law, the following table has been compiled to show the number of managers present at each meeting during the year. Some of the managers may have failed to comply with the statute which requires the actual signature of reports by the managers in attendance at the meetings, and this table shows those only who signed reports received by this Board.

INSPECTION OF CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS

An important phase of the work of the Board is the methodical inspection of charitable institutions and agencies under its supervision. The members of the Board's staff of inspectors and investigators visit all the institutions at least once each year, making careful and thorough general inspections the reports of which are considered by the Board and its committees and suitable action taken concerning any needs or defects that may be reported. Special inspections and inquiries are made as occasion may require, and in addition the members and officers of the Board visit each year many of the institutions. On June 30, 1918, the following institutions and agencies were under supervision:

INSTITUTIONS NOT SUBJECT TO STATE SUPERVISION

Institutions maintained entirely at private expense are not under present laws supervised by the State nor are they required to report the number of dependent persons in their care. Such organizations include orphan asylums, day nurseries, fresh air charities, societies for the prevention of cruelty to children, hospitals, sanatoria, and other societies doing what may be termed a public work in the care and disposition of the needy and having in charge many thousands of children and other dependents annually. State supervision of such agencies is needed for the following reasons:

1. That the State may have full information concerning the adequacy of the relief rendered, the training of the children cared for and the disposition made of the beneficiaries upon discharge.
2. To secure to the various agencies the benefit of State supervision and guidance and safeguard the welfare of the inmates.
3. To facilitate the collection of statistical information concerning the work being done.
4. To protect the public against the misuse of moneys contributed for specific purposes.

An instance of the serious consequences of lack of proper supervision over private institutions is the case of a day nursery located in Yonkers in which thirteen children are alleged to have died from culpable negligence, the details of which were related in the newspapers of the State late in 1917. Approval of the certificate of incorporation of this institution had been refused by the Board in 1916 but it had secured authority to conduct its work by means of a permit issued by the local health officer. Two persons responsible for the care of these children were indicted for manslaughter. Several thousands of children in the State are in the care of incorporated and unincorporated agencies maintained entirely at private expense and these are without regular supervision by any State body.

The activities of the Board in its supervision of charitable institutions are directed primarily toward insuring suitable care of the inmates and providing for the proper training of children who may become dependent upon the public. To this end the Board endeavors to secure information as to the methods and quality of the work of these various agencies, public and private, and the care given their wards; and the adoption and practice of the best available methods suited to their needs and circumstances. By keeping in close contact with such agencies, and with private associations and official bodies, both National and State, the Board is in a position to act as a clearing house for information and advice for the institutions and agencies under its supervision, and desires to act in a helpful capacity toward them.

RATING OF INSTITUTIONS

It has been the practice of the Board through its Division Committees to classify reports of general inspection of institutions, except state institutions, schools for the deaf and the blind, boards of child welfare, placing out agencies, and in other individual cases, when because of reconstruction work or reorganization in progress it has been deemed inadvisable to attempt such classification. Consideration has been given to the buildings and equipment, or plant, and to the administrative conditions, separately, in such classification. Reports showing no defects or only those so minor in character as not to affect materially the efficiency of the institution's work, are placed in Class I. Reports showing more important needs or defects are placed in Class II, unless the defects are such as to endanger seriously the health, safety or welfare of the inmates of the institution, in which case they are placed in Class III. The following tables show the rating of the institutions of the more numerous groups for the fiscal year 1912-13 as compared with the fiscal year 1917-18.

From the above it will be observed that the percentage of reports placed in Class I during the year 1917-1918 is materially larger than during the year 1912-13, indicating a positive improvement not only in plant and equipment but in the administrative conditions of the institutions. The remaining groups are smaller in number and include Homes for the Aged, Fresh Air Charities, Industrial Schools, Placing Out Agencies, Reformatories and Temporary Homes. In the Homes for the Aged and Reformatories, which make provision within the institutions for the entire care and maintenance of the inmates there has been an improvement in both Plant and Administration. In the other groups the number of reports not classified renders a comparison of little value. The entire result is extremely gratifying to the Board in view of its earnest efforts to secure better facilities and better methods for the care of the dependent wards of the institutions of the State.

For the purpose of inspection and the general supervision of the institutions subject to supervision the Board's work is divided into four divisions as follows:

I. Division of Children, dealing with all institutions and agencies making provision for children who become dependent upon the public, except the sick and the mentally defective.

II. Division of Adult Wards, having to do with the almshouses, homes for the aged, and lodging houses for adults; also the care of nonresident, alien and Indian poor and the removal to their place of settlement of those who belong in other states and countries.

III. Division of Medical Charities, through which the Board supervises dispensaries, hospitals and sanatoria.

IV. Division of Mental Defect and Delinquency, having charge of the problems of feeble-mindedness and epilepsy, and the inspection of institutions for the mentally defective and of reformatories for adults.

On the following pages the work of the several divisions is shown in detail.

I. DIVISION OF CHILDREN

James H. Foster, Superintendent of Division.

The institutions and agencies supervised by the Board through the Division of Children on June 30, 1918, may be classified as follows:

The beneficiaries of these organizations may be grouped as follows:

To the above should also be added an aggregate of 62,853 children given "Fresh Air" outings during the year, and 11,429 children under supervision in free homes or at employment, of whom 2,748 were placed during the fiscal year.

STATE INSTITUTIONS

The four State institutions for the care of children not mentally defective or sick are the State Agricultural and Industrial School at Industry, for the care of boys 12 years of age and over committed for delinquency or improper guardianship; the New York State Training School for Girls at Hudson, receiving girls not over 16 years of age committed for delinquency or improper guardianship; the Thomas Indian School at Iroquois, for destitute Indian boys and girls; and the New York State School for the Blind, at Batavia.

STATE AGRICULTURAL AND INDUSTRIAL SCHOOLIndustry, Monroe County

Originally established in 1846 as the Western House of Refuge for Juvenile Delinquents

President Board of Managers, Mrs. Fanny A. Whitney, 22 South Goodman street, Rochester; Secretary, John McKie, 54 Lake View Park, Rochester; Superintendent, Hobart H. Todd, Industry.

This institution now has capacity for 755 inmates. On July 1, 1917, there were 786 boys present. During the year 899 were admitted, and 804 were discharged, leaving at the close of the fiscal year 881 inmates. The average number was 837 and the weekly per capita cost of support, including the value of home and farm products consumed $8.82; excluding this value, $5.66.

Conditions at the School have been improving under the supervision of an active board and superintendent. For several months during the year the institution was unable to receive new admissions owing to the fact that its accommodations were overtaxed. The passage of the law changing the minimum age of admission to twelve years will probably work beneficially for the institution. It would hardly seem justifiable to place boys seven, eight and nine years of age in an institution that is intended primarily as a reformatory agency. In addition to this the presence of little boys in large numbers made it impossible for the institution to function for the older boys who were in greater need of the assistance which the institution could give them.

Many improvements have been made about the institution, such as the laying of new walks and roads and the creation of a large drill ground.

The proper maintenance of an institution of this kind is one of extreme importance to the State. If the boys who are committed to the care of this institution are not given the opportunities and the environment which are inspirational, the result may be very disastrous. It is, however, encouraging to report that by reason of the spirit which animates this institution the results have been gratifying. It is essentially a School for the development of both body and mind, and on the splendid farm and in the homelike cottages which are provided the boy should receive a physical and mental impetus which is likely to change his whole career.

Perhaps the weakest part of the equipment provided at this institution is the industrial plant. The tendency on the part of boys to return to the city and not go to the farms necessitates that greater stress must be placed upon manual training. At present the equipment of this School in this regard is not wholly satisfactory and it is hoped that in the near future there shall be not only the opportunity for a fine agricultural education but also an equal opportunity for training in trades that will provide a satisfactory livelihood for the boys whose ultimate home is in the city.

NEW YORK STATE TRAINING SCHOOL FOR GIRLS,

Hudson, Columbia County

Established in 1904

(Originally established in 1881 as the House of Refuge for Women.)

President, Board of Managers, Mrs. Annie Winsor Allen, 9 Myrtle street, White Plains; Secretary, Mrs. Helen Esselstyn, Hudson; Superintendent, Hortense V. Bruce, M. D., Hudson.

This institution has capacity for 400 inmates. The number of inmates July 1, 1917, was 371, and 196 were admitted during the year making the total number under care 567. During the fiscal year 196 were discharged and two died, leaving June 30, 1918, 369 of whom 4 were infants. The average number present was 366, and the weekly cost of support, including the value of home and farm products consumed, $9.18; excluding this value, $8.56.

The necessity of providing an opportunity for training to girls under the age of sixteen who have begun to drift into ways of delinquency is generally admitted. The New York State Training School for Girls was intended to be what its name indicates — a school and not a prison, a place where its pupils might be trained not only in the knowledge of books but in such manual development as would make it possible for them to earn a living.

The development of intelligence tests in recent years has changed to a large extent our former conception of the mentality of individuals who are guilty of crime and delinquency. It is now apparent that such acts are usually committed by individuals whose mental condition is not normal and whom it is impossible to train along the lines which have been laid down for normal intelligence. The development, also, of the probation system has succeeded admirably in keeping from institutions many girls who formerly would have been placed there. The normal minded girl who has committed an indiscretion will by the aid of the probation officer find herself and readjust her life. The girl of subnormal mind is the one who will not respond so well to probationary methods and consequently will have to be placed under institutional restraint. The result is that the institution for girls, as well as the one for boys, of this kind, is likely to find an increasingly large number of its pupils in the subnormal group. It also finds that its educational machinery does not fit this group, and there is the alternative of returning the girls as unfitted to receive the benefit of the educational opportunity provided or of readjusting its whole educational method to fit the needs of subnormal individuals. The Hudson Training School has up to the present time operated under the section of the law which authorizes it to return to the sheriff of the county from which she came, any girl who has been found to be mentally unable to receive the benefit of the instruction given. The Board of Managers realizes the seriousness of this method since it means that feeble-minded or mentally unbalanced girls are thus returned to a vicious life in the community.

The New York State Training School for Girls is an institution of which the State may be proud. Its management has been progressive and the pupils have been given every opportunity to prepare themselves for a return to community life.

It is hoped that provision may be made elsewhere in the State for the feeble-minded girl and that Hudson may continue its work as an institution for normal girls who can receive proper mental, moral and physical training.

THOMAS INDIAN SCHOOL

Iroquois, Erie County

Established 1875

President Board of Managers: William S. Lawton, Lawton.

Secretary: George J. Mentley, Gowanda.

Superintendent: Mrs. Emily P. Lincoln.

The School has capacity for 200 inmates. The number present July 1, 1917, was 204. During the year 33 were received, 49 were discharged and 4 died leaving, June 30, 1918, a population of 184, of whom 87 were boys and 97 girls. The average number was 177 and the average weekly cost of support, including the value of home and farm products consumed, $8.46; excluding this value, $6.78.

Since early colonial days the people living within the borders of what is now the State of New York have been vitally interested in the welfare of the Indian race. Early missionaries gladly made the supreme sacrifice in their efforts to win the Indians to Christian civilization and since the days of the revolution teachers have devoted themselves to work for the children of the race, and the Thomas Indian School was originally established as a missionary station. In 1875 it was taken over by the State to be the center of its educational work for the orphan Indian children belonging to the several reservations. The capacity of the institution, at first small, has been increased in the last twenty years, as the plan of development recommended by the Board provided, by the addition of necessary buildings to the group until now the School has a capacity for 200 children; but this number is usually exceeded by crowding in a number of small boys or girls.

As the foregoing statements show, the hope of the Indian development was early recognized to rest in the schools and all the reservations today bear witness to the wisdom of this residential plan of education whereby the young are associated with competent teachers apart from tribal life, but under stimulating influences and a constant discipline based upon a course of instruction carefully arranged in preparation for the life which they must follow after school days are over. The influence of the School life is felt over the State, for the present classes, like those of other years, are made up of representatives from the several Indian tribes still to be found upon the reservations of the State, although the largest number are from the reservations in the seven western counties, most of which are within a radius of seventy-five miles from the school at Iroquois.

In the School the work is divided between the regular classroom elementary English course and the industrial training. The latter is intended to prepare the boys and girls for home life and its responsibilities. The girls are taught domestic work of all kinds: sewing, garment cutting, cooking, laundering, knitting and whatever is essential to home making and home keeping. The boys are taught farming, the use of tools, various shop trades, and whatever work may be deemed essential to success upon the farms to which they must finally return. If they develop special skill with tools, instruction is given in trades which offer them permanent employment at fair wages when the course is completed.

As this School is located in an agricultural community, attention is given to the cultivation of an environment suitable for the future life of these children. The problems of the rural life, personal hygiene, general sanitation, and the preservation of health are strongly presented in the hope that good habits may be so firmly established during school years that when the pupils shall have grown to mature years the habits may continue in control.

The success of the School during the past years has been phenomenal, but, as stated above, its work has been limited by its capacity. There are many neglected Indian children who need the advantages which this School was organized to give them. If the funds for an additional dormitory can be provided there are more than enough Indian children who now are excluded because there is no room for them, whose admission will fill a new dormitory building to overflowing and it should be borne in mind that it is far better to educate children and prepare them for permanent self-support in future years than later to pay the costs which pauperism involves and unless the neglected Indian children on the several reservations are now taken under care, properly educated and trained they will in time become a charge upon the State treasury for permanent support. When the plans for the group of buildings were originally approved by the State Board of Charities it was understood by the Legislature which made appropriations to begin the construction, that another building would be needed to complete the half-circle on which they are arranged and, although during the years of the war new construction has been deferred at the State institutions, now that peace is at hand it will be advisable to undertake some of the deferred work and make an appropriation for a new building at this institution.

THE BLIND

In the report of the Board for 1917 is contained the history of the effort made to unify the various punctographic systems of reading and writing for the blind. The New York Point, the American Braille, and the British Braille systems were in use in various schools throughout the United States and Canada. The result of a conference in 1917 was the adoption of the British Braille alphabet, and an agreement that publications of any school shall be available for use in the others. Inasmuch as the literature for the blind is at best limited because of the difficulties attending its publication and the restricted circulation, this move will have far reaching effects on the education of the blind. The various organizations for the blind having for their purpose the prevention of blindness and their educational, industrial and social training are closely allied to the two schools for the blind which receive aid from the State treasury. The problem of employment for the blind is receiving renewed attention because of the return from the European war of American soldiers who have been blinded in the service.

NEW YORK STATE SCHOOL FOR THE BLIND

Batavia, Genesee County

Established 1865

President Board of Managers: F. Park Lewis, M. D., 454 Franklin street, Buffalo.

Secretary and Superintendent: Charles A. Hamilton, M. A., Batavia.

This School has capacity for 175 pupils. The number present July 1, 1917, was 166 and 29 pupils were received, making the total number under care and training 195. During the year 32 were discharged, leaving 163 pupils in the institution June 30, 1918. The average number was 126, and the average weekly cost of support, including the value of home and farm products consumed, $11.25; excluding this value, $11.01.

This School is the only State institution for education of the blind with a board of managers appointed by the Governor and confirmed by the Senate. Its pupilage is drawn from the counties of the State, other than those constituting the metropolitan district and the bordering counties. Not all the pupils are totally blind.

The improvements during the fiscal year were limited to a new pumphouse and additional toilet facilities. The revised Braille system is being introduced as rapidly as the literature becomes available for the use of the pupils. In addition to the scholastic classes, the curriculum includes sewing, cooking, manual and vocational training, including weaving, mattress making, caning and broom making. Four of the former pupils are reported to be attending college; six others have become teachers in institutions for the blind; seventeen are employed in piano and organ works in the tuning department, the salaries secured ranging from $14 to $20 per week, so that the record for efficiency in training the pupils presents a very satisfactory showing.

NEW YORK INSTITUTE FOR THE EDUCATION OF THE BLIND

412 Ninth Ave., New York City

President: Howland Davis, 44 Wall street, New York.

Secretary: Linzee Blagden, 111 Broadway, New York.

Principal: Edward M. Van Cleve.

This institution is under private control and in addition to revenue received from invested funds and other sources, receives pupils on appointment by the State Commissioner of Education in accordance with the provisions of the State Education Law, for whose care and training payment is received from the State. Appointments are made from the first and second judicial districts and the counties of Westchester, Putnam and Rockland.

The available bed capacity was formerly about 250. It has been reduced and the number of pupils present on June 30, 1918, was 103, approximately three-fourths of the pupils being appointed by the State Commissioner of Education, the remainder being received from New York city and the State of New Jersey. It is the purpose of the institution to move to a more rural location in the near future.

The following institutions, in which blind children are received for care and training, do not receive State aid, but receive payments from counties and cities for the care and maintenance of such children as are accepted by poor law officials as public charges. They are included in the list of homes for children which appears later in this report:

Brooklyn Home for Blind, Crippled and Defective Children, Port Jefferson.

Catholic Institute for the Blind, New York city.

International Sunshine Branch for the Blind, Brooklyn.

St. Joseph's Asylum for Blind Girls (of the Mission of the Immaculate Virgin for the Protection of Homeless and Destitute Children), Mount Loretto, Staten Island.

THE DEAF

Schools for the deaf in receipt of State funds for the care and training of pupils admitted under the provisions of the State Education Law are as follows:

The work of schools for the blind and deaf, while involving many of the problems of orphan asylums, is in its educational aspect more highly specialized, requiring specially trained teachers and necessitating a larger proportion of instructors and equipment than in schools for the physically normal. The State Board of Charities exercises a general supervision over them as required by the Constitution and the statutes, but the State Commissioner of Education, to whose visitation they are also subject, is charged by section 970 of the Education Law with detailed and specific oversight and direction of their educational methods and work.

DEPENDENT CHILDREN

The following table shows the number of beneficiaries of the institutions and agencies for children other than those for the mentally defective and the sick at the close of each of the past four fiscal years:

a. In institutions:

	September 30, 1915	June 30, 1916	June 30, 1917	June 30, 1918
Deaf and blind children...	2,082	2,051	2,017	2,023
Committed for delinquency.	2,867	3,216	3,623	3,860
Committed for destitution or improper guardianship..	25,259	23,961	23,062	22,474
Noncommitted	5,549	5,604	5,843	5,598
b. Outside of institutions:
In foster boarding homes..	5,335	5,182	5,384	4,885
In homes of widowed mothers cared for by Child Welfare Boards..	5,375	13,669	19,034
Totals	41,092	45,389	53,598	57,874

The decrease in the number of children in institutions during the past three years has been more than offset by the increase in the number cared for at public expense under the supervision of Boards of Child Welfare. There is no means for determining how many of the children cared for by Boards of Child Welfare would, in the absence of relief from such boards, have found their way into institutions; but it may be assumed that at least part of the increase in the number of children for whose maintenance public funds are granted, in a measure represents a higher grade of public care for dependent children than existed prior to the enactment of the law creating Boards of Child Welfare. The preventive work which that form of public relief represents has the approval of those in public and private life who are well informed on the subject of dependency.

HOMES FOR CHILDREN AND INFANT ASYLUMS

Under this heading are included four county and city institutions for children, and 146 institutions under private control but in receipt of payments from counties, cities, and towns for the care and training of children committed to them. The private institutions include 14 infant asylums, 9 institutions for the mentally and physically defective, or children needing special physical care, 9 institutions for delinquent children, and 114 institutions for normal children. The aggregate number of children in the care of this entire group of institutions during the year was 52,380, including 35,137 present July 1, 1917, and 17,243 received during the year. Of this number 18,328 were discharged during the year, leaving 34,052 children present on June 30, 1918. This number includes 3,586 children cared for in boarding homes under the supervision of the institutions, the remainder being provided for within the institutions.

Following is a list of the institutions to which these children were committed, together with a statement of the number of public charges and private charges cared for, the average population during the year, and the number present on June 30, 1918, in each:

By grouping these institutions according to the territory from which the children are mainly received, it is found that the metropolitan section of the State furnishes a large majority of destitute children. The following table shows the number received from two general divisions of New York city and from that part of New York State located outside of New York city.

Of the 18,328 children discharged, 7,134 or approximately 39 per cent. remained in the institution less than one year and for them the institutional experience was, therefore, a temporary one. The ages when discharged of the 11,194 who remained more than one year are as follows:

Under 5 years of age.....	1,577
From 5 to 12 years of age.....	4,404
From 12 to 16 years of age.....	4,032
Over 16 years of age.....	1,181

Among those discharged there were, therefore, 5,213 children of an age to receive industrial training and the fact that 3,449 of this number had been in institutions upwards of three years emphasizes the importance to be attached to such training.

The high death rate shown in the foregoing tables might be taken as a basis of unwarranted criticism of the work of institutions, were it not understood that the institutions designated as infant asylums are, in some instances, combinations of asylums for well children and hospitals for sick children. Nearly all institutions of this class receive many infants who are in such poor physical condition that there is practically no prospect of their surviving the period of infancy. In New York city there has been considerable success resulting from securing wet nurses for young infants, but this plan is not always practicable. Inability of the infants to adjust themselves to the artificial diet is apparently the cause of many deaths. It is believed, nevertheless, that the caring for a large number of young children in the same room, as is done in some instances, is debilitating, and frequently renders them unable to ward off germs of disease with which they come in contact. Aside from the infants under two years of age the death rate in institutions for children is exceedingly low, and it is to be noted that of the total number of deaths, 803, or 67.4 per cent., are of children less than one year of age, and 931, or 78 per cent. of all the deaths occurred less than one year from the time of admission.

Although these institutions are commonly called orphan asylums, only a small proportion of the children cared for are orphans. Of the total number referred to above 15,408 had both parents living, 13,579 were half orphans, and 2,281 were orphans, while 2,784 were foundlings or illegitimate children or those regarding whose parents no information could be secured. Of this entire number, 28,454 were committed children for whose support counties, cities and towns were directly responsible to the institutions; 3,462 were maintained in whole or in part by relatives or guardians; while 2,136 were maintained free of charge by the institutions.

Those maintained at public expense grouped according to the length of time they had remained under institutional control are as follows:

CHILDREN IN FOSTER HOMES

One of the most important forms of work with dependent children who have been removed from their natural homes, and at the same time one of the most difficult to adjust satisfactorily, is that of securing foster homes for those who are proper subjects for placement. The various agencies throughout the State engaged in the selection of foster homes for dependent children, as designated in Section 301 of the State Charities Law, include societies for the prevention of cruelty to children, poor law officials, and incorporated institutions and agencies. The work is of three kinds, namely, the maintenance of children in foster boarding homes for which the foster mother receives a per capita weekly or monthly compensation; the securing of free foster homes where the child may be treated as a member of the family with or without prospect of adoption; and the placing of children at employment under supervision.

Public officials in various parts of the State have to a considerable extent made provision for the maintenance of children in family homes at public expense instead of committing them to incorporated institutions, a large number being so provided for in Erie, Westchester, Schenectady, Onondaga and Dutchess Counties, and in New York city. In New York city there were at the beginning of the fiscal year, 584 children in foster boarding homes under the supervision of the Children's Home Bureau of the Department of Public Charities. This number was reduced to 309 on June 30, 1918. Following the close of the fiscal year, further reduction in this number is noted, indicating a gradual return to the former policy of providing for destitute children by committing them to private institutions.

Twenty-one counties in the State and the cities of New York, Newburgh, Schenectady and Syracuse have organized public agencies, with field agents employed to supervise children in foster homes and assist poor law officials in investigating applications for relief of various kinds, in devising plans for relief, and in following up the investigation of children committed to institutions with a view to their return to their relatives when such action is advisable.

As stated in a previous section of this report, some of the children committed to institutions are placed in boarding homes for care and maintenance under the supervision of the institution authorities. This plan has been adopted by the larger infant asylums and some other institutions in New York city, and the plan of the Rochester Children's Aid Society is to provide for all their beneficiaries in family homes.

The larger part of the work of placing children in free homes is performed by private organizations. A number of the institutions for children have well organized departments for the investigation of prospective foster homes and the supervision of the children placed, while some of the agencies engaged in placing children maintain no institutions. In institutions from which the number of children placed is small the work is frequently unmethodical and lacks sufficient supervision to insure the well-being of children placed. The number of placements made by Societies for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children and organizations not in receipt of public funds, and the quality of the work of these organizations are not known. There is need for legislation requiring that each child placed by any agency be reported to the State and providing for the formulation of standards of supervision of such children.

The following table shows the work of the various institutions and agencies so far as it is reported to the State Board of Charities.

Special laws govern the handling of problems relating to dependent children in Dutchess and Westchester Counties. In the former, the Board of Child Welfare, created by Chapter 354 of the Laws of 1917 has charge of the entire problem of caring for dependent children in the county, including the commitment of children to institutions other than those committed by courts to State institutions. In Westchester county, under the Commissioner of Charities and Corrections, the Department of Child Welfare is organized with powers and responsibilities similar to those of the Board of Child Welfare of Dutchess county.

CHILDREN'S CLEARING BUREAUS

On July 1, 1916, New York City established a Children's Clearing Bureau for the purpose of studying and more adequately providing for the needs of dependent children before they are committed to private institutions. This Bureau was in operation a sufficient length of time to demonstrate its usefulness. Children who were received were examined carefully by specialists, and provided with such dental and other treatment as was necessary. This was no more than the city's obligation to the child would demand and, furthermore, the committing officers were thus enabled, after a study of the child's characteristics and needs, to select the institution providing the most suitable environment or training for each child. The plan embodies one of the essential features of scientific treatment of dependent children, and it is hoped that the Department of Public Charities, which has temporarily discontinued this work, will reestablish the Bureau at an early date.

In Westchester county a clinic has been in operation in connection with the Department of Child Welfare where the children who are to become public charges receive thorough physical and mental examinations by specialists. The department is, however, without a detention home in which the children may be kept for study and treatment.

Erie county has during the past year made arrangements with the Children's Aid and Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children to maintain an institution for a purpose similar to that for which the New York City Clearing Bureau was established. Similar clearing bureaus are needed at convenient points throughout the State, including all the large cities.

BOARDS OF CHILD WELFARE

Reports received from the 32 boards of child welfare active during the year ending June 30, 1918 show a marked increase in the number of children provided for in homes of their widowed mothers. All of these boards except that of Dutchess county are acting under the provisions of Chapter 228 of the Laws of 1915. The Dutchess County board was created by Chapter 354 of the Laws of 1917 with powers including in addition to the usual powers of boards of child welfare, the authority to commit dependent children to institutions, place them in foster homes, and make other provisions for them. In Westchester county the Board of Child Welfare which has been appointed, has not been active, but the work usually performed by such boards and the disposition of other dependent children is taken care of by the Department of Child Welfare of the Commissioner of Charities and Corrections of the county. In a few other counties special appropriations are made for the care of children in their own homes through the poor law officers, but this work is reported as outdoor relief and included with outdoor relief granted in other cases.

The extent of the work performed by the thirty-two boards of child welfare for which appropriations have been made and by the Department of Child Welfare in Westchester county so far as it relates to the care of children of widowed mothers in their own homes, is indicated in the following table which represents the number of families and children aided on June 30, 1918.

Inspection of the work of the boards of child welfare has been made during the calendar year. In general it is found that the provisions of the law are being carried out in a humane and practical manner. The boards in counties caring for relatively few families lack somewhat in methodical order of business and adequacy of social records, but in most instances the facts are generally well known to members of the board. In twelve counties the investigations are made entirely by the members of the board assisted by poor law officers and in some instances by supervisors in the various towns. Special salaried investigators are employed in the remaining counties, in a number of instances these being the county agents for placing dependent children and therefore not in a position to give their full time to the work of the board of child welfare. In New York City where by far the largest amount of work is done there are 36 social investigators and 8 additional salaried employees in the office.

* The Sullivan County Board was aiding 13 families, involving a total of 55 children early in 1918, when the funds appropriated by the Board of Supervisors of the county became exhausted.

† These statistics include 146 children in 40 families who because of legal technicalities would not have been eligible for assistance through boards of child welfare but who are aided under the general powers of the poor law officer of the county.

In twenty-four counties of the State no appropriations have been made for this work nor in general in these counties is there a satisfactory substitute. A survey of some of the counties now being made by this Board brings to light the fact that children of widowed mothers are in some instances inadequately provided for, and in others the homes have been broken up and the children committed to institutions. It may be urged that the limitations in the law make it impossible to provide, through Boards of Child Welfare, for all dependent families in which the mothers are capable. Boards of Supervisors should, however, make appropriations sufficient to care for those families that are eligible under the law.

MISCELLANEOUS CHARITIES

A small group of institutions known as temporary homes for children, or lodging houses, consists of the Children's Aid and Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, Buffalo; four institutions maintained by the Children's Aid Society of New York City; St. Joseph's Home, of the Mission of the Immaculate Virgin, Manhattan and St. Philip's Home, of the New York Catholic Protectory in Manhattan. In general, these institutions combine the temporary care of children to be placed in foster homes or returned to relatives and the care of children who have secured employment, but need guidance and assistance until their income is sufficient to enable them to maintain themselves properly. The total number of children cared for in the seven institutions during the fiscal year was 4,919, and the number present on June 30, 1918 was 311.

The group of fresh air charities supervised by the State Board of Charities includes nine institutions which are substantially the summer homes of institutions for children, and other institutions providing summer outings for children referred by physicians and others, a greater portion of them being taken from their own homes, and in some instances being accompanied by their mothers. The latter group includes St. John's Guild, which maintains the "floating hospital," Helen C. Juilliard, in New York harbor, and Seaside Hospital, at New Dorp, Staten Island; the Seaside Home, of the Brooklyn Children's Aid Society, Coney Island, the Sanitarium for Hebrew Children, Rockaway Park and the fresh air work of the Children's Aid Society of New York city. The total number of beneficiaries of these institutions was 62,852, for whom an aggregate of 175,883 days' care was given.

Additional institutions of a charitable nature include sixteen day and evening schools maintained by the American Female Guardian Society and the Children's Aid Society, of New York city. The work generally includes a small amount of manual and industrial training and classes in kindergarten and primary grades, for which the city of New York pays a per capita daily allowance. The evening work, where conducted, is maintained for older boys and girls who are employed during the day, and an attempt is made in such classes to combine social features, including club work with scholastic or manual training. The children benefited are generally of the poorer classes living in the most crowded sections of the city for whom provision in the public schools is insufficient. As the city has made from time to time more adequate provision in the public schools in the various parts of the city, a number of the private schools of this character have been abandoned, and the time is probably near at hand when the remainder of these institutions will be discontinued, except possibly those that undertake the teaching of special classes of pupils, such as is being done, for instance, in the Rhinelander School, of the Children's Aid Society, in which crippled children only are received and an attempt made to teach them trades to which they in their handicapped condition can adapt themselves.

THE DEAF IN SCHOOL

Although this article relates particularly to school children deprived of hearing, a classification of the deaf population into two divisions will make for clarity. a. The first group comprises adults and children whose deafness occurring during early childhood or in the formative school years has made necessary specialized pedagogical technique in the public educational scheme and also an extended educational period for their benefit. The language and speech of the children and adults of this group are usually mechanical and peculiar, due to their acquirement through sight and touch unaided by the ear. The educational work with the group is accomplished during childhood and is recognized generally as a public function, being so administered in most of the states. b. The second group is made up of adults whose hearing becomes impaired at a time in life when the normal speech habit has been firmly formed, natural language acquired and education completed so that the resultant problem is either the reestablishment of a temporarily impaired function, or reeducation to insure continued, although modified, participation in social and economic activities. The period of instruction for those in this group whose hearing will be permanently impaired or lost altogether is usually fairly brief, but varies in time required according as it is necessary to establish a new means of direct communication for business and social purposes or to acquire in addition a new vocation. Educational training for this second group is also coming to be considered more and more a public function and it is especially significant that discharge from military service is not to be granted deafened soldiers and sailors of the American Expeditionary Forces until the reeducation, which is a part of the hospital and aftercare provision, is successfully accomplished.

SCHOOL ENROLLMENT

For boys and girls with defective hearing there are in New York State ten public residential schools besides one public day school, two special classes in public schools and one small private boarding school. The present total enrollment is 2,040, and 83 per cent of these pupils are receiving their education in the group of residential schools. In addition to the total enrollment, about twenty graduates of the schools are pursuing advanced courses in technical institutes, colleges and universities, and still other students have left the schools temporarily before completion of the course to participate in war industries.

EFFECTIVE TRAINING

The educational training given in these schools, as judged by the economic status of the pupils in after life is effectively planned and conducted; and a recent government census shows that the 44,807 "deaf and dumb" persons in the United States are engaged in a large variety of gainful employments. One-third of the total number of males are farmers, stock raisers and agricultural laborers, a proportion corresponding to that of the general male population; a small percentage are professional men and about one-half are employees in manufacturing and mechanical pursuits, building and hand trades to which "deaf-mutism" constitutes practically no bar.

PROGRESS AND PROBLEMS

The schools for the deaf had their beginning and have been built up during the past one hundred years through the efforts of teachers of more than ordinary pedagogical ability, shrewdness and powers of leadership, and, therefore, the methods which have been evolved in these schools, the present cultural and vocational program and general procedure command respect and confidence. Probably at no other time in their development has the educational work of the schools in New York State made more rapid strides than during the last few years, and certain of the more recent improvements in school organization and the technique of speech and language instruction are the result of a determination by superintendents and teachers to face facts and wherever weaknesses exist to study and correct them in a scientific manner. This attitude is a highly encouraging feature of the present status of this educational work.

However, there exist problems for the residential schools which should be carefully considered with a view toward changes which will assure the schools adequate opportunity and facilities in their work for the welfare and best interests of the deaf pupil. These problems concern speech instruction, financial support, the relative value of the residential and day schools, the number of such schools, the reorganization of one of the existing schools for the specialized care of retarded and backward deaf pupils, and, finally, the need for better salaries and more adequate normal training facilities.

SPEECH TEACHING IN THE SCHOOLS

Successful speech teaching requires unusual skill and experience and because of inherent difficulties and other kindred factors, the work in this State and elsewhere is practically in the experimental stage. To understand why some individuals do not believe in speech and lip reading for deaf children while others believe it best for their instruction and general training and why some declare the work is better accomplished by the public day school than by the residential school, a brief historical review of certain facts is enlightening.

In this country communication by speech was introduced into the educational training of the deaf for the first time over fifty years ago, but did not become at all general for some time. Where instruction was given by those who made a scientific study of it and related it properly to the course of study, progress was steady and justified the continued effort of the pioneers in the experiment.

Impeding the progress of speech teaching in the schools, however, were those who had no faith in the possibilities of speech instruction and who in the belief that it would take valuable time from language and other studies, including vocational training, opposed it and did what they could to mold public opinion in their belief. Others attempted speech teaching enthusiastically but did not give it a fair trial, introducing it into the curriculum as a sort of accomplishment to complete the regular course of study. School jealousy was aroused, for some schools claimed the use of the purely oral method in all honesty, yet accomplished less than some of the so-called combined schools where finger-spelling and the sign language in conjunction with speech were in vogue, but where, because the organization was superior and the speech teachers all specialists, the general educational results were better. In fact, some of the residential schools have had too small an enrollment and too meager an income to accomplish satisfactory results in this regard as proper school classification, a broad curriculum, well-equipped school facilities and a capable teaching force depend directly on income and number of pupils.

There have also been many pupils, both here and in other states where the law does not compel the deaf child to attend school, who have remained too brief a time or entered too late for satisfactory results, yet have been pointed out unfairly as products of "oral" or "combined system" schools by individuals who did not favor the method of instruction employed in one or the other group of schools. Parents and others in some instances have been dissatisfied with one residential school and been led thereby to class all such schools as poor. Some have compared the less efficient of the residential schools with the best of the day schools and because of the disparity proposed the general establishment of day schools, whereas there is a large percentage of deaf children whom the ordinary day school could efficiently take charge of only with the greatest difficulty, if at all. Furthermore, except for the occasional vacations and the summer intermissions, the pupils in residential schools are under discipline and training every hour of the day other than those given to sleep, and their physical welfare is promoted under the direction of experts. These potent influences are to be remembered whenever day schools and residential institutions are compared.

PERILS WHICH IMPEDE PROGRESS

It is the consensus of opinion of experts in this State that any measure which weakens the residential schools — and this the day school proposition for New York State recently written into the law threatens to do — will, in its final analysis, jeopardize continuous progress in this educational field and frustrate the very reason for change which is to promote the highest interests and welfare of the deaf. They are convinced that except in New York city, where the large public day school established with the coöperation of one of the leading residential schools of the country is in its eleventh year of highly successful work, day schools in this State will be unsatisfactory.

The equipment of a first-class school for the deaf is much more expensive and complicated than that of the ordinary public school for hearing pupils. In New York city small branch day schools or special classes for the deaf administered from the central school and, therefore, benefiting from close connection with the parent institution have nevertheless been found unsatisfactory. With one exception they have been discontinued by those in charge and the pupils transferred to the main division. Even much less satisfactory may prove a small isolated public day school or special class in an up-State town or small city and the expert teacher of the deaf will hesitate to associate herself with a school in which she knows that deaf pupils cannot, with all her ingenuity and experience, receive the benefits offered by the varied courses, educational activities and more effective classification of the large institutional schools.

TESTS OF WORK

A criticism of schools for the deaf is that of a psychologist working with a committee of representative educators from the National Association of Teachers of the Deaf, who in a recent publication criticized these schools for not apparently having kept in line with recent educational research and worked out psychological and other tests to establish age and grade norms for the scientific classification of deaf pupils. Individual teachers have done what they could in this direction, and in one school in this State a plan for the measurement of speech improvement has for four years been in operation. However, standard tests of mentality, ability to learn, progress in studies, etc., are unusually difficult to evolve and apply justly because the degree of deafness, age of onset and school attendance of the deaf child affect in a variety of ways the progress, school classification and methods followed. It may be added that the public schools for the hearing have in large degree depended, not on themselves, but on research bureaus of universities and like sources for just such scientific help, whereas the schools for the deaf are isolated and, therefore, have been compelled to depend on themselves almost entirely in all things, even the training of their own teachers; yet in some matters their courses and methods have antedated similar work in the public schools—as witness the early introduction of vocational and trades training into the curriculum for the deaf, and it is evident from this that the work of the residential schools has not always been fairly judged. A complete analysis of conditions, which limited space will not here permit, would show that the residential schools of New York State present fallow ground for cultivation if proper constructive measures are taken rather than those of temporary or palliative character.

STATE CONFERENCE OF TEACHERS

In June, 1918 there was held the first State conference of teachers of the deaf with about two hundred of the profession in attendance. During three consecutive days the Institution for the Improved Instruction of Deaf-Mutes in New York city, the place of meeting, through the medium of demonstration classes, gave a brief but fairly comprehensive exhibition of the methods in use and developed the course of study step by step from the first to the final school year at that institution. Those who witnessed the skill of the teachers, the many evidences of efficient school and household organization such as the excellent physical condition of the children, their pleasant behavior and the happy and stimulating environment under which they live eight months of the year could not but feel that such educational provisions represent a high standard of attainments, and should be fostered. At the conference also a committee made up of representative teachers was chosen to prepare a course of study looking toward uniformity and higher standards. This and other action taken have put into motion a strong force for improvement in these schools and, as stated above, the outlook is bright if measures are taken to finance the schools adequately and so justify the exaction of standard requirements in the way of collegiate and normal training of all teachers, a minimum standard of average educational results, living conditions and other essentials for the pupils.

FINANCIAL

and which, in some instances, have also the advantage of the larger numbers which make for more efficient organization. The per capita cost last year for maintenance in the schools varied from $368 to $546, and with salaries and wages the corresponding variation was from $124 to $274. Yet in the institutions where salary expenditures were highest the salaries paid would not have been sufficient to hold the teachers except for their loyalty and deep interest in the work. Furthermore no really satisfactory normal training course can be developed until salaries are made more satisfactory. Complicating the situation is the difficulty experienced in the collection of money from certain cities and counties upon which it is necessary to bring pressure and even resort to legal action. This is a constant source of irritation, worry and frequent financial loss to the institutions, and results often in a practical denial to the parent of the State's assurance of free education for his deaf child.

It therefore seems desirable that the State assume full responsibility for the tuition of all pupils on a per capita basis this coming year and that during the next eighteen months a comprehensive survey be made of financial and educational conditions in the residential group of schools with a view toward presenting recommendations for future legislation. Some of the points especially to be taken into consideration should be the questions raised last year by legislators as to whether there are too many schools in the residential group for highest efficiency in school organization, whether the taking over of one of the existing schools to centralize the training of retarded backward deaf children is necessary and desirable, together with other matters such as the adjustment of an equitable salary scale for teachers and the establishment of normal courses for preparatory and advanced pedagogical training.

RECOMMENDATIONS

To sum up, it is recommended:

1. That the Legislature of 1919 take action to abolish the differentiation between county and State charges and provide for the appointment of all deaf children enrolled in residential schools as State pupils.

2. That for the year 1919-1920 the per capita allowance for such State charges be increased from the present rate of $400 to $450, the increase to be used as an increase to the small salaries of teachers.

3. That the Legislature make a small appropriation to finance the expenses of a Commission of unpaid members to be appointed by the Governor and of assistants chosen by the Commission from the schools for the deaf and the State departments who shall make a careful survey of conditions and formulate and present to the Legislature of 1920 a constructive plan for its consideration and guidance in legislating in the future upon matters relating to the education of the deaf.

II. DIVISION OF ADULT WARDS AND DEPARTMENT OF STATE, ALIEN AND INDIAN POOR

Robert W. Hill, Superintendent of Division.

The supervision of Adult Wards, including alien and Indian dependents, together with the almshouses and other homes for the aged and infirm and the performance of the duties required by law or prescribed by the Board in connection with the care and final settlement of the poor, is intrusted to the Division of Adult Wards, including the Department of State and Alien Poor. The Superintendent of State and Alien Poor is in charge of this division and directs and supervises the visitation and inspection of the almshouses and other public institutions for the care of the aged and in addition supervises the incorporated homes for the aged which, though under private control, receive public money. Besides this relation to institutional care of the aged, the Superintendent of State and Alien Poor is by law charged with the control of State almshouses which are such county almshouses as are used, under contract, for the maintenance of "State poor persons." To him is also committed the care of Indian dependents and the removal of all such State, alien and nonresident poor as may under the provisions of the State Charities Law and the Poor Law be sent to their residential localities in other states or countries. Copies of all inspection reports are transmitted through the Secretary to the Commissioners and the Committee on Adult Wards for examination and recommendation to the Board for such further action thereon as may be deemed necessary. Records of all cases coming before this division are kept and the Superintendent of State and Alien Poor examines and certifies to the correctness of the accounts which pertain to the maintenance or the removal of State, alien, nonresident and Indian poor before such accounts are presented to the Finance Committee of the Board for approval. The Division of Adult Wards also maintains a record of all poor persons committed to almshouses as the Poor Law requires that duplicate records of all such commitments shall be made out by local officials and be transmitted to be filed by the State Board of Charities. These records are necessary for the investigations upon which the future disposition of committed poor persons depends and they enable the Statistical Division to compile valuable statistics showing some of the causes and centers of dependency and also its associated evils.

CLASSIFICATION OF REMOVAL OF POOR PERSONS

All State, nonresident and alien poor persons under public charge in charitable institutions are returned to their places of legal residence in other states or countries when such removal is to the advantage of the State. The statistics which follow show that very many persons in these classes are sent to their former homes, although many others for various reasons cannot be returned and continue to be maintained at public expense in the charitable institutions of New York. This is especially true of aliens from the countries now engaged in war. "Poor persons" in their relation to this division are divided into four groups: "State poor," "alien poor," "nonresident poor" and "Indian poor." The first of these groups is a special class of poor persons who are maintained in charitable institutions wholly at the expense of the State. The second is a nativity group based upon foreign citizenship and those who compose it are usually maintained at the expense of the counties in whose public charitable institutions they are found, having resided in such counties too long for maintenance at State expense. Sometimes, however, aliens belong to the "State poor" group. This is the case whenever they have not resided in any one county of the State for more than sixty days in the year immediately prior to their application for public relief. The third is a locality group and consists of poor persons not settled in the State of New York whose relatives and friends live in other states. The fourth is a racial group,—Indians whose maintenance under the laws of the State is to be provided for out of State funds.

Early in the history of the State Board of Charities it became necessary to classify the adult State wards in the almshouses and six years after its establishment the Legislature, by chapter 661 of the Laws of 1873, changed the status of a group of such poor persons who theretofore had been maintained at county expense and the State thereafter assumed direct responsibility for their care and final disposition. Prior to the enactment of this law entitled "An act to provide for the care and support of State paupers," the public relief of all poor persons without "settlement" in some town in the State of New York was a charge upon the county in which such persons became unable to maintain themselves.

The new law made a distinction between dependents who "had not resided for more than sixty days in any county of the State" and other non-settled poor persons, and the State Board of Charities was authorized to establish "State almshouses" in a number of counties. These are county almshouses which contract to care for "State poor persons" at a weekly per capita rate, and to these such "State paupers" were thereafter to be committed, the cost of their maintenance to be borne by the State itself. The term "State paupers" originally applied to this group has since been changed to "State poor." The removal of this class of dependents and other nonresident poor persons and aliens to their proper residential localities in other states and countries is made a special duty of the State Board of Charities, the removal of "alien poor" being specifically authorized by chapter 549 of the Laws of 1880 and its subsequent amendments. After the adoption of the Constitution of 1894 the general and special laws relating to public relief were revised and their provisions became part of the Poor Law enacted as chapter 225 of the Laws of 1896, which with amendments now constitutes chapter 42 of the Consolidated Laws.

REMOVALS

The removal work of the Department of State and Alien Poor is mainly done in three places; at the office of the Board in the Capitol, Albany; the New York City branch office, located in the Charities Building, 287 Fourth avenue; and at the Transfer Agency which is located at 241 Terrace, Buffalo, with the office of the Superintendent of the Poor of Erie county. The detailed reports of the deputy of the Superintendent of State and Alien Poor stationed in New York City and the Transfer Agent at Buffalo are included in the statistical part of the Board's report and are of interest as they show the condition and character of the nonresident poor referred by local authorities to the State Board of Charities for such action as may be deemed advisable. It will be seen from the consolidated statistics which follow that approximately three-fourths of the poor persons whose cases were considered during the fiscal year were between the ages of sixteen and forty-five years, and that the principal cause of dependency was sickness.

Since the Acts of 1873 and 1880, referred to, made the care and support of the "State poor" chargeable to the State and placed upon the State Board of Charities the responsibility of removing alien and nonresident paupers, 54,786 "State poor persons", 11,852 of whom were women, have been committed to the several "State almshouses. Of these, 33,086 were returned as nonresidents by the Department of State and Alien Poor to their homes and friends in other states. Besides these removals 12,435 "alien poor persons" have been repatriated since 1880 when the special authority to return pauper aliens to their homes in other countries was devolved upon the Board. In addition to the large number of aliens and State poor, 6,957 other "non-resident poor persons" were returned to their homes in other states. This shows that 52,478 poor persons, who were aliens and nonresidents, were removed from almshouses, hospitals and other charitable institutions in this State where in all probability they would have remained as permanent dependents upon public charity but for the beneficent intervention of the State Board of Charities. The average length of residence of permanent charges in almshouses is fifteen years. Taking this for granted, the expenditure which would have been involved in the permanent support of these 52,478 poor persons would have been, at a minimum of $2.00 per week, no less than $81,865,680. Removal is therefore a far more economical method of dealing with dependent aliens and nonresidents than maintenance in almshouses or other charitable institutions and from the humane standpoint it is also best for such persons as it restores them to their homes and to the care of friends. This should not be overlooked and in fact must be given greatest weight in the final decision as to the disposition to be made of public charges, for in the end the aim of the State should be expressed not in terms of dollars but in charity and social adjustment.

REMOVALS OF THE FISCAL YEAR

The State Board of Charities, through its Department of State and Alien Poor, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, returned 1,545 persons to their homes in other states or countries. Of these persons thus removed at public expense, 398 were "State" poor, 977 "nonresident" poor, and 190 were "alien" poor, 20 of the latter being also "State" poor. The 190 alien poor included 138 removed directly by the Board and 52 by the Board in cooperation with the United States Immigration Service. The preceding fiscal year the total removals were 1,312, of whom 241 were aliens, including 195 removed directly by the Board and 46 by the national authorities on investigation and initiative of the Department of State and Alien Poor, and the remainder, 1,071, were nonresidents or State poor persons properly settled in other states. During the fiscal period ending June 30, 1916, the total removals were 810, of whom 250 were aliens, including 183 removed directly by the Board and 67 through the government. The remainder, 560, were nonresidents or State poor persons from other states.

STATE POOR

"State poor persons" are those who have not resided more than sixty days in any county of the State within one year preceding the time of their application for public relief, and are maintained in certain almshouses by contract. Nearly all of this class of poor persons are either aliens or nonresidents of the State and out of a total of 730 provided for during the year, 398, of whom 20 were aliens, were removed from the State at public expense. The average expense of these removals was $11.22.

NONRESIDENT POOR

Dependent persons having a legal residence in other states or friends who will support them there, but who are not State poor persons because they have been in some county of New York for more than sixty days in the year preceding application for relief are, when deemed advisable, given transportation at State expense as "nonresident poor," their relief within the institution being at county expense. Of this class of dependents 977 were removed during the last fiscal year at an average expense of $7.79.

ALIEN POOR

Alien poor are those persons of foreign birth dependent upon public charity, who have not become naturalized citizens of the United States; 190 aliens were removed to their homes in other countries by the Department of State and Alien Poor. Of this number, 51 were removed by the United States Immigration Service without expense to the State, but after the Department had fully investigated each case. The expense of alien removals averaged $5.93. Excluding those removed by the government and others at no expense to the State, the cost per capita was $28.16. Considering that this expenditure is made only in cases of aliens likely to be permanently dependent from recognized incapacitating diseases or disabilities, the saving to the State is apparent, for it costs more than the average expense of removal to support a person in a hospital for one month.

The war has centered attention upon resident aliens and an intense anxiety has developed in all sections of the country owing to their numbers and to the fact that many have failed to take advantage of the opportunity to become naturalized although in the United States for many years. They are so widely distributed that as non-citizens they constitute a political and social problem in most of our communities, and this fact requires that greater attention than has heretofore been deemed necessary must be given hereafter to immigrants at the time of their arrival from foreign lands.

The most thorough physical examination now made of immigrants on arrival will result in the exclusion of many persons likely to become public charges, through inability to maintain themselves by labor, who would have passed inspection heretofore. This is highly desirable, for if incapable aliens are permitted to land and settle in our communities they will continue to affect social standards harmfully and be likely to lower the wages of competent laborers. Their moral influence is also more apt to be hurtful than that of other immigrants, and admission would tend to a decidedly less desirable community morale than now prevails.

In the same way the ordinary examinations as to mental impairment to which the immigrant was subjected heretofore upon his arrival were not sufficiently stringent to protect the public welfare; but the newer plans should result in the exclusion of most of the obviously insane and feeble-minded persons who would prove a menace to society, though even this searching examination is not likely to disclose the potential insane in whom mental instability while latent is none the less a menace. This tendency, as is well known, exists in many immigrants who are capable of passing the ordinary hurried examination even when made by expert alienists. If, in the application of the Immigration Law of 1917, a deeper probe is not applied to all aliens seeking admission to the United States the country will inevitably suffer from the admission of many immigrants whose mental abnormalities would otherwise not be disclosed. In many respects aliens of this class constitute a grave social danger, for although they may be strong and otherwise healthy their limited mental ability is liable to be permanently impaired by the rapidity with which they are compelled to meet new experiences.

The Great War has already made and must continue to make a profound emotional impression upon all the peoples who are in or near the theater of the mighty struggle. No one can, at this time, measure its influence upon the character of the nations and individuals who, being in the war zones, are most directly affected; for besides the political effect upon the nations involved it is beyond question that every emotion which individuals can feel is quickened into activity and therefore affected by the successive shocks to which they are subjected from day to day. This will be reflected here when the disabled sufferers arrive as immigrants. The basis of conduct, of social relations, the conceptions of morals and religion have in large measure been overthrown by the general acceptance in Central Europe of the dogma "Might is Right," with a resultant ethical confusion destructive of former ideals. The present tendency there is to an intense mental and spiritual confusion which in time is certain to result in a new attitude toward the former social order. For this reason it is to be expected that after the war is over, the armies demobilized and the discharged soldiers sent to their homes, the great question of actual benefit to the individual will be considered from a personal standpoint by all who have participated in the struggle especially those who suffered on the battle lines. Then will be the real test. In the lands which have been desolated, in every family whose members have suffered deeply and in the hearts of the multitude of crippled men, returned wrecks from the battles and trenches, the question of personal benefit, of why their lives have been doomed to pain and misery, is sure to develop a feeling of the strongest resentment, and in all probability an irreconcilable hatred of a form of government and a social order which made possible the horrors which have been precipitated upon the world by ambitions and jealousies.

One result of this reaction will be a desire to overthrow all governmental authority, with consequent disorder and anarchy, advanced by our increased number of immigrants from Europe who are undesirable from the standpoint of political ideals. Anarchists arriving from other lands are excludable by our Immigration Law as they neither sympathize with nor are content to subject themselves to the fundamental principles of American civilization. They prefer anarchy to the most liberal form of organized government and are advocates of and prepared to participate in political movements which look to the destruction of our most cherished institutions. Family and individual rights, social order, law and its impartial enforcement are to them merely terms which, whatever their value in the past, are no longer regarded by these workers of disorder as representative of desirable social conditions and therefore they assert should be discarded. Immigrants of this character if admitted to our country would plot constantly to destroy the pillars of our freedom and strive to substitute the ravings of ignorance and fanaticism for the developing power of schools, churches and an intelligent press. The world through countless centuries of struggle has attained its present stage of advancement, but the reactionary agencies represented in part by this class, if left unchecked, would smother civilization by the substitution of anarchy for law, and this would mean the triumph of brutality in which our recognized social rights and privileges would be replaced by the rule of beastliness, rapine and destruction.

Modern progress has been made by persistence and the competition of individuals and peoples. The spur of necessity has urged even laggards into efforts and the hope of reward has been a compelling stimulus. This spur of necessity will greatly stimulate immigration to this country and we must expect both desirables and undesirables among whom we shall find very many maimed adult dependents. It has been stated that up to the close of the year 1917 the total man power loss of all the armies in the field approximated ten million men, exclusive of the forces of Russia lost by demobilization. Of the ten millions it is estimated that 30 per cent have been killed in battle or died of wounds and disease and that an equal number have been permanently disabled so as to be incapable of further military service. An examination of the returned soldiers whose conditions caused discharge would no doubt show that approximately 20 per cent have lost limbs or have other disabilities of a permanent character which make them unfit for their former vocations or even for ordinary industrial employments of a competitive nature. Men who have lost hands or legs may be fitted with artificial limbs which can be utilized helpfully, but in most cases even in this land of opportunity disabilities of this character will be so great a handicap that some form of assistance or reëducation will be necessary for American soldiers.

Conditions in European countries after the war will be exceedingly trying for the able-bodied and their families, and much more so for the disabled, and consequently those who can do so will seek homes in this country in the hope that labor conditions and character of work will be better, opportunities for earning a livelihood more numerous and that in any event public and private charities can assist the unfortunate more generously than in their native lands.

If for half a century rulers of Middle Europe have striven feverishly for world domination, both political and commercial, there is every reason to believe that the final military and political defeat so near at hand will intensify the commercial effort, and the energy, determination and intelligence now devoted to the extension of autocratic militarism will then concentrate upon the rivalries of peace for the control of world commerce — “the golden girdle of the earth.”

The United States must safeguard its future. It is not enough to win the war triumphantly, and that victories on the battlefield shall result in the unconditional surrender of the enemies of liberty and democracy — the great success of our armies must be followed by plans for the future which shall make another war of the same character impossible, and also assure a full measure of protection to the American people in the coming struggles for commercial supremacy and civic independence when our country is called upon to “hold its place in the sun.”

Industrial, commercial, economic and social activities will all be involved and every element of weakness must, therefore, be eliminated, so far as possible, and no unnecessary burdens be carried. Pauperism and crime must be checked and their sources closed, especially those of other lands, and although our own dependents receive the attention and care needed, the number of dependents must not be permitted to increase by the admission of pauper and anti-social multitudes from foreign lands.

INDIAN POOR

The total number of Indian poor provided for in almshouses or asylums during the fiscal year was 85, as compared with 90 the preceding year, and the expenditures on account of Indian relief amounted to $8,348.39.

Dependent Indians are legal charges upon the State itself, and not upon its subdivisions, and, therefore, in accordance with the provisions of the Poor Law, the administration of relief to indigent Indians is under the direction of the State Board of Charities. The Poor Law and the rules of the Board in regard to Indian relief require that destitute Indians, if capable of being moved, shall be cared for in almshouses, but temporary outdoor relief is given in cases requiring immediate assistance, and when the Indian cannot be moved to the nearest almshouse.

As the Indians of New York are not taxable citizens of the State the officials of towns and counties are reluctant to expend local funds upon them. They have a peculiar status, being mainly subject to the Federal laws only and usually living upon reservation lands which cannot be sold. Approximately 7,000 reside in the State, the majority of whom are in poor circumstances, especially liable to debilitating disease and contagious epidemics, hence a considerable amount must be expended each year for competent medical service.

Smallpox appeared upon several reservations during the year and proved difficult of control, although quarantine was promptly established and the aid of the State police secured to maintain it. The reservations were closely guarded, and by the vigilance of the officials the spread of the disease was finally checked. The unsanitary condition of many Indian homes tends to recurring outbreaks of what are known as "filth diseases," and among the Indians cases of these are frequent. The same is true of respiratory diseases; pneumonia, influenza, and tuberculosis causing many deaths each year, especially among the older Indians, while deaths of children from colds, influenza, and measles occur in consequence of exposure, constitutional weakness, lack of proper care and shelter, and the constant insufficiency of good food.

Many Indian children living on the several reservations should be in boarding schools and provision made for their protection. There is no appropriation for the support of deaf-mute Indian children in schools for the deaf in cases where ordinarily the support would be at county expense. There should be an amendment to the Education Law so that all such children under twelve years of age shall be maintained from the funds made available for the education of State pupils in residential schools.

The State maintains only one institution for dependent Indian children—the Thomas Indian School—and as it is located at Iroquois, in Erie county, the needy children from the reservations in the eastern part of the State are seldom placed in the institution. The management of the school would be glad to receive the children from the St. Regis reservation, but there are more than enough dependent children on the western reservations to fill the school to its utmost capacity, hence some additional provision for pupils should be made so that the needy orphan Indian children of the St. Regis reservation may have an equal opportunity for an education with that enjoyed by the Indian children of the Seneca, Cattaraugus, Tonawanda, Allegany, and Onondaga reservations. If a kindergarten building is provided for the Thomas Indian School it will meet this great need in part and enable the school to receive many of the young children who now so greatly need the care of the State. If this building cannot be erected until the war is over and greater use is not made of other educational institutions, one-half of the dependent Indian children will grow up without adequate education and many probably die from neglect before maturity, as social conditions upon the reservations make difficult the survival of unprotected children.

If educational institutions under public or private control could be utilized for this class of children whenever the Thomas Indian School is filled, a special fund being appropriated for the maintenance of such pupils, it would prove a public benefit, and the children of the St. Regis reservation have equal opportunity with others for practical training.

HOMES FOR THE AGED

The great majority of the inmates of homes for the aged are beyond the work period of life and therefore unfitted for social activity. Most of them suffer from some chronic form of disease, and even those who are not above sixty years of age have either mental, physical or moral weaknesses which make them dependent. In fact many persons who ultimately become inmates of almshouses or prisons have throughout life been incapable of efficient self-direction, and although in their earlier adult years they may have managed to earn enough to provide food, clothing and shelter for themselves, their lack of stamina inevitably caused their gravitation to charitable or penal institutions. They are not mental defectives, for their endowment, if developed and used, would be sufficient but they have either inherited or acquired an unwillingness to persevere even for the acquisition of necessary things or to a status which they know to be highly desirable. Such persons break down under the strain of protracted effort, and, although they may partially recover from time to time, end their days as inmates of public or private institutions.

Many of this class are physically defective to such a degree that they cannot be profitably employed. When physical inferiority is coupled with laziness, mental dullness, illiteracy, or other undesirable conditions, which make laborers unacceptable to employers, the unfortunates either become vagrant beggars or enter the almshouse which is the final refuge of the incapable.

Another cause of dependence is the inability, due to ignorance, which makes for chronic unemployment. Many persons never learn the technique of any form of labor—hence their service never commends itself to employers and when work slackens they are the first to be discharged. When discharge is repeated at short intervals the result upon the mind is certain, the habit of idling is formed, and soon unemployment becomes more welcome than labor. As an original cause this inefficiency or ignorance of how to do something well must be differentiated from the ordinary condition of feeble-mindedness, for it is due mainly to a lack of training early in life when the perceptions and physical powers are readily coordinated and habits of skill acquired. It differs also from mental instability, a condition usually due to disease, which makes persistence in labor uncertain, although under supervision many of the insane work cheerfully. The ignorant laborer does what he is told to do, but the result of his work is unsatisfactory in comparison with that of others. He is clumsy in whatever he attempts and necessarily is assigned the hardest and least remunerative tasks — for he can do nothing expertly or well.

But the untrained ignorant individual who ultimately finds a refuge in the almshouse must not be classed as feeble-minded. He differs from the imbecile because he is not defective mentally. However, we recognize the fact that feeble-mindedness is one of the major causes of pauperism and that many inmates of almshouses and other charitable institutions belong to the mentally defective class. The natural endowment of this class is insufficient for self-protection under ordinary social conditions, hence they are dependent for care and maintenance, first upon relatives, and then upon the public. Their mental and moral weakness is always aggravated by an unsatisfactory environment, and frequently therefore the family home life of the feeble-minded tends to establish habits which destroy all hope of self-support and necessitate custodial segregation. The State custodial asylums established for the care of the feeble-minded have a limited capacity, and for those who cannot be received and cared for in these institutions there is no public provision other than the almshouse. Hence, the statistics of the city, county and town almshouses, show an increasing number of mentally defective persons received each year. It is true that many almshouse inmates classed as feeble-minded are not defectives but only aged persons whose minds have weakened and who therefore should be classed as seniles; but even excluding these there still remain many inmates who by reason of inheritance or disease have throughout life been mentally so subnormal as to be incapable of self-care.

In this connection, too, it is apparent to those who observe the influence of political excitement, labor competitions and other social strains upon nerves and mind that the numerous cases of insanity among men and women under forty years of age are to a large extent due to these factors and it is also clear that the inability for self-support of many almshouse inmates under fifty years of age is likewise a result of the same influences. In fact as approximately 54 per cent of the patients in our State Hospitals for the Insane are cases of dementia praecox, it is evident that the early nervous and mental breakdown traceable directly to social causes is chiefly responsible for the great economic burden imposed upon the commonwealth by the necessity for the maintenance of charitable institutions. In fact there is reason to believe that although habitual unemployment cannot be diagnosed as either mental defect or insanity, the irritation, distaste for work, unrest and instability characteristic of tramps, vagrants, able-bodied chronic almshouse inmates under fifty years of age and roving paupers clearly indicates a form of dementia which unaccompanied though it may be by psychotic manifestations is yet disastrous in its effects upon the individual. Delusions, suspicions, jealousies, and obsessions are frequent among vagrants and almshouse inmates, and while these manifestations are usually controllable and do not lead to or necessitate commitment to the State hospitals, they evidence a close relationship between the causes which require the segregation of many of the inmates of these public charitable institutions and those which result in the commitment of a large proportion of the men and women sent by the courts to prisons, jails, penitentiaries and reformatories.

Requests are frequently received for assistance in the selection of suitable institutions for aged persons whose friends are willing to pay for their maintenance. Sometimes such aged persons are suffering from incurable disease which can not well be cared for in a family home; others have become senile and in a measure uncontrollable by their families; while others, having lost all relatives, desire to obtain admission to some institution which will accept them, they to render such property as they may possess as a compensation for care and maintenance. There are few institutions to which such persons can be referred for most of the homes for the aged have been organized to meet the needs of particular localities and by their rules limit admission to localities or to membership in a particular church. Ordinary sanatoria are too expensive. They are usually organized to be profitable and therefore can not be expected to take in patients without receiving large compensation and the class of individuals who need institutional care for which payment will be made by relatives represents few of those persons whose care could properly be undertaken as an act of charity. There is need of another group of institutions midway between the expensive sanatorium and the almshouse and probably in the future these will be established to meet the requirements of aged persons, mental incompetents and incurably infirm patients who having a little property are unwilling to go to almshouses as they are not indigent, yet are unable to pay the charges of the sanatoria, and at the same time are debarred from existing Homes.

Advanced age is usually accompanied by some form of infirmity or disease which decreases the ability of the individual to provide for himself, or, if he has a family, those dependent upon him. The original intention of the statutes making provision for public assistance was to meet the problem of old age fairly and, in fact, the first effort at the classification of dependents divided them into three general classes; the aged and infirm, the diseased and children, the largest group being the first. The three original groups have since been divided into many, and to enforce classification dependents are now in special institutions adapted to their needs. Hospitals of many kinds provide for the sick while orphan children and others who from various causes are compelled to depend upon the public for care are placed in homes, schools, asylums, or, happily, foster homes, in which an opportunity is given for training and development under the stimulus of normal family life.

For the aged, however, public and private relief recognizes the necessity of institutional care when home life is no longer possible. Infirm, crippled, and aged dependents need more than any other classes of public wards the shelter and assistance which almshouse institutions give, when relatives can no longer be relied upon to safeguard them when they are worn out and near the close of life. The need of this class has made an appeal to the benevolence of individuals, associations and churches. As a consequence many homes for the aged are entirely supported by individuals of means, by churches, fraternal organizations and special benevolent associations.

In the State of New York the homes for the aged are divided into three groups. First: those established, controlled and wholly supported by the public. Second: institutions under private control but in receipt of public money. Third: the group of institutions above spoken of, under private control and wholly supported by private funds.

In the first group are homes for the aged wholly supported by the State, or by counties, cities or towns.

These are: The New York State Soldiers and Sailors' Home, located at Bath, Steuben county, and the New York State Woman's Relief Corps Home, at Oxford, Chenango county; the county, city and town almshouses and municipal lodging houses, which as local institutions are maintained by the county, city or town in which they are located.

In the second group are homes for the aged under private management but receiving public funds; there are twenty-five such institutions, most of them affiliated with religious denominations.

The third group of institutions, those wholly under private management and not receiving public moneys, do not report to the State Board of Charities and under a decision of the Court of Appeals are not subject to its visitation and inspection. Some in this group are, like many in the second group, under denominational control and represent activities of particular churches. Others, however, have been established as memorial homes, and their income is from bequests or special "foundations" or other forms of endowment. A third division of this third group covers the homes maintained by fraternal orders. All these institutions do a work which is necessary and none should be exempt from public supervision through the visitation and inspection of State officials.

STATE HOMES FOR THE AGED

The two State institutions are an outgrowth of philanthropic activities which began during the Civil War and have continued to the present.

NEW YORK STATE SOLDIERS AND SAILORS' HOMEBath, Steuben County*Established 1878

Commandant: Col. S. M. Morgan.

This institution has capacity for 1,400 inmates. The number of inmates July 1, 1917 was 1,148; the admissions were 718; total enrollment for the year, 1,866. There were 659 discharged, and 160 died, leaving at the end of the year a membership of 1,047. The average number present during the year was 1,005, and the weekly cost of support, including the value of home and farm products consumed, $6.30; excluding these, $5.99.

During the Civil War it became necessary to provide for disabled veterans who for various reasons were unable to care for themselves. Some, wholly incapacitated by wounds, required the constant service of attendants; others, maimed, blind, or otherwise greatly weakened or handicapped, needed a home in which they could do light work and receive necessary medical assistance from time to time. Private philanthropy recognizing the necessity attempted to meet the need and provided some aid for the dependent veterans, but this was neither sufficient nor of a permanent character and Chapter 223, Laws of 1863, constituted a number of eminent citizens, headed by Lieutenant General Winfield Scott, Major General George B. McClellan, and Major General John E. Wool, a body corporate under the name of "The Soldiers' Home" for the purpose of providing maintenance for officers and soldiers who have served in the volunteer forces raised or furnished by or from the State of New York who by reason of wounds or other disabilities received or produced in the service of the United States, or of the State of New York, shall be unable to support themselves, and all who having been honorably discharged shall be decrepid or homeless in their old age." The governor, lieutenant-governor, comptroller and secretary of state were made ex-officio members of the board of trustees so that from the beginning it was practically a State institution although dependent in large measure upon private donations.

This act was followed at the same session by the enactment of Chapter 224 of the Laws of 1863 which provided "means of relief for the sick and wounded soldiers of the State of New York in the United States service" whereby agents of the State were appointed to investigate the condition of sick, wounded, furloughed and discharged soldiers of the State and secure means of relief for them "while being transported to and from their homes" and the sum of $200,000 was appropriated for the purpose. The State was awake to the necessity of prompt action, and aware of the fact that there was great need of immediate and ample provision for the returning veterans and the two statutes were therefore enacted at the same time and thus the work of the incorporators of "The Soldiers' Home" was correlated with that of the agents.

Thirteen years later Chapter 270 of the Laws of 1876 incorporated "The Grand Army of the Republic Soldiers' Home of New York," but the act was amended by Chapter 75 of the Laws of 1877, and then the construction of the first building upon the grounds at Bath was begun. Chapter 48 of the Laws of 1878 transferred the institution to the control of the State and it became "The New York State Soldiers and Sailors' Home" with the full authority and management vested in a board of trustees to be appointed by the Governor, with the approval of the Senate, and the Home as it exists today became a State institution.

For several years after the opening of the first building the population of the institution increased slowly, for the great majority of the survivors of the Civil War were then in the prime of life; but as the years passed and the average age of the survivors of the Civil War neared the seventy-year mark, their vigor and ability for self-care declined and consequently the number of applications for admission increased rapidly. Hence additional buildings became necessary from time to time until by 1905 the Home had bed capacity for approximately 2,400 disabled veterans. Since then fire has destroyed three of the dormitory buildings and the number of veterans maintained has gradually decreased. During the fiscal year the enrollment numbered 1,866 whose average age was over 75 years, hence the Home is now practically a hospital for these aged and enfeebled men whose disabilities require the attention of physicians and, in nearly 500 cases, constant care in the main hospital and its annex.

During the fiscal year 160 of the members of the Home out of 1,866 who had been under care, died at the institution. As these veterans of the Civil War decrease in numbers their places are being taken by survivors of the Spanish-American war and it is manifest that as a result of the present great European conflict in which more than 150,000 of the young men of the State of New York already are participants there will be need of all the buildings and dormitories which the State now maintains at the institution.

The maintenance expenses for the past fiscal year were $329,275.72, besides which home products valued at over $15,000 were consumed. The site contains 375 acres of land with buildings thereon which have cost nearly a million dollars.

The grounds have been improved during the year, but the peculiar location of the buildings and park, at the foot of steep hills, makes constant attention necessary to prevent the storm water washing away the soil. As the cemetery is on a plateau behind and above the general hospital, its walks and driveways suffer from the same cause, but have been maintained in good order during the year. The land set apart for burial purposes is extensive, but is now nearly filled with graves, as a large number of deaths have taken place at the Home in recent years.

The farmhouse, erected to take the place of that destroyed by fire, was completed and equipped last year and now provides quarters for the farmer's family and necessary Home laborers. The steam pipes which heat the buildings, protected by asbestos last year, are now in better condition than at the time of the last report, and in extremely cold weather the barracks can now be kept comfortably warm, which was not possible under former conditions.

NEW YORK STATE WOMAN'S RELIEF CORPS HOMEOxford, Chenango County*Established 1894

President Board of Managers: Mrs. Georgianna Griffith, 54 East 59th street, New York city.

Secretary: Mrs. Mary E. Seely, 719 East Genesee street, Syracuse.

Superintendent: Col. James S. Graham.

This Home has capacity for 230 inmates. The number of inmates present July 1, 1917, was 191 and 62 were admitted, making the total number under care 253. During the year 27 died and 68 were discharged, leaving, June 30, 1918, 158 inmates, of whom 25 were men and 133 women. The average number was 181, and the average weekly cost of support, including the value of home and farm products consumed, $8.29; excluding this value, $6.76.

Like the New York State Soldiers and Sailors' Home at Bath, the Woman's Relief Corps Home at Oxford was established for a special class of dependents, related directly to the national army organized during the Civil War, and it was originally due to the activity and private benevolence of the friends of aged veterans and their families. It is in fact an outgrowth of the patriotic work organized by the Woman's Relief Corps of the State of New York which association is closely affiliated with the Grand Army of the Republic. The women recognized the urgent need of some provision for the relief, not only of dependent disabled veterans, but also for their dependent female relatives, and by chapter 468 of the Laws of 1894 they secured the establishment of "The New York State Home for the Aged, Dependent Veteran and his Wife, Veterans' Mothers, Widows and Army Nurses, Residents of New York," and also obtained from the Legislature an appropriation of $2,000, which was followed by an appropriation of $25,000 in 1895, and another of $50,000 in 1896, whereby land was purchased, plans made for the buildings and the work definitely begun.

The cost of maintenance the past fiscal year was $63,680.83; and in addition there was expended for extraordinary repairs and other improvements, $1,401.58.

Most of the counties in the State were represented in the Woman's Relief Corps Home during the fiscal year. There are new admissions whenever room is available and no doubt the Home will continue to be taxed to its full capacity for years to come.

The State intended that this Home should be homelike in all its arrangements and the Woman's Relief Corps of the State has, with commendable and patriotic spirit, decorated the rooms and local corps have in many instances supplied them with suitable furniture, so that the comfort of the inmates, both men and women, is assured. The advanced age of the members of the Home makes them all infirm; many are bedridden and require constant personal attention, careful nursing and medical treatment, so that the Home is practically a hospital where all the work must be done by employees. Like the New York State Soldiers and Sailors' Home at Bath, the mission of this institution is extended by the great war, and before long its accommodations must provide for disabled army nurses and other women whose arduous duties abroad cause breakdown.

COUNTY, CITY AND TOWN ALMSHOUSES

These institutions in the several counties of the State have been under the close supervision of the Board during the past year, and in addition to the inspections made by the two inspectors assigned to this special duty, many of them have been visited by the president, commissioners and secretary of the Board. The stimulating effect of visitations by commissioners and officials of the Board is apparent in the almshouses and both employees and inmates frequently speak of such visits long after their occurrence. The latter feel they are not without a friendly public interest, and are more contented than they would be without this periodic contact with representatives of the State.

It is gratifying to report that as a whole these institutions are doing satisfactory work and desirable improvements have been made to the equipment and buildings. The superintendents, keepers and matrons are competent administrators who try to make the inmates contented and, as a rule, succeed. Occasionally some may need discipline, which is given usually in the form of deprivation of some privilege, but this is seldom necessary as the rules established for the government of the almshouses are mild and obeyed usually without question.

The war has made it difficult to secure or retain employees for almshouse service in the rural districts. The farm work is being done with less help than ever before, as the high wages paid by manufacturing plants has attracted the best laborers and, as in one almshouse, two men must now do all the work which required four laborers heretofore. The inmates are usually called upon to help, but they are seldom able to work on the farms, and the farm production falls below the usual amounts in consequence.

Almshouse inspection reports are classified and graded as to plant and administration. Institutions which are practically without defects are placed in Class I, those with few or less important defects in Class II, and those having many or very serious defects in Class III. For example, one almshouse is graded second class in administration because it may be unclean or the dietary is unsatisfactory, and third class in plant in consequence of the physical condition of old buildings, but superintendents and keepers who are doing well with old buildings and inadequate equipment receive high rating on administration and the credit due for cleanliness and order, even though the plants may be graded low.

THE NEW YORK CITY HOMES FOR THE AGED AND INFIRM

The almshouses of the city of New York were originally three separate institutions established as county asylums for the poor and needy of New York, Kings and Richmond counties when New York City was confined to Manhattan Island and was within the boundaries of New York county. The city almshouse of New York, originally located in Greenpoint, later removed to a plot of ground fronting what is now City Hall Park, was finally located on Blackwell's Island after two other transfers from the original location. The Kings County Almshouse established in Flatbush and the Richmond County Almshouse on Staten Island came under the control of the city when its boundaries were extended to include these counties and are now branches of the New York City Home for the Aged and Infirm. Queens county formerly had an almshouse but when Queens county became part of the city its almshouse property was sold.

From the original almshouse of New York City has developed the present public hospital system which includes the hospitals of the Department of Public Charities, the institutions controlled by the Board of Trustees of Bellevue and Allied Hospitals and the hospitals of the City Department of Health. All the hospitals, especially those on Blackwell's Island, are closely related to the City Home as their patients are dependents who frequently remain as public charges for long terms and many of the poor committed to the almshouses are thereafter transferred to the hospitals for treatment.

THE NEW YORK CITY HOME FOR THE AGED AND INFIRM

Manhattan Division

The Blackwell's Island division of the City Home has capacity for 3,000 inmates yet from time to time it becomes necessary to transfer inmates to the Farm Colony on Staten Island if they do not require hospital care. This is especially true in the inclement fall and winter seasons when the census of the institution is always greater than the actual bed capacity, requiring more frequent transfers to relieve the overcrowding.

Some of the buildings are quite old and crowded together. Little room is now available on this Island either for additional structures or for the wider separation desirable for the dormitories. Part of the Island is occupied by the Workhouse under control of the Department of Correction. If that institution is removed to Riker's Island, the buildings and grounds can be utilized for almshouse purposes and be a great benefit, for it would relieve this almshouse from its periodic overcrowding and separate the aged and infirm inmates from the prisoners.

This Board has heretofore recommended that Blackwell's Island be used exclusively for infirmary and hospital purposes and that dependents who do not require hospital care be transferred to the Farm Colony, but the Blackwell's Island Home needs enlargement and additional dormitory buildings for both inmates and employees.

One of the difficulties which has hindered satisfactory administration is the character of help employed. A larger and more modern service building with good dormitories for the help would attract a better class of help if the wages are increased, but heretofore the pay for attendants has been so unattractive that the hospitals and other city institutions are compelled to depend upon inefficient and unreliable help. In fact, many are from the inmates and periodically fall back into the inmate class. The same is true in the two branches of the City Home and until better attendants are employed—men and women who are efficient and reliable—the administration of the City Home will continue handicapped.

NEW YORK CITY FARM COLONY

Staten Island

The rated capacity of this branch of the New York City Home for the Aged and Infirm is for 1,200 inmates. The growth of the city requires that this capacity be increased by the erection of a number of additional modern dormitory buildings. This will prevent periodic congestion in the Brooklyn and Blackwell's Island Homes as the Farm Colony has sufficient room for such buildings and also land for labor colonies where the men capable of outdoor work can be employed. The erection of a central building for industrial activities is also necessary and if work plans can be carried out the farm and indoor activities should reduce the per capita cost. Many of the inmates both men and women are capable of good work under supervision and selected occupations would transform many inmates from idle dependents to eager workers whose labor would be a source of income to the city.

Complaint was made at the Farm Colony and the other city institutions that competent employees, especially orderlies, cooks and attendants are difficult to obtain. In one large building it was stated a matron had to do all the cooking for nearly two weeks and when a cook was finally obtained it was found that she was too old to work independently and required the constant supervision of the matron. Another complaint at this institution was that inadequate transportation facilities caused the frequent delay of necessary supplies which created discontent among the inmates and employees. If this condition continues it will make the administration problem more difficult. It has been suggested by people who live in the neighborhood of the Farm Colony that an extension of the trolley line to the Farm Colony would be a great convenience and if this extension can be brought about complaints of delay of supplies would end, but if prompt motor service can be given it will enable the institution to maintain an adequate supply of food and other necessities at all times even without the trolley extension.

THE NEW YORK CITY HOME FOR THE AGED AND INFIRM.

Brooklyn Division

This division of the City Home is associated with and under the same general management as the Kings County Hospital. The plant is inadequate and the buildings old, poorly arranged and usually overcrowded. It has a capacity for 1,300 beds, but as in the other City Homes in the winter time the census is frequently very much higher than the capacity and there is need of large additional dormitory buildings, one for female inmates and another for employees. The latter building would make the service more attractive to attendants and helpers and tend to hold good employees in the service.

Improvements should also include a modern service building, general day rooms, and provision for light industrial work to be carried on by some of the inmates. The fire protection of the women's building is inadequate as heretofore pointed out by this Board. Many of the inmates are helpless from chronic ailments and therefore the fire protection should be improved and the Home made absolutely safe in this regard.

The classifications of the New York City Home for the Aged and Infirm in its three divisions are Blackwell's Island Home and the Farm Colony Home, second class in both administration and plant; the Brooklyn Home, administration first class and plant second class. These grades must continue until remedied by improvements and it is hoped that the three divisions will soon be brought up to first class both for plant and administration as required by their importance and the character of their work for the city.

THE MUNICIPAL LODGING HOUSE

432-438 East 25th Street, New York City

The seven-story fireproof building of the Municipal Lodging House can accommodate over 1,000 lodgers, although in the inclement season of last winter over 2,400 persons were on several occasions sheltered over night. The care which a large building in constant use requires has not been given to this Lodging House, and although comparatively new the building shows wear. Small repairs have been neglected involving later great expense to the city. This institution is essential and therefore should be maintained in first class condition and its equipment be kept adequate for the service demands as it has an important place in the city's provision for the needy. It opens its doors nightly to the homeless and frequently gives shelter to men and women who require only temporary assistance. Strangers in the city who find themselves unable to find lodgings over night are frequently taken to the Municipal Lodging House by policemen or sent there by kindly individuals, and sometimes whole families evicted from their tenements are given room until permanent quarters can be found for them elsewhere. The Lodging House can serve as a Rescue Home well equipped for a great social service. In this time of periodic epidemics it is important that ample provision be made for the isolation of all applicants for lodging who have communicable diseases and their spread be prevented by sanitary precautions, and the dishes, bedding and other material through which disease may be communicated carefully cleansed after use; but the laundry work should all be done in the institution and the equipment be sufficient to carry on the daily work independently of the Island institutions.

PRIVATE HOMES FOR ADULTS

Of this class of institutions only the twenty-five subject to the visitation and inspection of the Board are referred to here — “The Auburn Home for the Friendless” is located at 46 Grant avenue, Auburn, Cayuga county, N. Y. Eight are in Buffalo, Erie county, viz.: “The Lutheran Church Home for the Aged and Infirm,” 217 East Delevan avenue; “King’s Daughters Home,” 134 Mariner street; “The Home for the Friendless,” 1500 Main street; “The Lutheran Hospice,” 115 Glenwood avenue; St. Francis Asylum,” 337 Pine street, with branches at Gardenville and Williamsville; “The Society for Deaconess’ Work,” 218–230 Kingsley street; “The Church Home of the German Evangelical Churches,” Broadway and Genesee street (Forks), and the “Orthodox Jewish Old Folks’ Home,” 210 Porter avenue. In the borough of Brooklyn, New York city. “The Church Home for the Blind” is located at 550 Washington avenue; “The Ozanam Home for Friendless Women,” 46–48 Concord street, and “The Society for the Aid of Friendless Women and Children” (Shelter Department), 20 Concord street. In the borough of Bronx there are two of these institutions — “The Lincoln Hospital and Home” at East 141st street and Concord avenue, and “The Peabody Home for Aged and Indigent Women,” at 2064 Boston road. “The Salvation Army Rescue and Industrial Home for Women” is at 316–318 East 15th street, borough of Manhattan, New York city. “The Lakeview Home” is at Fingerboard road, Arrochar, Richmond. At Binghamton, Broome county, N. Y., is “The Refuge of the City of Binghamton” at 64 Fairview avenue. “The Cortland County Home for Aged Women” is on Main street, Homer, N. Y. At North Amityville, Long Island, N. Y., is “St. Catharine’s Infirmary.” At Ogdensburg, St. Lawrence county, located on King street is “The City Hospital and Orphan Asylum” with its department for the Aged. In Rochester, Monroe county, “St. Ann’s Home for the Aged” is at 1971 Lake avenue and “The Church Home of the Protestant-Episcopal Church” at 509 Mount Hope avenue. Syracuse has two of this class of institutions. “The Jewish Home for the Aged of Central New York” located at 712½ Irving avenue and the “Syracuse

Home Association" on Hawley and Townsend streets. The last in the group is "The Bethesda Home," 1627 Third avenue, Watervliet, N. Y.

These institutions are peculiar in that a number of them are not exclusively for adults nor entirely for dependent persons, although all receive public charges. Some, for example, "The Salvation Army Rescue and Industrial Home for Women," in the borough of Manhattan, New York city, has a hospital department used principally for maternity cases and therefore among the inmates at the time of the last inspection were 17 children under 10 years of age. Similar conditions exist at "The Refuge of the City of Binghamton" in which, of 11 inmates, 4 were under 2 years of age and 6 others, all girls, between 15 and 20 years of age. The remaining inmate was 22 years of age. The "King's Daughters' Home," Buffalo, N. Y., is a small institution intended principally for emergency use and has a capacity for 16 inmates. Some of these at the time of inspection were properly reformatory cases placed in the institution for delinquency. In all these institutions, inmates are usually accepted because the Home is able to provide for the special needs of those in whose behalf applications for admission are made. Under such circumstances strict classification is difficult and several of the Homes fall into two or more of the special groups assigned to the Board's administrative divisions.

These institutions are doing excellent work, providing for many persons who cannot be so well cared for in almshouses or homes for the aged maintained by the public. Philanthropic men and women are interested in their maintenance and management and seek to keep them up to high standards of efficiency. They deserve commendation for the work which they are doing in a field for which the public has as yet made no adequate provision and which meets a real social need.

III. DIVISION OF MENTAL DEFECT AND DELINQUENCY

Committee on Mental Defect and Delinquency: Commissioner Lewis, Chairman; the President, ex-officio; Commissioners Higley, Marquand, Kevin and Arnold.

Chester Lee Carlisle, M. D., Superintendent of Division.

The Division of Mental Defect and Delinquency comprises State institutions for the care of mental defectives and epileptics; city and private institutions caring for the same class; State reformatories for women, and private reformatory institutions receiving public funds. This division also includes the Bureau of Analysis and Investigation.

During the first year of its existence under the reorganization of this Board, this division has made an attempt to gather and correlate all the best known administrative and executive procedures by which it might be guided in its effort to erect and standardize ideals believed to be essential for the modern and adequate determination, treatment, care and training of the mentally subnormal types coming under its view. With this end in view, data has been collected and ideas formulated which would serve as a basis for a standard of desirability as to registration, census, commitment, institution care, parole, colonization, supervision of life outside of the institution, and all other related matters in which the State Board of Charities is interested. Many ideas along these lines have been promulgated in the past and there has been much discussion as to what constituted desirable features of administration and care. There were many conflicting opinions, yet but little had been produced in the way of definite standardization of methods which might be used in a state-wide manner. So far as the determination of mental defect is concerned, there were those who held that only individuals showing gross feeble-mindedness should be classed as such, which would leave out of consideration the necessities of the higher moron types. Conception of the importance of determining and discriminating constitutional deviations in the affective field has been inadequate, all of which is of the greatest practical value in view of the fact that those persons showing essentially anti-social or delinquent conduct are recruited more especially from this type of mental defect. Whatever plans for future development of the care of mental defectives be adopted by the State, they should be based upon grounds which include the scientific investigation of every phase of the problem. There is no doubt that it is absolutely desirable to determine all etiological factors as to heredity, prenatal and postnatal acquired disease or disorder. Each such factor in its own sphere must receive adequate scientific investigation without bias or preconceived notions on the part of the investigator. Further, all plans for future procedure along these lines should be so formulated as to allow not only for changes which will inevitably come through increased knowledge on this subject, but in order that all our efforts should tend to develop a modern spirit of research and constructive clinical work among mentally subnormal types.

THE COMMUNITY AND THE INSTITUTION

Individuals who will need institutional care are, as a rule, to be recognized by either their marked intelligence capacity defect or by abnormal symptom-behavior, due essentially to affective deviation. With the development of a better grasp of the meaning of the mental defect behind inadequate symptom-behavior, the public-spirited citizens of every community will desire to develop not only earlier and more adequate institution care for the types needing it, but what is perhaps more important, an adequate type of supervised community care. This is a very practical necessity for those border-line cases who will then be able to get along outside of institutions and thus relieve the tax budget for institutional construction. All such cases should receive specialized vocational training and can be expected to progress only when placed in an environment freed from incidental economic stress. The problem of the mental defective in the State as a whole is thus to be divided broadly into those types who will be able to live their lives under a guarded community interest and those types who will need institutional commitment, treatment, and indefinite custody, both in order that they may be protected from the exploitation of the unscrupulous and that they may not contaminate the normal citizen group of the State by ill-advised mating. The children by marriages between mental defectives will inevitably show the effect of the heritable recessive unit characters which determine feeble-mindedness, mental deviation, and various other types of subnormal organ growth and functioning. Concerning the milder forms of mental defect and affective deviation in the community, it is desirable that we should realize that most of them will eventually come before our social welfare boards in the guise of alcoholics, paupers, sex offenders, felons, petty delinquents of all classes, "odd sticks," the twisted characters who are usually the subject of the town jester, the misers, hermits, and all the other "queer" actors of the world's drama. The social problem of these border-line cases in every community is one having to do largely with the development of insight on the part of the everyday, solid citizen. He has a duty to perform toward these weaker brothers. This duty does not consist in providing him mere physical comfort in a remote institution, but rather in taking a real interest in the difficulties of this particular subnormal neighbor. By means of special classes, vocational schools, industrial training, supervised employment through community agencies, popular lectures on topics connected with these subjects, and related activities, the citizen body may assist the handicapped individual in maintaining his proper economic place, and thereby keeping himself out of the ranks of the dependent, the dependent-delinquent, the delinquent defective, or the defective-psychotic.

Concerning the institution types and the problem of their future care and custody, we are at once confronted with the administrative fact that some of these cases are mild, inoffensive, and more or less helpless, and that others, usually much more capable intellectually, are more prone to emotional upsets, and are the group chiefly responsible for anti-social conduct and delinquency. When provision is made in the existing institutions by increasing their capacity for benign types, the plans must include the idea of developing special or independent institutions for the care of the delinquent types. For the purpose of facilitating administrative procedure it is obvious that an easy method for the transfer and rearrangement of admissions from one institution to another must be developed in order that when changes in the symptom-behavior of the patient develop proper institutional classification may be consistently maintained. To this end a simple transfer system is imperatively needed. With the further development of the care of the mental defective of all types, it is felt desirable that the benign case must be separated from the more delinquent-defective types. Moreover, children who are capable of further development should be kept apart from those who have reached older years and in whom further developmental possibilities have largely ceased. This emphasizes the need for a State-wide system of specialized progressive, scholastic and vocational training; the system grading off into the practical application of the subject taught so that each individual may be enabled to do the one thing best adapted to his own particular intelligence capacity. The type and extent of such scholastic and vocational training must be adopted only after the adequate and scientific examination of each patient.

THE DELINQUENT AS A PSYCHOPATHIC PATIENT

We find that the problem of the mental defective is not one which is sharply limited to the institution problems of the feeble-minded under State care, but has many ramifications which extend out into the community at large, out into semi-private institutions receiving public funds, and out into the exclusively private institutions. Particularly does it affect those institutions having to do with the care and custody of delinquent types. The problem of mental subnormality and deviation associated with delinquency has been kept constantly in view during the past year and several definite opinions concerning this work in its relation to the State Board of Charities have been formulated.

The first, and perhaps that of greatest importance, is that institutions for delinquents as a whole have not kept abreast of the modern trend of thought in so far as it relates to the psychology of anti-social conduct. The history of all penal institutions shows several formative periods. First there was the period wherein efforts at reformation were based wholly on the spiritual conversion of the "erring." Then followed the era when reforma-tive efforts were based largely upon trade-learning and industrial work. This in turn was followed by a period in which general "character building" was sought as the end in view. Finally, we have seen all this supplanted by a definite and scientific system of adequate mental and physical examination and diagnosis for each individual. After such an investigation the delinquent person is placed in that type of environment and given that sort of vocational work best fitted not only to the limitations of his mental capacity, but best suited to the development of all latent constructive possibilities. He is receiving care and treatment as a psychopathic patient of the anti-social type.

The second great need of change in the conduct of delinquent institutions is the removal of all ideas of repressive punitive measures and the substitution of ideas showing insight into the mental deviations of the persons brought under their care. The moral and social rehabilitation of delinquents must be based on psychological insight. It is obvious that a delinquent showing deviations in quantitative intelligence capacity, or deviations in the affective field which influence not only his judgment but his "will to do," and all those various acts of conduct which render that individual antagonistic and unsuited to the canons of society as now constituted, needs sequestration and treatment suited to his abnormal mental reactions rather than punishment for his peculiar or anti-social conduct as such, all of which was dependent upon subconscious trends of mental activity over which he had no conscious control. Instead of strong-rooms, disciplinary buildings, punishment cells, deprivation of food or restricted, unappetizing diet, all cases which show by their conduct that they are mental deviates (delinquent), should be treated from the standpoint of a psychopathic personality. This means that antiquated, repressive, punitive measures should be replaced by modern methods of treatment (especially hydrotherapy and continuous neutral baths for the psychotic types), and a diet adapted to actual physical needs for the building up of physical strength rather than arbitrary restrictions which deplete physical strength and further retard the chances of the social patient for rehabilitation. In addition to this, after the mental capacity has been accurately ascertained and the main trends of personality discovered through definite psychiatric tests, all future vocational work should be built up around the diagnosis thus made, with the end in view that the individual shall not only be rehabilitated in his own self-esteem, but that when he attempts to reënter the activities of the outside world as a self-supporting unit he will be enabled to do so in that line of work best fitted to his or her actual mental or physical capacity as determined by recognized psychological tests.

THE BUREAU OF ANALYSIS AND INVESTIGATION

The activities of this department under the Division of Mental Defect and Delinquency have been continuous throughout the past year. The analysis of social data as it comes to this office through the medium of admission records of dependent-defective individuals has been elaborated on the case-history cards and forms an extraordinary means of tracing related families which are producing dependent defective units. Our case records have been increased by nearly three thousand new histories, while over thirteen hundred old cases have had information added to them. Similarly, over thirty-six hundred admissions to almshouses have been recorded and the fact of their economic dependency not only recorded but their family connections linked up.

These files of case records afford means by which the Board is constantly enabled to assist the social workers of the counties of the State in arriving at definite conclusions concerning specific problems in their local community work. Many letters are received from such social agents gratefully acknowledging the help.

Mental examinations are made upon the request of public officials as rapidly as the limited staff permits. Examinations were made in the following places upon requests by the following persons:

Johnstown public schools, request of school nurse.

Sullivan county, request of county agent.

Yates county, request of county agent.

Herkimer county, request of county agent.

Sacred Heart Orphanage, West Park, N. Y., request of county agent of Dutchess county.

Riverdale Colored Orphan Asylum, New York, request of county agent of Dutchess county.

Albany Orphan Asylum, Albany, N. Y., request of county agent of Dutchess county and the superintendent of the Albany Orphan Asylum.

New York State Training School for Girls, Hudson, N. Y., request of superintendent of the institution.

In addition to these, examinations were made in the following institutions upon a very large number of persons, in connection with the Oneida county survey which was carried forward to completion by the end of the official year:

Mt. Magdalen School of Industry, Troy, N. Y.

House of the Good Shepherd, Utica, N. Y.

Utica Orphan Asylum, Utica, N. Y.

St. Vincent Industrial School, Utica, N. Y.

St. John's Catholic Orphan Asylum, Utica, N. Y.

St. Joseph Infant Home, Utica, N. Y.

Rome State Custodial Asylum, Rome, N. Y.

State Custodial Asylum for Feeble-minded Women, Newark, N. Y.

Craig Colony for Epileptics, Sonyea, N. Y.

The Division of Mental Defect and Delinquency has, through the Bureau of Analysis and Investigation, completed the field work for the survey of Oneida county as to "The Causes of Dependency," and for some months past the staff of the Bureau has been engaged in tabulating the results found. The superintendent of the division has been engaged in making a critical analysis of special groups of cases, and has written up the summaries of 909 investigated individuals and arranged the text of the survey. This work proceeded rather slowly but it should be of considerable value both in a practical and scientific way. Fortunately the survey did not start out with any very close limitations. This has enabled the Board to view cases of social and economic failure in a wide and unrestricted light, and through this fact it has been able to correlate many findings which otherwise would necessarily have been excluded. Bearing in mind the high reputation which the Bureau of Analysis has earned in the scientific field, great care has been taken that the work done in the survey of Oneida county should not fall below the standard which had been previously set. This work has been published as one of the consecutive bulletins of the Bureau.

PUBLICATIONS

The superintendent of the division has prepared a manuscript entitled "The Problem of the Mental Defective and the Delinquent." This is an article which has attempted to utilize all of the best known opinions along these lines and to formulate them into a practical working scheme for the determination, registration, care, and treatment of individuals showing mental defect and mental deviation, including delinquency, which come under the purview of this Board. This manuscript has been officially reviewed, approved, and issued as Bulletin No. XIII.

The final analysis of thirty-two cases of mental defect, patients at the Rome State Custodial Asylum, was completed by Miss Marion Collins, Investigator, and published as Bulletin No. XIV under the title, "Case Studies in Mental Defect."

The manuscript of "The Causes of Dependency, Based on a Survey of Oneida County" has been published as Bulletin No. XV.

CRAIG COLONY FOR EPILEPTICS

Sonyea, Livingston County

Established 1894

President Board of Managers: Percy L. Lang, Waverly.

Secretary: William P. Biggs, Trumansburg.

Superintendent: William T. Shanahan, M. D.

The capacity is 1,400. The number of patients present July 1, 1917 was 1,466; number of patients admitted during the year, 170; number discharged, 188; of these there were infants discharged, 2; patients recovered, 6; improved, 40; unimproved, 39; transferred to other institutions, 2; otherwise discharged, 2; died, 97. Number of patients remaining in institution June 30, 1918, males 737; females, 711; total, 1,448. The total number cared for during the year was 1,636, of whom 1,509 were supported by public funds and 127 by private funds. The daily average number of patients, 1,477.397. Average weekly cost of support, including the value of home and farm products consumed, $5.80. Average weekly cost of support, excluding the value of home and farm products consumed, $5.33.

Total maintenance expenses, $409,453.78; extraordinary expenditures, including $49,952.87 returned to the state treasurer, $160,009.02; total expenditures, $569,462.80. Cash on hand June 30, 1918, $4,206.29.

Clinical studies as to the causes of epilepsy have been continued in this Colony as heretofore. It is becoming increasingly apparent that epilepsy, for the most part, represents in the symptom-behavior a peculiar type of reaction due to constitutional deviations in make-up. Epilepsy is to be sharply differentiated from mental defect; but it is possible that epilepsy may occur on a basis of mental defect. For this reason, varying figures as to a percentage of mental defect among epileptics should not confuse but should teach to make closer clinical observation and discrimination. It is estimated that the ratio of epileptics in the general population is 1 to 500. On the basis of previous surveys, covering the incidence of mental defect in communities, it would appear that there are approximately three times as many persons showing mental defect as there are persons showing epilepsy. In view of the constitution deviation type of this disorder, its victims require rather prolonged and intensive treatment in the Colony, and if results adequate to our present knowledge on the subject are to be obtained the State must recognize this need to furnish maintenance and other expenditures in the same spirit of liberality which it has shown towards other types of mental disorders, particularly the insane.

During the year two fireproof dormitories with a capacity of sixty beds each in the west group have been completed. These buildings are ready for occupancy as soon as equipment is furnished. The erection of an adjoining kitchen is necessary to complete their usefulness. The cold storage plant has been completed. Fire hose and fire equipment have been supplied throughout the institution generally, and fire hazards reduced.

The capacity of the Colony is inadequate to the demands made upon it for new admissions. Many patients knowing of its limited capacity and overcrowded conditions do not attempt to gain admission to the Colony. The administrative problems thus created have been further intensified by the dearth of attendants making application for employment. There should be 264 persons in the personnel of this institution, but there are so many vacancies at the present time that the ward service is materially hampered, while in the industrial departments it has been found extremely difficult to get firemen, laundresses and laborers. However, the nurses' training school has been successfully continued through these trying days and the needs of the patients have not suffered. There are on the waiting list over 100 individuals who desire admission to this institution.

Treatment, to be of the greatest value, must be started while the patient is as young as possible. It is thus seen by deferring the admission of these cases the chances for their eventual recovery are, by that fact alone, much reduced and the pressing needs of these afflicted citizens of the State draw attention to the desirability of further construction. This should be sufficient to afford care and treatment for all those epileptics of the State, who desire to be received.

The administration of the institution has been satisfactory and the clinical character of the medical work done has been of a high order. The medical staff has continued its studies on the personality of the epileptic, and the mental status of patients has been further elaborated through the more general use of psychometric tests. Field work is carried out and studies in heredity made. The quarterly medical clinics have been continued, during which many physicians from the various parts of the State have visited the institution.

Since the opening of the Colony in January, 1896, 4,857 patients have been admitted to treatment; of this number the discharges have been 3,415, classified as follows: Recovered, 86; improved, 668; unimproved, 818; insane, 154; died, 1,676; otherwise discharged, 13.

These figures represent actual findings as no case was listed as recovered, which was only greatly improved. The complete recoveries show approximately 2.5 per cent of the total discharges, but, in addition to these, approximately 20 per cent have shown great improvement and many have made practical recoveries so far as being restored to usefulness in their own community is concerned.

War work has been active throughout the year there being at present 304 members of the Red Cross. A considerable number of male employees, some men from nearby communities constitute a company of the New York Guard. Many members of the staff, both physicians and employees are in the Federal Service and it is expected that more will be called shortly.

STATE CUSTODIAL ASYLUM FOR FEEBLE-MINDED WOMEN

Newark, Wayne County

Established 1878

President Board of Managers: Mrs. Sarah F. Armstrong, Penn Yan.

Secretary: Mr. James A. Randall, 705 S. A. & K. Building, Syracuse.

Superintendent: Ethan A. Nevin, M. D.

The State institution at Newark caring for feeble-minded women has a capacity for 1,000. Number of patients present July 1, 1917, 856. During the year 114 patients were admitted. The total number cared for was 970, all of whom were supported by public funds. During the same period 31 patients were discharged; of these, 3 were returned to parents or legal guardians; 3 returned to committing officers; 1 left without permission; 10 were otherwise discharged and 14 died. The number of patients remaining June 30, 1918 was 939. The daily average number of patients was 890.794. The average weekly cost of support, including the value of home and farm products consumed, was $4.28. The average weekly cost of support, excluding this value, was $4.04.

Receipts from the State, $265,730.99; from other sources, $500.55; total receipts, $266,231.54.

Total maintenance expenses, $187,335.73; extraordinary expenditures, including $500.55 returned to State Treasurer, $75,660.82; total expenditures, $262,996.55. Cash on hand June 30, 1918 and returned to State Treasurer, $3,234.99.

During the year this institution has carried on its work for mentally defective women under a considerable handicap, owing to difficulty with new construction and the shortage of help due to war conditions. As showing the necessity of sequestering mentally defective women of child bearing age it may be stated that of 114 women admitted during the past year, 35 had given birth to 42 illegitimate and 21 legitimate children. Such a statement emphasizes the necessity of examining retarded school children and delinquent types early in life, in order that their special needs may be met and the community safeguarded from their unrestrained activities. Burnham Cottage which was opened at the close of the last fiscal year has been filled. The filtration plant was completed during the year and this now enables the institution to use the water from the reservoir for the boilers and hot water system. With the contemplated increase in the capacity of this institution a corresponding increase in laundry space and storeroom facilities will be needed. During the year much interest has been shown in Red Cross activities and other war needs and interests.

SYRACUSE STATE INSTITUTION FOR FEEBLE-MINDED CHILDREN

Syracuse, Onondaga County

President Board of Managers: William A. Kelly, D. D. S., Lowville.

Secretary: Mrs. Charles E. Crouse, 715 West Genesee street, Syracuse.

Superintendent: Dr. O. H. Cobb.

The capacity of this institution is 600. The number of inmates enrolled July 1, 1917 was 631 and 88 were admitted during the year making the total number under care 719. During this period 80 were discharged and 15 died, leaving 624 on the rolls June 30, 1918. The average number present was 582 and the average weekly cost of support, including the value of home and farm products consumed, $5.89; excluding this value, $5.24.

This institution, the oldest in the State group caring for mental defectives, has long outgrown its present location. The structures are not well planned or fireproof and their limited bed capacity prevents the institution from benefiting many patients needing treatment. The removal of the institution to a more rural locality and the construction of new, modern and fireproof units for the care and treatment of mental defect are urged.

The aim of the institution is to provide a training school exclusively for boys and girls of the higher moron groups. Custodial care is not a part of this program and it has been the policy of the institution to keep out the less hopeful cases as far as possible. The staff consists of 24 teachers and attendant teachers. The average physical age of the children under treatment is 13; the average mental age is about 8 years.

It has been found that grade advancement in the moron groups is twice as slow as in the normal child, while the imbecile child advances in grades at the rate of one in three or four years up to the level of the intelligence capacity, few passing beyond the second grade. The majority of the children are in the kindergarten, first and second grade; only a few reach the fifth grade. The scholastic program follows the New York State Syllabus in reading, writing, spelling and arithmetic. Manual training occupies at least one-half the day of each child, both boys and girls being instructed in vocational lines. The school maintains a band of 38 boys and an orchestra of 30 girls. Physical training is supplemented by daily work in the gymnasium, indoor and outdoor sports, and social dancing. Competitive games are encouraged; moving pictures are provided; and the various holidays are regularly celebrated. Regular religious instruction is given to each child according to the religious affiliations noted at the time of admission.

After the age of 16, the children begin to pass into the industrial department often working at two or more occupations for the sake of variety. The more trustworthy boys live in a garden cottage without cramping supervision and have opportunities after working hours to earn a little pocket money at odd jobs in the neighborhood, acquiring in this way some knowledge of the outside world.

The farm colony at Fairmount has a capacity for 40 of the older boys, who occupy themselves in the winter by brushmaking. A certain number of the boys and girls who show capability for self-control and constructive usefulness are sent out on parole under supervised care, and upon their conduct remaining satisfactory are discharged to families able to provide for them.

Thirteen cases of tuberculous adenitis, one case of tubercular meningitis, and eight cases of pulmonary tuberculosis, a total number of 22 cases or 38 per cent of the daily average population was recorded for the year. Nineteen surgical operations were performed, of which six were excisions of tubercular glands. Of the 15 children who died, the cause was pulmonary tuberculosis in the case of 6 and tubercular meningitis in one instance.

Red Cross activities have been prominent throughout the whole year in all departments. The officers and employees invested $20,000 in the first three liberty loans and subscribed $2,000 to the Syracuse War Chest for the current year; also $2,836.94 has been invested in war saving stamps. Six employees are in the army and the Superintendent is a member of the local Medical Advisory Board.

ROME STATE CUSTODIAL ASYLUM

Rome, Oneida County

Established 1893

President Board of Managers: Cyrus J. Severance, M. D., Rome.

Secretary: James A. Douglass, Oriskany Falls.

Superintendent: Charles Bernstein, M. D.

This hospital for the care of mental defectives has a capacity for 1,650. The number present July 1, 1917, was 1,623 and 435 were admitted during the official year ending June 30, 1918, making the total number under care 2,058. Two hundred and eighteen were discharged, of whom 115 were discharged to leave the institution and 103 died, leaving 1,840 in the institution on June 30, 1918, of whom 1,169 were males and 671 females. The daily average number under treatment was 1,724. The average weekly cost of support, including the value of home products consumed, was $5.32; excluding this value, $4.35.

Receipts from the State, $448,504.67; from other sources, $3,684.45; total receipts, $452,189.12; total maintenance expenses, $389,572.89; total extraordinary expenditures, including $3,450.72 returned to State treasurer, $52,295.10; total expenditures, $441,867.99. Cash on hand June 30, 1918, $10,321.13.

The new dormitory building has been completed. Patients began to occupy the building September 1, 1917. The personnel of the staff has shown many changes owing to war conditions, there being an unprecedented number of vacancies for employees at the close of the official year. The overcrowded condition of the institution has not been relieved by new construction with the result that many cases diagnosed as mental defectives could not be received, owing to the lack of available beds. This matter has been reviewed by the Hospital Development Commission and will be made part of the program of the new Commission on the Feeble-Minded. The institution has continued to establish additional colonies, which now number 10 for boys, and 5 for girls. The total census for these colonies is 391.

The general health has been good. The number of tubercular cases, however, has increased, particularly among the male patients, of whom 124 are diagnosed as active tubercular cases. Eighteen women are suffering from the same disease. During the year ending June 30, 1917, there was a total of 108 tubercular cases. During the year ending June 30, 1918, there was a total of 142 cases, or an increase of 31 per cent in the number of diagnosed tubercular cases. This emphasizes the imperative need for the construction of a modern separate pavilion for tubercular cases, divided into units for the separation of the sexes. It is recommended that a pavilion having capacity of not less than 150 beds be erected for males and a similar unit having a capacity of not less than 35 beds be erected for females, suffering from tuberculosis. The number of tubercular cases in this institution is more than the average percentage of such cases in institutions and demands immediate administrative attention.

The farm and dairy products continue to prove valuable assets, contributing much towards the food stuffs and adding to the variety of the dietary. The farm colonies have produced approximately $60,000.00 worth of farm products at the estimated cost of $46,000.00. Approximately 25 per cent of the total cost of maintenance for the entire patient and employee population was thus produced.

(Clinical work with patients by the staff physicians has been seriously interrupted owing to several staff members having entered the Medical Reserve Corps of the Army. As a result of this condition no routine mental examinations are being made at the present time.

During this, the first year of the war, the institution has made every effort to render as many of its wards self-supporting as possible, under its colony system of protection and after-care. For conservation purposes a larger acreage was under cultivation than ever before and this increased effort on the part of the patients has resulted in more vegetable and other products being raised including all its milk and butter, about one-half of the beef and all the pork supplies.

Red Cross activities have been a prominent feature of the year's program and many articles were produced. Many of the patients, as well as employees, have subscribed for thrift stamps and liberty bonds. The service flag now carries 38 stars, covering officers, employees and patients.

LETCHWORTH VILLAGE

Thiells, Rockland County

Established 1907

President Board of Managers: Frank A. Vanderlip, Scarborough.

Secretary: Franklin B. Kirkbride, 7 Wall street, New York city.

Superintendent: Charles S. Little, M. D.

This institution has a present capacity for 342 patients. The number in the institution July 1, 1917, was 351; during the year 42 were admitted, 36 were discharged and 9 died, leaving 273 men and boys and 75 women and girls June 30, 1918. The daily average number of patients was 351, and the average weekly cost of support, including the value of home and farm products consumed, was $9.02; excluding this value, $7.51.

Building operations during the past year have been anything but encouraging. Work on the completion of the Boys' Group and on the Female Group has been progressing very slowly, though cottages E, F, G and H are expected to be ready for occupancy early in 1919. These buildings are two-thirds completed, about all the work remaining to be done is the plastering and finishing. Water and sewerage systems have been installed and the conduit work for the hot water distributing and circulating piping, and the domestic hot water piping will be installed long before the buildings are completed. Work on the industrial building and assembly hall in this group is progressing satisfactorily now, though the work heretofore has been slow.

The building for the storehouse, bakery and cold storage plant is not yet finished, though it may be possible to put this building into use before spring. The addition to the power-house is still in process of construction and will be ready by the time it is needed. The construction work on the cottages in the Female Group is progressing fairly well, the first story walls of some are erected, the concrete bridge and tunnel over the Minnesceongo creek is about finished and 700 feet of concrete tunnel work, most of which was done by the boys, has been constructed. The laundry, though practically complete, will not be occupied until the cottages in the Boys' Group are completed and are ready for occupancy.

The whole delay, which was unavoidable, is due entirely to the shortage of labor, dependent upon war conditions. Indeed should any of these buildings be opened at present it is questionable if sufficient help could be procured to supervise them properly. High standards of administration are difficult to maintain, as those now applying for work are often quite unsuited for caring for the feeble-minded, and under normal conditions would not be considered at all.

The average number of inmates has been 351, an increase of 14 over the previous year; this in spite of the fact that the bed capacity has not been increased. With the completion of cottages E, F, G and H. the maximum capacity will be 622. This will give opportunity to admit many of the applications now on file, most of which are urgent.

Since last year the school department has taken form, and though small, having only three teachers and a physical trainer, it has been organized on an efficient basis, and is doing excellent work in the training of the mentally defective. The children who attend school classes in the morning are in the gymnastic class in the afternoon and those who attend school in the afternoon are in the gymnastic class in the morning.

The industrial activities have been directed into those channels which make the older children of some economic value to the institution; the girls in sewing rooms, laundry, kitchens, dining rooms, etc.,—the boys in the barns, on teams, grading and construction work, and a few selected boys with the mechanics.

During the summer all the children were given anti-typhoid vaccine. War work has been encouraged in every possible way, both boys and girls working in the interest of the Red Cross and other related activities.

This Board desires to commend the policy which has lately been adopted by the State to make large annual appropriations for this greatly needed institution. It is to be hoped that this policy will be continued so that there may soon be developed on this ample and beautiful site an institution for the care of the feeble-minded commensurate with the needs of the metropolitan district of the State which it is intended to serve. The active and aggressive efficiency of the Board of Managers in laboring for the completion of the institution should also be commended.

The present high per capita cost for housing inmates will decrease with the growth of the institution. Much has been said of the high cost of construction per inmate for the cottages of the Village, but the figures obtained from the Fiscal Supervisor of State Charities show that eight cottages intended to house seventy inmates each, or a total of 560 beds, were recently contracted for at a cost of $335,728.20. These cottages are to be built of native stone, of practically permanent construction, at a cost per capita per inmate of $599.51, including necessary accommodation for two attendants in each cottage. This cost will undoubtedly be much reduced with the return of normal conditions after the war. In the erection of additional cottages it is proposed to reduce their cost still further by a more extensive use of the labor of the inmates.

THE SOCIETY FOR THE REFORMATION OF JUVENILE DELINQUENTS IN THE CITY OF NEW YORK

The House of Refuge, Randall's Island, New York City

Established 1824

President Board of Managers: Isaac Townsend, 1 East 51st street, New York city.

Secretary: Gordon Knox Bell, 20 Exchange place, New York city.

Superintendent: Col. Edward C. Barber.

The House of Refuge on Randall's Island has a capacity of 1,000 beds. The number of boys present July 1, 1917, was 640; 527 boys were admitted during the year making the total number cared for 1,167 all supported by public funds. During the year 543 boys were discharged; of these, 474 boys were returned to parents or legal guardians; 44 were discharged to take employment; 6 were returned to committing officers; 3 left without permission and 12 were otherwise discharged; 4 died. The number of boys remaining in the institution June 30, 1918, was 624. The daily average number present during the year was 644.939. The average weekly cost of support, including the value of home and farm products consumed, was $7.23; excluding this value, $6.68.

Receipts from the State, $241,722.67; from all other sources, $220.59; total receipts, $241,943.26.

Total maintenance expenses, $223,877.11; extraordinary expenditures, $12,193.26; total expenditures, $236,070.37. Cash on hand June 30, 1918, $5,872.89.

Chapter 543 of the Laws of 1918 abolished the New York State Training School for Boys at Yorktown Heights. A commission was created for the control of the property as a State reservation. The training school was never opened. The site of the training school has been operated in connection with the House of Refuge as a farm colony and a number of boys have been residents there working the farm as provided in the law above. The commission supervises the work of the farm assisted by one of the officers of the House of Refuge. All the statistical information concerning the boys and this farm appears in the statistics of the House of Refuge. The expenditures in connection with this farm colony are as follows: received from the State for maintenance appropriations, $2,400; total maintenance expenses, $2,370.23; cash balance on hand on June 30, 1918, $29.77.

The census of the House of Refuge has continued to drop since the beginning of the war. This is of considerable significance in view of the type and character of the boys committed here, and especially when considering the diverse origin and character of their homes. It speaks well for our various communities and is a matter of no little State pride that delinquency, as shown by institution admissions has not increased during the recent world-wide social upheaval. Three months after the declaration of war on Germany by the United States the House of Refuge had 78 boys in the service of the country and eight in the National Guard. After the lapse of fifteen months of war there are in the service over 400 boys who were former pupils of this institution. The usual system of parole has continued in active force and there are now over 1,300 boys making an effort at rehabilitation in their own community, of whom only a small percentage have reappeared as delinquents. Such cases need intensive reëxamination as to mental defect and psychopathic deviation, as their inability to make good in the outside world probably depends upon inherent constitutional limitations. The institution has made a particular effort to develop modern and specialized industrial and vocational methods for its boys, fortified as formerly by a system of daily military drill.

During the year a number of improvements have been made; particularly noteworthy are those replacing antiquated repressive prison-like surroundings with less gloomy structures. The razing of the old brick wall around the drill grounds and exercise yard marks an epoch of advance in the psychology of caring for anti-social types. Modern institutional ideas have been incorporated wherever possible during the reconstruction of such buildings as were destroyed by the fire of 1917.

WESTERN HOUSE OF REFUGE FOR WOMEN

Albion, Orleans County

Acting President Board of Managers: Monsignor John L. Reilly, 412 Liberty street, Schenectady.

Secretary: Mrs. Pearl S. Elias, 237 Linwood avenue, Buffalo.

Superintendent: Mrs. Flora P. Daniels.

The capacity of the Western House of Refuge is 215. On July 1, 1917 there were present 194 women and 16 babies, making a total of 210. During the year 136 women and 16 babies were received, 128 women and 16 babies were discharged and 1 woman died. Of the number discharged, 127 were returned to parents or legal guardians; 6 were transferred to other institutions; 11 were otherwise discharged and 1 died. Total number cared for during the year, 362, all of whom were supported by public funds. The daily average number of inmates, 206.183. Average weekly cost of support, including the value of home and farm products consumed, 8.77. Average weekly cost of support, excluding this value, $8.25.

Receipts from the State, $93,437.03; received from other sources, $66.51; total receipts, $93,503.54.

Total maintenance expenses, $88,454.58; total extraordinary expenditures, including $66.51 returned to the State Treasurer, $2,875.04; total expenditures, $91,329.62. Cash on hand June 30, 1918, $2,173.92.

This institution has continued to serve the western part of the State in caring for women of a delinquent type. The general atmosphere is one of constructive help and there has been a marked reduction in the use of obsolete punitive measures.

In accordance with plans for war conservation the farm acreage has been increased and besides caring for the institution needs and products the girls have by their own labor assisted neighboring farmers with fruit picking. Money raised in this way was invested by the girls in Liberty bonds. They also entered with enthusiasm into all the other sources for raising money for the Red Cross, Liberty bonds and thrift stamps. Whenever yarn could be obtained knitting has been done in order that garments might be sent to the battle front.

In accordance with the opinion of the State Board of Charities that so-called disciplinary cases are essentially psychopathic types of mental reaction, it is urged that this institution install a psychopathic ward fitted with hydrotherapeutic apparatus and at least two tubs for continuous baths for the modern treatment of disturbed cases and, further, that nurses trained in the care of such patients replace lay workers as the officer in charge on all of the principal wards, units and cottages.

NEW YORK STATE REFORMATORY FOR WOMEN

Bedford Hills, Westchester County

Established 1892

President Board of Managers: William G. Barrett, Katonah.

Superintendent: Miss Helen A. Cobb.

The institution has a capacity for 450, exclusive of infants, the hospital and the disciplinary building. The number of women present July 1, 1917, was 372. In addition there were 15 infant boys and 18 infant girls, making a total of 405 individuals. During the year 179 were admitted and at the same time 10 infant boys and 14 infant girls, making a total of 203 new admissions. Total number cared for during the year was 608, all of whom were supported by public funds. During the same period 252 were paroled or discharged; of these, 120 were paroled to parents or legal guardians; 5 infants were placed out with mothers to board; 13 cases were reparaled; 7 girls and 2 infants were replaced; 65 were discharged, sentences having expired; 28 were transferred to other institutions; 1 left without permission and 7 were otherwise discharged. One woman and three infants died; total deaths, 4. At the close of the year, June 30, 1918, 356 cases remained in the institution, of whom 27 were infants under 5 years of age. The daily average number of women, including infants, was 389.736. The average weekly cost of support, including the value of home and farm products consumed, was $9.31. The average weekly cost of support, excluding the value of home and farm products, was $8.46.

Receipts from the State, $195,983.95; from other sources, $118.18; total receipts, $196,102.13.

Total maintenance expenses, $171,651.20; extraordinary expenditures, including $5,724.98 returned to the State Treasurer, $24,450.93; total expenditures, $196,102.13.

During the year a most satisfactory spirit of constructive help for the inmates has been observed. The medical officers have conducted an intensive campaign for the diagnosis and treatment of the various types of venereal diseases. Curative work along these lines is a very positive benefit not only to the patients but to the State, inasmuch as it is now known that venereal diseases not only cripple the individual as an economic unit but that syphilis as the cause of general paresis, a deteriorating form of mental disorder, furnishes a high percentage of all cases admitted to State hospitals for the insane.

The institution has entered enthusiastically into the various conservation needs brought about by the war. The government regulations as to food conservation have been well lived up to. The girls have responded willingly to these patriotic demands, readily coöperating with the war garden and farm work, with the result that the largest amount of vegetables and other farm products ever raised has been produced. Red Cross work has been active throughout the year, both on the part of the girls and the officers. One thousand and twenty-eight knitted articles and 488 garments were made, besides which subscriptions to various war charities and memberships in the Red Cross were raised.

The services of the laboratory of social hygiene with its supplementary psychopathic hospital, the Frances Bement Cottage, were discontinued at the close of the fiscal year June 30, 1918, and the Rockefeller property including the laboratory, the Frances Bement Cottage, Elizabeth Fry Hall and all buildings and farm lands were withdrawn from the use of the New York State Reformatory. This necessitated a shifting of the population in order that reception quarters for new admissions might be arranged to replace those which formerly had been cared for in Elizabeth Fry Hall. The reformatory, receiving commitments from the metropolitan district, must of necessity handle all nationalities and types of personality, many of whom lack insight and mental grasp on the meaning of our social life and government. For these reasons the problem of care and treatment is somewhat more difficult than in those institutions which receive their admissions from districts which have on the average more individuals who are natives of this country or who came from native parents. Hence arises a condition which at once demands solution on the grounds of psychiatric understanding, diagnosis and differentiation. Those patients who show distinct mental defect should receive care and treatment as defective delinquents, those cases showing subnormal and borderline defects should receive an intensive mental examination which would determine not only their actual defects but would also point out their particular capabilities, all of which must be used in constructing a plan of vocational training for the specific individual which will assist her in a very definite manner for rehabilitating herself as a self-supporting, self-respecting unit of the community.

The Board recommends that the institution maintain as officers of its own staff physicians who are sufficiently trained to make adequate mental and physical examinations which will care for this situation and that plans be made for the differentiation and care of the varying types. Those cases showing benign forms of gross intelligence capacity defect should not remain here as they are further contaminated by association with the psychopathic types which may or may not show marked intelligence capacity defect. There remain also the subnormal and borderline cases on the one hand and those who show a distinct psychosis on the other. The former need essentially a specialized environment along community lines, while those showing a distinct psychosis should be committed to a State hospital caring for anti-social types.

The so-called "normal" delinquent is best cared for, after preliminary vocational training, by a supervised system of parole and aftercare.

The old prison building and cells should be razed or the interior converted into dormitories combined with single rooms adapted for the care of psychopathic types. To this end it is recommended that a psychopathic ward be installed to replace the so-called "disciplinary building," and that hydrotherapeutic apparatus, including at least two tubs for continuous baths, be installed therein, and further that the principal wards, units or cottages of the institution be under the charge of nurses trained in the care of psychopathic cases.

IV. DIVISION OF MEDICAL CHARITIES

Committee on Medical Charities: Commissioner J. Richard Kevin, M. D., Chairman; The President, ex officio. Commissioners Arnold, Burdick, Frankel, Gillespie and Werner.

Clarence E. Ford, Superintendent of Division.

Included in this division are those institutions under the supervision of the State Board of Charities which care for the sick. This group contains two State institutions — the New York State Hospital for the Treatment of Incipient Pulmonary Tuberculosis, at Raybrook, and the New York State Hospital for the Care of Crippled and Deformed Children, at West Haverstraw; city and county hospitals including the public sanatoria for tuberculosis; the hospitals under private management which receive public charges, and all dispensaries. At the end of the fiscal year, there were under the supervision of the division 239 hospitals, including under that term those institutions in which the patients are temporarily resident, and 213 dispensaries; a total of 452 institutions. All these had been in operation during the whole or a part of the year.

Briefly stated, the division carries on, subject to the direction and approval of the Board, the following:

1. Supervises the facilities and work of the institutions numbered above. This supervision includes a comprehensive inspection at least once in each fiscal year of the entire plant and operation of the institution and the preparation by the inspector of a report which is submitted to the committee at its next meeting. After examination and classification by the committee, reports are transmitted to the managers of the institution and to other persons, as directed, and where serious defects are noted, reports are followed up by correspondence, by visits of the division superintendent and of the Commissioners of the Board. Complaints which reach the Board with reference to the institutions are also carefully investigated and appropriate action on the basis of the reports received is directed by the committee.

2. Recommends to the Board for adoption, rules for the conduct of dispensaries established pursuant to provisions of Chapter 55 of the Consolidated Laws. During the past year the committee has revised the existing rules governing dispensaries as will be noted elsewhere in this report.

3. Recommends to the Board for adoption, rules for the reception and retention of inmates of hospitals as provided in section 14 of article 8 of the constitution and Chapter 57 of the Consolidated Laws. As yet the Committee has recommended to the Board only the single change in the rules previously existing as stated in the discussion of war conditions.

4. Examines plans for any new buildings or alterations in existing buildings of private hospitals in which the care of public charges is proposed. The committee recommends to the Board the approval or disapproval of the proposed plans and gives reasons for its recommendations.

5. Examines the merits of applications for approval of certificates of incorporation of proposed hospitals and dispensaries. In doing this the Committee usually acts in an advisory capacity to the Commissioner of the district in which the proposed institution is to be located.

6. Examines the merits of applications for licenses for dispensaries established pursuant to the provisions of the dispensary law. As in the case of incorporations, the committee advises the Commissioner of the district in which the dispensary is to be located.

In carrying out these duties, members of the committee have the assistance of the secretary, the division superintendent and usually of five inspectors from the Board's staff.

WAR CONDITIONS

While all institutions have been profoundly affected by the war, the present emergency has been especially trying to hospitals and dispensaries. The medical and surgical staffs of these institutions have been depleted and it has been extremely difficult to secure internes. The cost of drugs, hospital supplies and provisions of all kinds has greatly increased, while it has been difficult or impossible for the hospitals to secure, either by increased rates or by donations, funds sufficient to provide necessary revenue. This committee has been fully aware of the fact that the situation is a particularly trying one for hospitals and dispensaries and has endeavored to be of assistance in the following ways:

In order that the State Board of Charities might have accurate information as to the exact situation existing in the hospitals under its supervision, the committee at its meeting in February, 1918 directed that there be sent to each of these hospitals a questionnaire asking for information as to the usual number, present number, the cause of and means of relief for any shortage in relation to physicians, internes, nurses, domestics and other employees; whether the number of ward patients is unusually large at present, whether any conditions that may exist are due to the war, and whether there is any service the various hospitals believe could be rendered by the Board as a central agency. Tabulation of the replies received shows that while the shortage of physicians and graduate nurses was at that time beginning to be felt, hospitals had been able to meet the situation created by our entering the war fairly well. A few hospitals reported an extreme shortage of pupil nurses, while several had more applicants than their schools could accommodate. Difficulty in securing competent domestic employees seemed to be almost universal among the hospitals. Many suggestions for action by the State Board of Charities were received, some of which were manifestly impracticable. The Board, through its secretary, addressed letters to the Surgeons General of the Army and Navy raising the question as to whether it would not be desirable that the entrance of young medical graduates to active military or naval service be deferred until a period of internship in a recognized hospital had been passed. The following replies were received:

DEPARTMENT OF THE NAVY

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 25, 1918.

MY DEAR MR. JOHNSON.—Your letter of the 19th instant has been received, and has been given careful consideration by this bureau.

I appreciate the great difficulty that all hospitals throughout the country are having at the present time in securing a sufficient number of internes to carry on the hospital work, and as far as the exigencies of the naval service, in the present national emergency, admit I will be very glad to coöperate to the fullest in endeavoring to avoid interference with the young graduates from the various medical colleges of the country.

However, I must also point out to you the fact that the navy is itself urgently in need of additional medical men, as its needs are constantly increasing and accessions from civil life are comparatively few.

If the young men just graduating desire to offer their services either with the idea of participating in the present great conflict or with the idea of acquiring the clinical experience which the navy is at present prepared to offer, I cannot, considering our current needs, definitely refuse their assistance. However, such as enroll with us and desire an inactive status to take up civilian internships will be shown every consideration, and allowed to continue or take up such internships as long as possible.

Very truly yours,

(Signed) W. C. BRAISTED,
Surgeon-General, U. S. Navy.

CHARLES H. JOHNSON,
Secretary, State Board of Charities,
Albany, N. Y.

WAR DEPARTMENT

OFFICE OF THE SURGEON-GENERAL

CHARLES H. JOHNSON, Secretary, State Board of Charities, Office at the Capitol, Albany, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR.—The Surgeon-General directs me to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of April 19th, and to reply.

Internes who are graduates of 1917 or after are required to serve one year as an interne before they are eligible for active duty. Senior students and recent graduates who are internes are allowed to enlist as privates in the Medical Enlisted Reserve Corps. If they are graduates and after a few months of hospital service as internes they are allowed to apply for commission in the Medical Reserve Corps. In either case the enclosed forms, Interne B and C, are required and if approved by the Surgeon-General permission will be given for one year's service.

The difficulty has arisen from the readjusting from the former customs of interne service appointments to this new plan of having interne appointments for one year only, the appointments beginning preferably January, April, July and October 1st. There should be no serious difficulty when the time arises when internes are all 1917 (or later) graduates.

Very respectfully,

(Signed)

H. S. MANN,

Lieutenant, Medical Reserve Corps, U. S. A.

As the training of pupil nurses is under the supervision of the State Department of Education, the committee took no action with reference to this matter other than to confer informally with the Assistant Commissioner of Education.

Replies received to this questionnaire and the reports of its inspectors convinced the committee that in the present emergency, it may be necessary at times to care for more patients in public wards than the usual standards of the Board would allow. This committee, therefore, adopted at its meeting held April 9, 1918, the following preamble and resolution:

WHEREAS, It has come to the attention of the State Board of Charities that there has been a great increase in the number of soldiers and sailors admitted as patients into the hospitals under the supervision of this Board, and

WHEREAS, Such condition is likely to increase during the progress of the present war, it is

Resolved, That paragraphs (c) and (d) of section 6 of the rules of the State Board of Charities governing the reception and retention of inmates of hospitals be, and are, hereby temporarily suspended and in lieu thereof the Secretary of the Board is authorized to allow in the hospitals governed by the rules of this Board such number of beds in the wards as may in his judgment properly be placed therein with due regard to the necessities imposed by war conditions.

The extreme shortage of domestic employees referred to above is largely or perhaps wholly a question of the financial ability of the institution to offer such wages as will enable it to compete with those offered by industrial concerns at any given time. In order that the financial resources of the hospitals may be increased for this and other proper purposes the committee is endeavoring to secure for them increased rates of payment for public charges which will serve more nearly to compensate for the cost of maintenance, care and treatment. In carrying out this purpose officers of the Board have called conferences of hospital managers, and have sent many letters to public officials supporting the claims of hospitals for increased allowances. A recent computation based on the latest information available in the office of the Board shows that of the fifty cities making payment to local hospitals for the care of patients, ten pay more than $2.00 a day for each patient, twenty-one from $1.50 to $2.00 while only nineteen pay less than $1.50 a day. Public fiscal officers have generally shown a willingness on presentation of the matter to increase rates of payment to about $2.00 a day.

With the calling of millions of men from their usual occupations under the operation of the selective draft law, hospitals suffered severely by losing men who had become all but essential to the proper conduct of the engineering and other departments. The revised regulations promulgated by the Provost Marshal General early in the fall of 1918 made provision for placing in deferred classification hospital employees considered essential to the proper conduct of the institution. As soon as this change was announced, the Board sent to each of the hospitals in the State under its supervision a letter giving the exact wording of the new rule. The Board was also able to secure from the War Department the indefinite furlough of a man already in the service in order that he might act as engineer in a hospital by which he was formerly employed.

In common with other institutions, the hospitals have held themselves in readiness to aid the government in the prosecution of the war in every possible way. Particular note has been made by the Board of those activities of hospitals having a special war-time significance some of which are noted below.

Probably the most prominent of these wartime activities at least in the early days of the war has been the organization of base hospitals and hospital units for service with the American Expeditionary Forces. Several of these have been formed in New York and others in Albany, Syracuse, Rochester, Buffalo and Yonkers. The cost of a base hospital is large, approximating $100,000.

There is also to be considered the difficulty of bringing together and training a competent and efficient organization. Practically all the hospitals and units just referred to are now engaged in the care of the sick and wounded "over there."

Another important contribution of the hospitals has been the instruction given both to medical officers and to enlisted men of the army and navy with reference to their duties in connection with the medical service. At the Flower Hospital in New York, to use one illustration, it has been customary to take men from the ships while they were in port, in groups of about fifteen at a time and give them a course including bedside nursing, general orderly work, operating room orderly work, technique of an instrument nurse, technique of the laboratory and drug room, and training in the administration of anaesthesia. The superintendent of this hospital has recently written us pertaining to this course stating, "I am very happy to say that the major part of these boys have come back to us for more of it." Hospitals have also been extensively utilized for the instruction of medical officers in specialties particularly needed in the work of the army and navy.

The hospitals have also undertaken reconstructive medicine particularly surgery in the case of men rejected by the various draft boards because of defects which may be remedied by suitable operations. We are informed that the success of this work in rendering men fit for service has been remarkable. In cooperation with the home service section of the American Red Cross, hospitals have cared for the families of soldiers and sailors. Several hospitals report that they have given particular attention to prenatal instruction and the care of maternity cases in the families of soldiers and sailors at the request of the Red Cross.

In order that the hospitals might be themselves properly manned and that there may be as large a number as possible of persons who have had experience and training in nursing, many of the hospitals have taken in larger classes of probationers than has been their custom heretofore. To make the life of the pupil nurse more attractive to candidates and more efficiently conducted, at least two hospitals, The Crouse-Irving of Syracuse and the Niagara Falls Memorial, have instituted an eight-hour day for their pupil nurses. A number of the hospitals are also training nurse aids and assistants of various kinds both in the wards and in the laboratories. Some of these training classes for aids are under the auspices of the Red Cross and in one hospital, a particularly large group was instructed under the supervision of the Polish White Cross Society. At the Rochester Dental Dispensary, dental hygienists have been trained who have assisted the war department in the care of the teeth of soldiers. At other hospitals and dispensaries doing dental work the teeth of soldiers and sailors have received attention without charge.

Hospitals and dispensaries have given so largely of their medical and other staffs that it has become necessary that, where possible, the deficiencies of one institution should be supplied by some other institution in the same locality. With this in mind certain hospitals in Rochester have formed an alliance under which the pathological laboratories and schools of nursing are under one direction and so coördinated as to give the greatest efficiency in each institution with the least amount of trained supervision.

The doors of the hospitals have been freely opened to enlisted men of the army and navy who require medical or surgical attention and such attention whether paid for by the government or not, was given with the utmost efficiency of which the institution was capable. As many of the patients were not seriously ill, considerable effort had to be made to provide for them recreational facilities. It is likely that the benefit of such facilities will be seen by the hospitals and will remain as a feature after the necessity for caring for soldiers and sailors has ceased.

Such are some of the wartime activities of the hospitals and dispensaries. Their unswerving loyalty and determination to assist the government will certainly not be doubted by those who have had opportunity to observe what they have done and what they have held themselves in readiness to do.

With the advent of peace, problems of readjustment and reconstruction come to the front. Cripples who will require expert care and treatment and sometimes functional reëducation are returning. Many will be found to be suffering from diseases, especially tuberculosis, which will make necessary their care and treatment even after discharge from military life. To this task the hospitals will address themselves with the same willingness to serve shown during the war.

INFLUENZA

The devastating epidemic which swept New York and other states during the autumn of 1918 placed upon the hospitals and State institutions a strain which was all but crushing. With a depleted medical staff, an unusually small number of graduate nurses and a force of domestic employees in most instances too small for the routine work of the institutions, hospitals were suddenly called upon to care for a largely increased number of patients suffering from a disease whose severity required the best of medical and nursing care. In many localities, emergency hospitals were opened and the available force of workers distributed where they could be most effective. That thousands of lives were saved by the extraordinary efforts of the permanent and emergency hospitals is evident to those familiar with their achievements in this crisis. Information which has come to us since the passing of the crest of the epidemic has given eloquent testimony to the devotion which cost so many lives of doctors, nurses and volunteer workers. There seems, however, to have been some gain amid so great a loss. Communities heretofore indifferent to proper provision for the care of the sick have awakened to its importance and it is probable that some of the emergency hospitals may be permanently continued as general hospitals.

STATE INSTITUTIONS

NEW YORK STATE HOSPITAL FOR THE CARE OF CRIPPLED AND DEFORMED CHILDREN

West Haverstraw, Rockland County

President Board of Managers: Mr. George Blagden, 56 Wall street, New York City.

Secretary: Auguste M. Thiery, 93 Nassau street, New York City.

Superintendent and Surgeon-in-Chief: John J. Nutt, M. D., West Haverstraw.

This institution exists for the treatment of children, residents of the State of New York, who are crippled or deformed or suffering from diseases from which they are likely to become crippled or deformed. Only those whose condition is such as to indicate that a reasonable amount of relief may be afforded by proper surgical treatment are admitted. The present capacity is about 150 which will be increased to approximately 200 when the main hospital building, now under construction, is fully completed and occupied. During the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, a total of 201 children received 49,000 days of treatment. The average population was about 134, a marked increase since the last fiscal year when the average population was 113. The hospital draws its patients from all sections of the State, a total of forty counties having been represented during the past year.

The extensive geographical distribution of the patients is in part due to the fact that it has become generally known throughout the State that one of the best places for the treatment of children who have suffered from infantile paralysis is to be found at this hospital, since the reconstruction of these children and the restoration of function require the element of time. Neglected children who have acquired deformities may be quickly relieved of the deformities, but they are likely to return unless they are kept under surgical care until function is established and protection provided against recurrence.

When a patient arrives at this hospital, deformities are first corrected and braces are usually applied very soon. During this period such therapeutic measures as massage and passive motion are used to do what is possible to restore power. After several weeks, or possibly months, depending on the continuance of improvement, the question of operation is decided. Following the operation further muscular training is usually necessary.

Since the opening of the hospital in its present location in 1908, 589 children have been admitted, and of these, 445 have been discharged. The results of treatment as shown by the following table are interesting:

Cured, 144; improved, 260; unimproved or ineligible, 16; taken by parent, 6; transferred to St. Luke's Hospital, 2; died, 17. Total, 445.

In obtaining these excellent results patients have, on an average,

NEW HOSPITAL BUILDING, NEW YORK STATE HOSPITAL FOR THE CARE OF CRIPPLED AND DEFORMED CHILDREN,

been cared for about one year and nine months. A special feature is the Out-Patient Department which has an average attendance of about ten patients a week and receives the personal attention of the Surgeon-in-Chief. Since the epidemic of infantile paralysis two years ago, this department of the hospital work has increased to some extent.

Commendable progress has been made in the provision of additional buildings and equipment. The new hospital building for which appropriations were made in 1915, 1916 and 1917 is now practically completed and is partly occupied by patients. The laundry building has also been completed and will be put in use as soon as the necessary equipment has been installed. The installation of equipment for heating the solaria has progressed during the year and will, it is expected, be continued and a contract has been let for additional artesian wells which will improve the water supply.

The completion of the new hospital building marks an important step in the progress of this institution, and calls for more than passing comment. Most of the buildings heretofore in use have been of light temporary construction, while the new building is a substantial two-story brick structure of attractive design. A single large ward designed for forty beds is on each of the two floors and adjacent to it is a solarium of sufficient capacity so that all patients may be cared for out of doors. Special provision has been made for the operating and X-ray departments and much new equipment purchased. The rooms for the resident physician and for nurses meet a need which has for some time been keenly felt. The Board has pleasure in reporting the practical completion of this important addition to the facilities of one of the State charitable institutions.

NEW YORK STATE HOSPITAL FOR THE TREATMENT OF INCIPIENT PULMONARY TUBERCULOSIS

Raybrook, Essex County

President Board of Trustees: John Hurley, Little Falls.

Secretary: Mrs. Bessie Boasburg, 129 Delaware avenue, Buffalo.

Superintendent: Albert H. Garvin, M. D.

This hospital was founded for the purpose of giving those afflicted with tuberculosis in an early stage an opportunity to recover and up to the present time it is the only State hospital primarily for the treatment of this disease. Its location in the Adirondacks has been found to be particularly beneficial.

The present capacity of the hospital is 320 patients and the average number present during the year was 302. In this period 740 patients were cared for at an average weekly per capita cost of $10.94, including value of home and farm products consumed. Eleven patients died and 399 were otherwise discharged. In a commendable effort recently made to ascertain the present condition of discharged patients, the statistics gathered show an encouraging result in the number of former patients who are living and doing well.

During the autumn of 1917 several cases of typhoid fever developed at the hospital and of these two died. For several years mention has been made of the unsuitability of the sewage disposal system. Temporary relief had been given by repairs to the plant about two years ago but during the past year conditions have again been reported to be unsatisfactory. An offensive odor is sometimes noticeable about the buildings and especially along the State road while the sludge at times overflows into the small brook and becomes deposited along its banks. Reports on this condition have been made by engineers of the State Department of Health and recommendations involving considerable reconstruction suggested. The Board regrets, however, that no appropriation has yet been provided to make these recommendations effective. In addition to improvement in the sewage disposal plant, other needs are additional storage room for supplies and an interior telephone equipment.

In the absence of Dr. Albert H. Garvin, superintendent of the hospital, who has been in service with the American Expeditionary Forces in France during most of the year, his place has been taken by Dr. Harry A. Bray. The shortage of domestic employees which has been so trying in other hospitals has in part been met by utilizing the services of discharged patients.

PUBLIC HOSPITALS OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK

The public hospital work carried on by the city of New York is conducted by four separate and distinct departments, acting for the most part, independently of each other. There is, therefore, likely to be overlapping of function and work which might be eliminated were the management of all the hospitals conducted by the city placed under a single department or head. This suggestion has been repeatedly proposed but no progress towards its accomplishment seems to have been made. The total number of beds is more than 10,000, of which approximately half are under the control of the Department of Public Charities. A brief statement with reference to the several hospitals administered by the four departments is submitted herewith:

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC CHARITIES

In addition to the other work of the Department of Public Charities, nine hospitals are maintained. Of these, two are located in the Borough of Manhattan, one in the Bronx, one on Staten Island, and five in Brooklyn. Even before the present war, the hospitals were experiencing difficulty in securing qualified employees willing to accept domestic and other positions at the low wages offered. This condition has naturally been accentuated at the present time. While there has been some advance in the wages paid employees of the hospital helper class, considerably higher pay must be given if a proper number of suitable grade is to be secured. The effort made throughout the country to increase the number of pupil nurses, seems to have improved the situation in this respect in some hospitals of the department.

METROPOLITAN HOSPITAL

The Metropolitan and City Hospitals, located respectively at the north and south ends of Blackwell's Island, care principally for patients from the Boroughs of Manhattan and Bronx. The Metropolitan Hospital, with a capacity for 1,864 beds, is by far the largest hospital of the department. Although in the past it has at times been overcrowded the present census is much below its capacity. During the past year some improvements have been made, including the installation of a new fire alarm system, the removal of the school to the solarium of the east pavilion, and purchase of modern food trucks. The installation of fire walls and doors, accomplished last year in the main hospital, has been extended to the employees' dormitories. The buildings need repairs, some of which are already contemplated. The great diversity in the character of patients and kind of cases treated at this hospital makes efficient administration difficult. As soon as practicable, children and tuberculosis patients should be removed to special institutions designed for their care, leaving this hospital for general work, especially the care of chronic cases for which because of its location it is particularly well suited.

CITY HOSPITAL

The City Hospital is a smaller institution than the Metropolitan, having a capacity for 992 patients. Notable recent improvements include the installation of the fire alarm system, equipment of a room for dental work, the provision of a special building for the use of the Bureau of Dependent Children, an increase in the ward space by the utilization of the old chapel for this purpose, and occupational work for certain classes of girls. Among the important needs are better day rooms and balconies for the use of convalescent patients; renewal of the plumbing in some parts of the building and a more substantial maternity pavilion of modern fireproof construction.

A nine-story central storehouse adjacent to the Queensborough bridge is being so constructed as to provide freight and passenger elevators connecting the Island with the bridge above. The completion of this improvement will make the institutions on Blackwell's Island more accessible and among other advantages will provide for the humane and rapid transportation of patients between their homes and the hospitals, greater convenience for physicians, employees and visitors, increased fire protection and better control of supplies.

PELHAM BAY HOME FOR MOTHERS AND BABIES

The Pelham Bay Home for Mothers and Babies, opened in 1913, occupies a building in Pelham Bay Park in the Bronx, the use of which is granted the Department of Public Charities by the Park Department. This hospital is intended for the care and treatment of convalescent mothers and their children and receives its patients from the hospitals of the department or directly from other institutions and agencies. With the present capacity of 27 beds for women and 22 cribs for babies, the average length of stay is only about two weeks. The Home is beautifully situated on a slight elevation in the park, and seems to provide good facilities for the limited purpose for which it is intended. The building, however, is somewhat out of repair and needs especially additional bathing facilities. No appropriation for its maintenance has been requested for the coming year and its closing would therefore seem to be contemplated.

KINGS COUNTY HOSPITAL

The five hospitals of the Department of Public Charities located in the Borough of Brooklyn are conducted under the supervision of a general medical superintendent for that borough. Of these hospitals the most important is the Kings County Hospital located on Clarkson Avenue. It now has a capacity for 1,013 beds and in addition maintains an ambulance service covering a large territory. Work on the new laundry building has proceeded slowly during the year, and the installation of laundry machinery is under way. Larger water pipes have been installed, thereby improving the pressure throughout the main building. Construction work and the improvement of the plant have not recently kept pace with its numerous needs. While some buildings, such as the children's building and the west wing, are modern, the main hospital is old and generally unsuitable for hospital purposes; the wards being deficient in light and ventilation, the service rooms inadequate, the toilets and lavatories inconveniently located and the building worn and needing interior and exterior renovation. The operating room is not modern in arrangement and lacks proper service facilities. The defects of this building are so serious that they can be remedied only by the erection of a modern and well equipped structure. Other needs are improved accommodations for employees and nurses and a new incinerator of a modern type.

BRADFORD STREET HOSPITAL

The Bradford Street Hospital, 113 Bradford street, is a branch of the Kings County Hospital, practically consisting at present of a dispensary and an ambulance station. The 16 beds provided for patients are little used since in recent years patients have seldom been treated at this hospital, but have been transferred by ambulance to the Kings County Hospital, a distance of over four miles. The sections of the city lying about this hospital are well populated and lack hospital facilities. Unless these are to be at once elsewhere provided this hospital should receive repairs and renovation.

CUMBERLAND STREET HOSPITAL

The Cumberland Street Hospital, 109 Cumberland street, having a capacity of about 200, has been placed at the disposal of the United States government and is now used for the care of patients sent there by the Navy Department. The administration, however, still remains with the Department of Public Charities. The construction of the new building of the hospital, located on another site in the vicinity, is well under way. The defects of the old structure are such that they can not well be remedied.

CONEY ISLAND HOSPITAL

The Coney Island Hospital located on Ocean Parkway, Coney Island, has capacity for 125 patients. It has an extensive ambulance service and is conducted primarily to care for accident and other emergency cases arising from the great numbers who frequent this resort. Patients are to be transferred to Kings County and other hospitals as soon as their condition permits. The buildings occupied are of recent construction and are generally satisfactory for the purpose for which they are used.

GREENPOINT HOSPITAL

Greenpoint Hospital is the newest of the hospitals, conducted by this department in Brooklyn. It is located at Kingsland avenue and has capacity for 236 patients and the buildings are in general well constructed. Important needs, however, are a reception ward for children, better furnishings in the nurses' home, and improvement in the kitchen.

SEA VIEW HOSPITAL

Sea View Hospital at Castleton Corners, Staten Island, is one of the largest hospitals for tuberculosis in the United States. Its present capacity of 759 is to be largely increased on the completion of twenty-three additional buildings for ambulatory patients, now being erected on the property acquired two years ago. The new buildings are arranged in two distinct groups, one for the men and another for the women, and provide recreation halls and facilities not heretofore available. For some time negotiations have been under way looking to the use of part of the plant by the Federal Government as a reconstruction hospital for soldiers. These negotiations are said to be progressing satisfactorily and it is probable that the new buildings together with part of the present plant will be taken over. The tuberculosis patients now under treatment at Sea View will, however, probably be retained there.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF BELLEVUE AND ALLIED HOSPITALS

The hospitals administered by this department are five in number, namely: Bellevue, Gouverneur, Harlem, Fordham, and Neponsit Beach, and have a combined capacity for more than 2,500 patients. With the exception of the last named, they carry on extensive emergency ambulance service and maintain large dispensaries.

BELLEVUE HOSPITAL

Bellevue Hospital, First avenue and 26th street, Manhattan, had when last inspected 1,741 beds. These are reserved for the treatment of acute diseases and special departments are maintained for alcoholic patients and the detention and examination of persons supposed to be insane. On the whole there has been little change in Bellevue Hospital during the past year. The extensive building improvements contemplated have necessarily been deferred because of war conditions. The new pavilions have, however, been provided to such an extent that less than a third of the patients are cared for in the old buildings. In common with other institutions, Bellevue has suffered greatly from the lack of nurses and employees and the proper serving of food is particularly difficult because of the old, inadequate and unsuitable kitchen. Lack of employees has also made it difficult to make needed repairs. The dispensary department, one of the largest and most important in the country, is not provided with the buildings and equipment which its size and the varied character of its work require. With favorable conditions the reconstruction of this hospital according to plans formulated some years ago should be continued.

GOUVERNEUR HOSPITAL

Gouverneur Hospital, Gouverneur Slip, Manhattan, has a capacity for 190 patients and frequently exceeds this capacity by placing cots in wards. The new well-planned, brick dispensary building which provides unusual and excellent facilities for carrying on this branch of hospital work has been completed and in part occupied. When conditions are again normal, the improved dispensary service which has long been needed will be possible. The reconstruction of the Boat Camp Huddleston is finished and will afford good facilities for the treatment of children. In the hospital itself there has been little change and the additional space for storage and modern provision for the accommodation of nurses and employees are still urgently needed.

HARLEM HOSPITAL

Harlem Hospital, Lenox avenue and 136th street, Manhattan, has including the porches a capacity for about 350 beds. There is in this section of the city a large population who would naturally seek a municipal hospital, hence considerable overcrowding occurs at times, particularly in the nursery connected with the maternity ward. The buildings occupied are generally modern but are insufficient to provide adequately for the needs of the locality. The ambulance service of this hospital is very active and a large dispensary is maintained.

FORDHAM HOSPITAL

Fordham Hospital with a capacity of 217 beds is located in the northern section of the Borough of the Bronx, facing Bronx Park. Since the population of the portion of the city in which it is located is rapidly growing, the facilities of the hospital have been greatly overtaxed by the number of patients cared for. At one time in February there were in the hospital as many as 276 patients of whom 142 were women. Of these 57 were cared for in a single ward, the capacity of which is 30. Buildings are generally in good condition but should be greatly enlarged to provide for the care of additional patients. In an effort to relieve the situation the Trustees have requested an immediate issue of revenue bonds in the sum of $40,000 for the construction of five wooden ward buildings with an average capacity of twenty-six beds each. This request has been approved by the Board of Aldermen.

NEPONSIT BEACH HOSPITAL FOR CHILDREN

Neponsit Beach Hospital for Children is maintained for the care and treatment of those suffering from tuberculosis in its non-pulmonary forms. It is located between the ocean and Jamaica Bay near the south end of Rockaway Beach, a site which seems excellent for the purpose. Buildings have a present capacity for 134 patients and provide generally suitable facilities for their care. A building for employees is needed in order to release for the care of patients wards now occupied by adult employees.

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH

The hospitals maintained by this department are for the treatment of persons suffering from communicable disease and according to inspection reports provide 2,455 beds, nearly half of them for tuberculosis patients. Of those for tuberculosis the principal one is the Municipal Sanatorium at Otisville, designed for the care and treatment of favorable cases in which improvement may reasonably be expected. Here as elsewhere administration has been hampered by the lack of physicians, nurses and employees but numerous improvements in the plant have been accomplished. Among these may be mentioned the erection of a new pavilion called "Wilson Hall" at the male unit and progress in the erection of a staff house. Probably the principal need of the hospital is a properly equipped central infirmary to which those confined to their beds may be removed.

The other large institution for tuberculosis, Riverside Hospital, is, we are informed, to be taken over by the United States Government together with the whole of North Brother Island, on which it is situated. During the past year the new pavilion for venereal diseases and the new women's dormitory have been completed and occupied. At the Queensboro Hospital for contagious diseases a much needed sewage disposal system has been installed. There has been practically no change during the year at the Willard Parker Hospital, Manhattan, the largest of the hospitals of the Department. Since the entrance of the United States into the war more than eight thousand soldiers and sailors have been cared for in the three hospitals last named but principally in the Willard Parker Hospital, one pavilion of which has been set aside for their exclusive use.

THE BOARD OF INEBRIETY

For several years the Board of Inebriety has maintained at Warwick, Orange County, N. Y., an institution known as the New York City Farms, intended for the care, custody and treatment of inebriates and drug addicts who were received on their own application or committed by the courts. The property is 667 acres in extent but has been as yet only partially developed agriculturally. Bed capacity for about 75 inmates has been provided but the old buildings are in poor repair while the new ones are of light temporary construction not well suited to the purposes intended. During the past year the population has been low, at times less than half of the capacity and the proportion of alcoholics is decreasing. The closing of the institution, which has been experimental, is contemplated and patients are not now being received. It ought not to be continued without the expenditure of considerable money for buildings and improvements.

PUBLIC HOSPITALS OUTSIDE OF NEW YORK CITY

In a number of the cities outside of New York, general or special hospitals are maintained by the municipality for the benefit of the residents of that city. General hospitals are now maintained by the following cities: Binghamton, Jamestown, Buffalo, North Tonawanda, Lockport, Oneida, Utica, and Fulton. In addition, Oneida County maintains a hospital managed separately from the poor department of the county.

The opening of the new Buffalo City Hospital is of particular interest. The property includes 83 acres of land located on the outskirts of the city but within the city limits. The buildings, opened for the reception of patients on May 19, 1918, were erected at a cost of about $1,250,000, and form one section of what is expected to be a very large general hospital. At first only tuberculosis and psychopathic cases were received, but following the fire in the Erie County Hospital, and by arrangement with the county authorities, a number of acute cases of various kinds are now being cared for. Completion of this institution marks an important step in the provision of an adequate hospital system for the city of Buffalo.

TUBERCULOSIS HOSPITALS

The prevalence of this disease and its relation to poverty and dependence both as a cause and as an effect make it a matter of special interest to the State Board of Charities. In its work the Board is concerned principally with the institutional side of the anti-tuberculosis campaign, that is with the hospitals, sanatoria and dispensaries. Mention has been made elsewhere in the report of this committee regarding the work of the State Hospital at Raybrook, certain municipal hospitals and the dispensaries. In addition particular interest attaches to the work for infants recently organized at the Tuberculosis Preventorium for Children located at Farmingdale, N. J., but receiving its children from New York City. Heretofore there has been no New York institution receiving infants who had not contracted the disease but who had been exposed to infection because of their intimate association with tuberculous parents. While only twelve cribs are available for this purpose, the results obtained in the last two years show the possibilities of preventing the infection of young children.

Our last report called attention to the passage of chapter 469 of the Laws of 1917 amending the County Law and requiring that every county in the State containing a population of 35,000 or more at the time of the last State census shall establish a county hospital for tuberculosis except in those cases in which satisfactory provision approved by the State Commissioner of Health has otherwise been made. Progress during the year in compliance with this law has been good when the difficulties caused by the war are considered. The hospitals in Chemung, Chenango, Niagara, Otsego and Steuben Counties have been completed and opened for the care of patients. Construction is well advanced in Broome, Nassau, Rensselaer and Rockland Counties while in Chautauqua, Delaware and Columbia counties the buildings have been begun. In Allegany County a site has been secured and plans for buildings are in preparation.

In addition to the construction of hospitals for tuberculosis, the County Law requires that the boards of managers of these hospitals shall employ a county nurse. A recent computation by the Tuberculosis Committee of the State Charities Aid Association shows that there are 142 nurses employed in the State outside of New York City who are devoting the whole or a part of their time to anti-tuberculosis work. This number represents an increase of 23 during the year of whom nine are employed by boards of managers under the law mentioned above.

PRIVATE HOSPITALS

The largest single group of hospitals under the supervision of the Board are those privately controlled but under its supervision because of the fact that public charges are received. The reception and retention of inmates in these hospitals is governed by rules established by the Board and previously mentioned in this report. In the report of last year attention was called to the fact that before the war a large number of hospitals had plans for the construction of new buildings, for additions to existing ones or their remodeling. The difficulty in obtaining labor and building material and the high cost of construction mentioned then as controlling factors have become increasingly matters of moment. During the year, however, many important improvements have been made. In Buffalo, the Buffalo General

MARY McCLELLAN HOSPITAL, CAMBRIDGE, N. Y., COMPLETED IN 1918

REAR VIEW

Hospital has completed a large pavilion for private patients and a modern nurses' home, and is proceeding with the construction of an additional building to connect existing pavilions. In Syracuse, a large addition to the Hospital of the Good Shepherd has been finished and occupied and a new wing has been added to the Crouse-Irving Hospital. Construction of additions to the Aurelia Osborn Fox Hospital at Oneonta and the Amsterdam City Hospital at Amsterdam have proceeded. The new building of the Thanksgiving Hospital at Cooperstown is practically completed and will, it is expected, be used for the care of sick and disabled soldiers. In 1917 the Board approved plans for a fireproof building of modern design to be erected by the Mary McClellan Hospital, Cambridge, N. Y. This building has recently been completed and occupied. By its completion a village of less than two thousand inhabitants remote from a large city is provided with hospital facilities of a sort usually found only in the centers of population. Its effect on the health of the community will be watched with interest.

During the fiscal year the private hospitals reporting gave 5,739,718 days of care to 353,491 patients. While the number of patients is slightly more than last year, the number of days of treatment is less. The average length of stay of each patient is also less, being 13 days as against 17 days last year. The average daily census of patients is 15,884 which is considerably lower than last year.

DISPENSARIES

Few of our social institutions are increasing in number and importance more rapidly than the dispensaries. According to the 1916 report of the committee on dispensary work of the American Hospital Association, the number of dispensaries in the United States as estimated after a postcard census was as follows:

General dispensaries and out-patient departments.....	900
Special dispensaries and out-patient departments.....	100
Public Health dispensaries.....	1,300

In addition to these, Davis and Warner in their recent book entitled "Dispensaries" state that there are between 300 and 500 industrial dispensaries in the United States and that the total number of dispensaries is approximately 3,000. It has also been estimated that three million to four million persons a year receive treatment in these institutions. In this State as elsewhere in the country the number of dispensaries has steadily increased so that at the close of the fiscal year there were 213 licensed dispensaries, an increase of twelve. As illustrating the growth of the dispensaries, it is interesting to note that there were in this State ten years ago only 127 dispensaries. During this decade, therefore, the number of dispensaries has increased by 86, representing an increase of 68 per cent.

The dispensaries at these two periods may be classified according to function as follows:

DISPENSARIES	1918		1908
	Number	Per cent of total	Number	Per cent of total
General.....	113	53	100	79
Tuberculosis.....	30	14	8	2
Dental.....	16	8	1	1
Other special.....	54	25	23	18
Totals.....	213	100	127	100

This table shows how important has been the increase in special dispensaries particularly tuberculosis and dental. These special dispensaries are for the most part conducted by Boards of Health, the New York City Department of Health alone holding at present 34 dispensary licenses. It is interesting to note also the relationship of the dispensaries to general hospitals shown by the following table:

	1918		1908
	Number	Per cent of total	Number	Percent of total
Out-patient departments of hospitals.....	97	46	82	65

All these facts indicate that the character of dispensaries is changing, in that the small independent dispensaries, usually those doing public health work, are occupying a much larger place than formerly both as regards the number of institutions and the number of persons treated.

REVISION OF DISPENSARY RULES

Having in mind the changing conditions in dispensaries and their work, the division superintendent has, under the direction of the committee, proceeded during the year with the proposed revision of the dispensary rules mention of which was made in our last report. Opinions with reference to the present rules and needed changes were first obtained from representative dispensary administrative officers and the operation of each of the rules then in force was carefully examined. At a meeting of the Board held June 5, 1918, new rules were adopted to become effective on July 1, 1918. The principal changes may be summarized as follows:

Rule I. There has been added a requirement that the license certificate issued by this Board be posted in the dispensary waiting-room. It seemed advisable that evidence showing that the dispensary has been licensed in the manner provided by law should appear in the waiting-room for the information of the public. While the requirement as to the posting of a public notice furnished by this Board and having as its object the information of applicants regarding the social classes which may be treated in the dispensary has been continued, its wording has been somewhat changed at the suggestion of dispensary officers.

Rule III has been amended by adding to the classes of persons who may be admitted in the discretion of the registrar, that is without reference to their ability to pay a physician, those received for the treatment of communicable disease. This provision was inserted because of the recognition on the part of the committee that in certain diseases, notably tuberculosis and venereal diseases, the public health aspect is controlling and should govern the method of dealing with each case. As heretofore there is no restriction on the treatment of emergent cases and those admitted for purposes of clinical instruction. In the same rule it is now definitely required that all applicants not falling into the classes mentioned shall be questioned as to their ability to pay a physician or dentist for the treatment required. A minimum of questioning is provided by the admission card outlined at the beginning of Rule IV. This card remains in substance as heretofore although the arrangement of items has been changed.

In Rule IV the present rules omit a requirement as to the provision of the so-called "representation card." Because of the numbers to be admitted or for other reasons few dispensaries made effective use of this card and it seems desirable that the decision as to the amount of social data of this sort which should be collected had best be left to the discretion of the dispensary managers. Two new records are, however, required by this rule — one giving results of treatment so far as they can be obtained and the other a record of the attendance of physicians and dentists. From the reports of our inspectors and from our own observation of these institutions we have become increasingly aware of the importance of ascertaining and recording the "end result" of the efforts of the dispensary to cure the disease or injury from which the patient is suffering. It is still true that in the great majority of dispensaries the attending physicians contribute their services without pay and this being so, it is difficult to compel that regularity of attendance which is essential for the proper treatment of patients. A record of the time of arrival and of departure of each physician is therefore of particular importance both for his protection and for the information of the managers.

In Rule V it is now required that a woman shall be present at obstetrical as well as gynecological examinations. This change is the more necessary because of the increasing amount of prenatal work in connection with the "Children's Year" now in progress. Because of the recent enactments of Congress relative to the dispensing of habit-forming drugs it is now required in Rule VI that the pharmacy shall conform to the laws of the United States applicable thereto. Rule VII now requires that all dispensaries receiving and treating cases of pulmonary tuberculosis shall provide nursing service. The supervisions of cases by a nurse has come to be regarded as essential in the treatment of this disease through a public agency.

A more general and accurate compliance with these rules and readiness on the part of dispensaries to remedy omissions called to the attention of the managers are reported.

ROCHESTER DENTAL DISPENSARY

In a preceding paragraph mention was made of the opening of several dispensaries during the year. Of these the Rochester Dental Dispensary of Rochester is of particular interest. At a meeting of the State Board of Charities held on October 9, 1918, Commissioner Marquand offered the following minute and resolution which were unanimously adopted.

"During the recent trip for the purpose of visiting and inspecting institutions made by President Stewart and myself, we visited the Rochester Dental Dispensary, located at 800 Main street east, Rochester. As members of the Board will recall, the State Board of Charities approved the incorporation of the Rochester Dental Dispensary on October 13, 1915, after a careful examination of the merits of the proposed enterprise. Following this incorporation, a building in which the dispensary is now conducted was erected by Mr. George Eastman of Rochester at an expense of more than $300,000. The work of the dispensary is generously backed in a financial way by Mr. Eastman and by the members of the Board of Directors. An appropriation of $20,000 is made annually by the city of Rochester for the work of the dental hygienists in caring for the teeth of children in the public schools but no part of this appropriation is applied to the support of the dispensary.

"The plant in which the work is carried on is a remarkable one in every way. Not only is the space ample, the construction such as to make possible the best sanitary conditions, but the equipment is of the most modern and approved type. Details of the plant are given in the reports of the Board's inspectors and I will simply say at this time that the dispensary is provided with every convenience which will promote the efficiency of its work.

"For the present the work is confined to the dental treatment of school children. From the opening of the dispensary on October 15, 1917 to the end of the State fiscal year on June 30, 1918, 5,171 patients made 37,382 visits to the dispensary. The treatments given include whatever may be necessary for the remedying of defective mouth conditions. A very important allied work is the treatment given in the public schools by the dental hygienists who are trained at this dispensary. During the same period these dental hygienists lectured in the public schools to 37,341 children and cleaned the teeth of 33,664.

"Of particular interest is the school for dental hygienists conducted by this dispensary under the provisions of a law passed in 1916. Since that time about 80 young women have been graduated and many are employed in dental offices, in public school work and recently under the direction of the War Department in prophylactic work in hospitals for soldiers. It is a matter of especial pride that New York State was the first to recognize in a legal way the value of the work of dental hygienists.

"I feel that the State Board of Charities should give to this unusual charity more than usual recognition. The importance of proper treatment of defective mouth conditions in remedying diseases and promoting health is now clearly understood. In carrying out this work the Rochester Dental Dispensary has the benefit of an excellent plant and the work seems to be conducted with the utmost efficiency.

"Therefore, be it resolved that the State Board of Charities hereby expresses to Mr. Eastman, the founder, and to the board of directors of the Rochester Dental Dispensary, its appreciation of the unusual and very excellent work now being carried on for the benefit of the children of the city of Rochester and be it further resolved that a copy of this minute be sent to Mr. Eastman and to the board of directors."

REVOCATION OF DISPENSARY LICENSE

Reports of its inspectors having shown persistent violation of the rules of the Board on the part of the New York Eye and Ear Clinic located at 259 East Fourth street, Manhattan, the managers of that dispensary were summoned to appear before the Board to show cause why its license should not be revoked in the manner provided by section 293 of the Dispensary Law. Since those who appeared did not convince the committee that they possessed the power to remedy the unsatisfactory conditions complained of, the Board by an order dated February 27, 1918 revoked the license issued to this dispensary.

STATISTICS

The number of dispensaries in operation during the year ending June 30, 1918 and their distribution are shown by the following table:

These statistics indicate that both the number of persons treated and the number of treatments are slightly less than last year which itself showed a decrease over the preceding year. This decrease is, however largely confined to the borough of Manhattan, the other boroughs of New York City and the dispensaries outside of New York showing slight change. On the whole there is no marked change in the amount of dispensary relief given.

CLASSIFICATION

At the meetings of the committee which are usually held monthly, reports not before considered are presented by the division superintendent and are classified by the committee unless special considerations make it seem inadvisable to attempt such classification. Reports are divided into three classes as to plant and as to administration. Those placed in Class I show no defects or defects so minor as not greatly to lessen the efficiency of the institution. In Class II are placed reports which show defects of importance but less serious than those of Class III, which is the lowest class. Having made the classification, appropriate action with reference to institutions whose reports are in the lower classes is decided on by the committee. The following tables show the results of such classification as regards hospitals and dispensaries for the last fiscal year and the fiscal year five years previous. The Board is pleased to note the increased proportion of institutions placed in Class I.

SOME EDUCATIONAL MOVEMENTS IN THE FIELD OF CHARITABLE WORK

THE FORTY-FIFTH NATIONAL CONFERENCE OF SOCIAL WORK

The National Conference of Social Work, formerly the National Conference of Charities and Correction, held its forty-fifth annual session in Kansas City, Missouri, May 15-22, 1918. The President of the Conference was Mr. Robert A. Woods, who has for several years been head of the South End House, Boston.

The subject of the presidential address was "The Regimentation of the Free," and the discussions of the Conference included the subjects of "Children," "Delinquents and Correction," "Health," "Public Agencies and Institutions," "The Family," "Industrial and Economic Problems," "The Local Community," "Mental Hygiene," "Organization of Social Forces" and "Social Problems of the War and Reconstruction." The State Board of Charities was represented at this Conference by the Secretary, who read a paper on "State Boards of Charities in War Time."

Miss Julia Lathrop, Chief of the Children's Bureau, United States Department of Labor, Washington, D. C., was elected for the presidency of the Forty-Sixth Conference which will convene at Atlantic City, N. J., June 2-9, 1919.

At the National Conference for the Education of Truant, Backward, Dependent and Delinquent Children held at the same place and immediately preceding the above Conference, the State Board of Charities was also represented by the Secretary, who presented a paper on "What Institutions Have Learned From the War." This Conference has been in existence about twelve years and was organized for the purpose of bringing together institution superintendents and affording them an opportunity to discuss such questions as are of immediate interest to them. The President of this Conference for the coming year is Hobart H. Todd, Superintendent of the State Agricultural and Industrial School, Industry, N. Y., and the Secretary-Treasurer, Charles H. Johnson, Secretary of the State Board of Charities, Albany, N. Y.

NINETEENTH NEW YORK STATE CONFERENCE OF CHARITIES AND CORRECTION

The Nineteenth New York State Conference of Charities and Correction held its sessions at Rochester, December 10-12, 1918. The Conference had been postponed from the usual November date owing to the prevalence of the influenza epidemic. Mr. Charles H. Johnson, Secretary of the State Board of Charities, Albany, N. Y., was the President.

The sessions were unusually well attended notwithstanding the enforced absence of many social workers who were still engaged in some form of national service. The subject of the presidential address was "Winning the Child." Several of the sessions were devoted to the discussion of problems closely related to questions of reconstruction. An unusual feature was the closing session which was a demonstration of community singing. Papers were read on "Delinquency," "Mental Hygiene and Mental Defect," "Physical Defectives," "Home Care and Relief," "Children" and "Recreation."

The State Board of Charities, as usual, held its monthly meeting at the seat of the Conference and at the same time. All the Commissioners, with one exception, attended both the meeting and the Conference, and many members of the Board's staff attended the Conference.

Rev. Dr. Augustine M. O'Neill, of Rochester, was elected for the presidency for the year 1919 and Syracuse was chosen as the place of next meeting. Mr. Richard W. Wallace, of the State Board of Charities, continues as Secretary.

THE FORTY-EIGHTH ANNUAL CONVENTION OF COUNTY SUPERINTENDENTS OF THE POOR

This Convention is the oldest in length of continuous annual sessions of any in the State and perhaps of any in the country. It has afforded an opportunity for the men who are engaged in the actual dispensing of relief to the poor in the cities and counties of the State to exchange experiences and present new points of view whereby better administrative methods may be adopted. The President of the Convention was Mr. C. A. Stone, Superintendent of the poor of Oswego County, and the sessions were held at Alexandria Bay, June 25-27, 1918.

The President of the Convention for the year 1919 is Mr. George Clark, Superintendent of the Poor of Chemung County, and the sessions will be held at Shelter Island, Suffolk County, late in the month of June, 1919.

THE NINTH NEW YORK CITY CONFERENCE OF CHARITIES AND CORRECTION

The Ninth New York City Conference of Charities and Correction held its sessions in New York City May 8 and 9, 1918. As usual the sessions were divided between New York, Brooklyn and an institution adjacent to the city. The institution which acted as host this year was the Leake and Watts Orphan House, Yonkers.

Like all other Conferences held at this time, the subjects which were of greatest interest were those relating to the effect of the war on social work. Mr. Edmond J. Butler, of New York City, was the President of the Conference.

Hon. Franklin Chase Hoyt, Judge of the Children's Court, was elected President for the coming year. Mr. George C. Rowell, of the staff of the State Board of Charities, was elected Secretary.

SIXTH CAPITAL DISTRICT CONFERENCE OF CHARITIES AND CORRECTION

The Sixth Capital District Conference of Charities and Correction was held at its usual meeting place at the Ten Eyck Hotel, Albany. The date of the Conference was somewhat later than has been customary owing to the fact that liberty loans and war chest drives made it inadvisable for the Conference to meet in March.

Rev. William R. Charles, of Albany, was President of the Conference and the special topic to which the sessions were devoted was that of the war and social work. Each of the five programs was related to this particular topic and discussions were held on the subjects of "Children," "Medical Charities," "Relief of the Poor," "Public Institutions," and "Correctional Problems."

The President of the Conference for the year 1919 is Miss Mary Hinkley of Poughkeepsie. Mr. Clarence E. Ford, Superintendent of the Division of Medical Charities of the State Board of Charities, Albany, is the Secretary.

SECOND ANNUAL CONFERENCE OF COUNTY BOARDS OF CHILD WELFARE

The Second Annual Conference of the members and executives of the County Boards of Child Welfare was held at Albany on January 23, 1918. As the necessity of the standardization of this new form of public relief becomes apparent such a Conference as this should be instructive and of much value.

Mr. Ward B. Edwards, Chairman of the Oneida County Board of Child Welfare, Utica, was the President of the Conference and has again been selected for the presidency for the ensuing year. The next meeting will be held in New York City, February 19, 20 and 21, 1919.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

WILLIAM R. STEWART,
President.

CHARLES H. JOHNSON,
Secretary.
